Dissident Truckers Strike

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Shots were fired at three trucks, thousands of roofing nails were scattered on at least five highways and two firebombs were seized today in strikes by dissident truckers refusing to wait for a nationwide shutdown by independent operators.

A federal judge today ordered truckers to quit using citizen band radios to keep track of vehicles carrying milk near Youngstown, Ohio, one of the hot spots in the closedown by drivers protesting high fuel prices and a lid on freight rates.

A coalition of trucking organizations has scheduled a nationwide shutdown to begin next Thursday.

Authorities said that violence in the strike by hundreds of drivers in Ohio was mounting. in Pennsylvania, where the firebombs were seized in the third day of a partial shutdown, police said they received more complaints from truckers that harassment by strikers had been stepped up.

A Lawsons milk truck was hit by gunfire three times early Saturday as it traveled on Interstate 76 at Rootstown in the Akron area. There were no injuries.

A Lawsons spokesman said members of the Independent Council of Truckers had picketed the Akron warehouse after store officials refused to shut down their fleet of 110 trucks that supply more than 700 stores in four states.

Hundreds of other trucks have been pulled off Ohio highways in the protest.

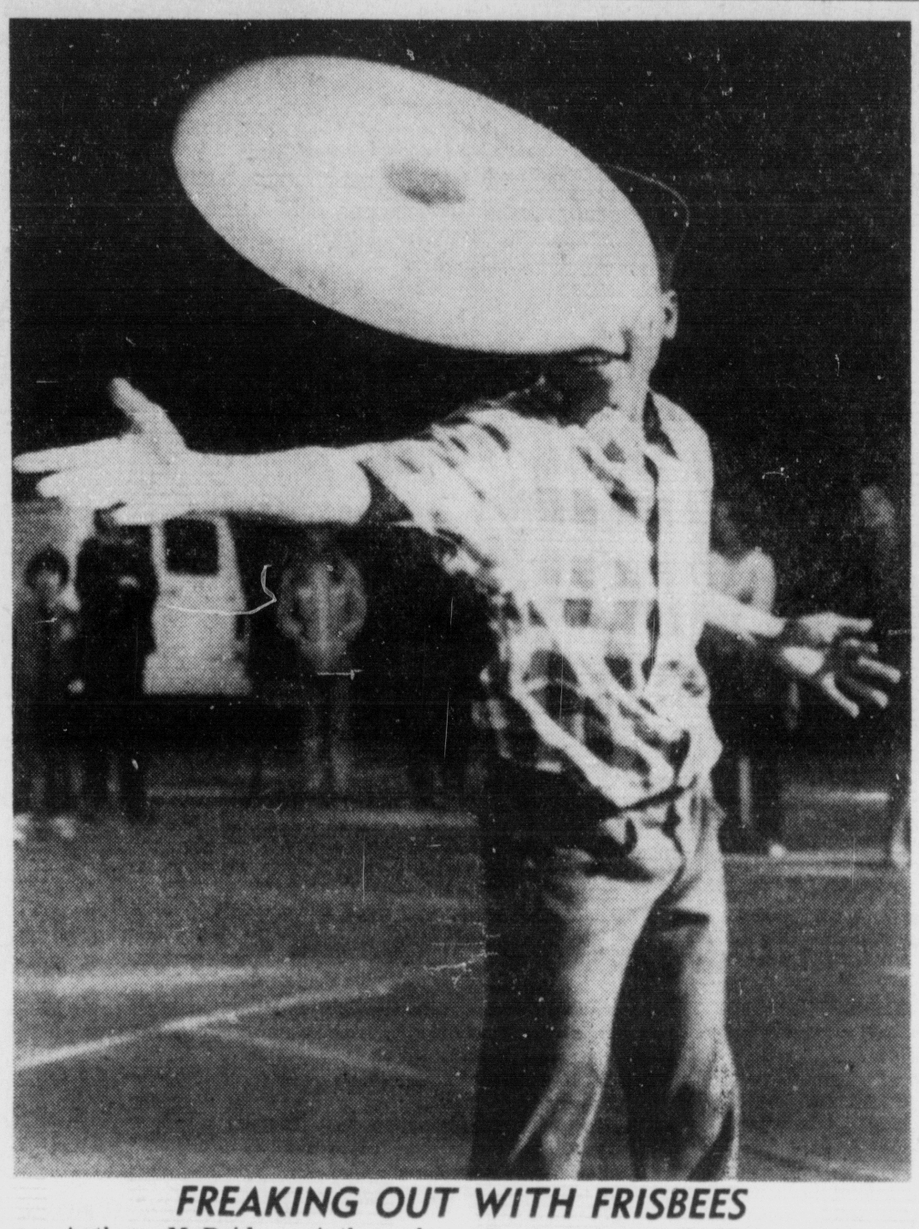

A driver was struck by pieces of metal fragments when bullets tore through the grill of his truck as he drove through Youngstown late Friday night, and gunshots shattered the widnshield of another truck traveling on Interstate 271.

Roofing nails were spread over sections of the Ohio Turnpike, Ohio 14, Ohio 5, Ohio 303 and Interstate 76. The Ohio Highway Patrol and sheriff's deputies swept up the nails but not before several trucks and cars got flat tires.

Pennsylvania State Police arrested Carl E. Leihgeber, 44, of New Galilee, Pa., for disorderly conduct Saturday when they found two firebombs at a truck stop near Beaver Falls where a strikers have picketed since Thursday.

Truckers who refused to join protestors reported they were harassed or threatened, state police said.

One drivers said the air hoses on his rig were cut two miles south of Beaver Falls, where a few truckers also were picketing.

Coal Halt Talk Grows In Britain

Union Leader Predicting A Shutdown On Feb. 10

LONDON (UPI) — Union leaders said today a national coal mine shutdown in two weeks is almost certain. They said picketing miners will prevent not only coal but all other fuel supplies from reaching power stations.

Lawrence Daly, general secretary of the mine workers union, said he has notified the Coal Board the strike will start Feb. 10.

"I have sent a letter to the Board saying that if we get a strike vote it will start Feb. 10," Daly told a cheering mass rally of 3,000 trade unionists at Edinburgh today.

"There will be mass picketing by the miners not only to stop coal but prevent other fuel reaching the power stations. We will stop not only coal production but also distribution," union vice president Mick McGahy said.

He said coal supplies at power stations, which the government this week estimated at 13.9 million tons, "will run down very quickly."

Arthur Scargill, leader of 65,000 Yorkshire coal miners, called on 10 million other trade union members to back the 269,000 coal miners.

"I hope they will come out in sympathy by striking or other industrial action," he said. He said the miners will take whatever picketing action necessary to shut down power supplies to the country.

Coal miners leaders launched a campaign in Britain's coal fields to get an overwhelming rank and file vote next week in favor of a national mine shutdown.

Leaders of the National Union of Mineworkers predicted that the miners would respond next week vote with an overwhelming majority for a strike. A 55 per cent majority is required by union rules.

Government officials said a national coal strike, coming on top of a three-month slowdown by the 269,000 coal miners, would deal a crippling blow to British industry.

The officials said a coal strike almost certainly would mean electric power blackouts, cold homes and offices, and millions laid off.

In Britain's other major industrial conflict, leaders of 29,000 railroad engineers decided to continue their six-week-old overtime ban which has disrupted rail services throughout the country.

It meant for the seventh consecutive week Britain again will have no trains Sunday. It also ruled out new peace talks with the Railways Board, which has refused to negotiate while the slowdown continues.

Faced by the prospect of a national coal shutdown, the government Friday abandoned plans to relax curbs on crisis-stricken British industry and ordered it to remain on a three-day work week.

It said the order was necessary because a coal strike would cut off most fuel supplies from power stations within 10 days. About 70 per cent of electric power in Britain comes from coal.

U.S. POPULATION

Growth Rate Slows Down

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The population of the United States grew at a slower pace in 1973 than at any time since before World War II.

The population edged up a scant 0.8 per cent to stand at 210,740,000 as of Jan. 1, from 209,123,000 a year earlier, according to Census Bureau figures released today.

The rise, which includes births, immigrants and return of servicemen from overseas while taking out deaths and emigrants, was the lowest annual increase since 1938.

And, records show, it is barely half the rate of increase the country saw in the so-called "baby boom" of 1947 to 1961 when it averaged 1.6 to 1.8 per cent annually.

Projections by the National Center for Health Statistics based on hard figures for the first 10 months of 1973 show that the birth rate for all of last year was 15 for every 1,000 people, the lowest in the nation's history.

While complete figures are not available, the small population growth and the low birth rate brought the country closer to ZPG — zero population growth.

The slowdown in population growth in 1973 was not unexpected by officials who point to a rate of below 1 per cent since 1970. The birth rate hit a low of 17.5 per 1,000 in 1968, rose slightly over the next two years and then fell back again.

But this period had at one time been expected to see sharp jumps in population because of the steady increase in the number of women of child bearing age (15 to 44 years).

The official figures were released after UPI checked population trends in every state and the District of Columbia and found that in 1973 the birth rate dropped to the lowest level since records first were kept in a number of states. The population in some cases increased at a slower pace than had been predicted by demographers—the people who keep track of such trends—only a year earlier.

But statisticians and demographers were cautious in giving reasons for the apparent halt in the baby boom.

The contraceptive pill, the economic pinch and a host of other developments such as legalized abortions were cited by different authorities as possible factors.

California and New York, the two most populous states in the nation, recorded only fractional increases in their numbers in the past year. California's population rose by 227,000 to an

Survey Shows Congress Still Not Decided On Impeachment Call

WASHINGTON (UPI) — One in eight congressmen now is ready to vote to impeach President Nixon and almost twice as many would like to see him resign.

But those members of the House who have already reached the decision that Nixon must leave office are still a small minority.

A United Press International survey, conducted late last week, shows more House members currently oppose impeachment or resignation than favor Nixon's removal from office.

But the largest number, by far, are undecided on whether Nixon should be impeached and feel the question of resignation is the President's to answer, not theirs.

UPI reached 402 of the 431 (there are 4 vacancies) House members or top aides allowed to speak for them. All participated in the survey on impeachment and 398 on replied the issue of resignatiion.

The survey showed that 55 now favor Nixon's impeachment; 87 do not; 182 are undecided; and 74 declined to comment.

The poll disclosed that 89 favor resignation; 139 do not; 48 are undecided; and 126 declined comment.

The survey was taken shortly after Congress returned from a month-long recess and as the House Judiciary Committee begins its impeachment inquiry in earnest.

Almost all of those who favor impeachment and most of those who want Nixon to resign are Democrats. But the responses crossed geographical lines with similar answers from all sections of the country.

Those willing to state their views were criticized by Rep. John E. Hunt, Jr., R-N.J.

"Any congressman who expresses himself either against impeachment or for impeachment until all the information has been produced before the Judiciary Committee should be disqualified from voting on impeachment on the floor," Hunt said.

"They are obviously biased one way or another even before they hear the testimony. Everyone is entitled to a fair trial, even a rapist or a murderer."

Many of those classifying themselves as undecided or those who did not want to comment sided with Hunt, but without criticizing their more outspoken colleagues.

They pointed out that the House would sit as a grand jury which must decide whether Nixon should be indicted and tried by the Senate. In that position, they feel it would be improper to reach a decision or coomment until all the evidence is presented by the Judiciary Committee.

Asked his feeling about impeachment, Rep. James M. Hanley, D-N.Y., said "who the hell ever heard of a grand jury

Fire Protection Area Recommended

A special taxing area should be set up to provide fire protection to unincorporated areas around San Rafael, County Administrator John F. Barrows recommended yesterday.

Barrows's recommendation, the result of last October's flap between the city and county, will be considered Tuesday by county supervisors. The board will meet at 9 a.m. at the Civic Center.

The county administrator said he will ask supervisors to place formation of a county service area before voters in June. The first step would be to get approval from the Marin Local Agency Formation Commission.

Areas under consideration for inclusion are Los Ranchitos, Rafael Meadows, Santa Venetia, Country Club, Bayside Acres, California Park, Bret Harte and McNear's Beach.

The Marin County Grand Jury, meanwhile, released a report yesterday urging supervisors to move swiftly to insure adequate fire protection to areas around the city.

One of its recommendations calls for the county to contract with San Rafael for "first call" fire response to the unincorporated areas.

In October, San Rafael officials told supervisors the city would no longer provide "first call" response. They said the city would respond only after a county fire truck reached the scene and requested help.

The county fire department, however, is inadequately equipped to respond quickly and fight house fires, even though residents who rely on it for protection pay a special fire tax of 34 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Formation of a county service area around San Rafael would provide funds to either contract with the city or strengthen the county fire department in that area.

Dock Construction Is Snagged

Both the Army Corps of Engineers and a Marin Superior Court judge yesterday ordered a halt to construction of 280-foot dock being built, apparently without benefit of official blessing, in the Bel Marin Keys Lagoon.

Some 45 to 50 residents of the area have called the Corps of Engineers' office in San Francisco this week to protest the dock, a spokesman there said.

The corps yesterday sent Waterways Properties of Bel Marin Keys a telegram ordering construction halted because the project does not have the necessary corps permit.

Later in the day, Judge E. Warren McGuire also told the firm to stop building the dock pending a hearing on the matter of Feb. 4.

The judge acted in response to a suit brought by the Bel Marin Keys Community Services District, which claimed Waterway Enterprises did not have a permit to build the dock.

The structure in question lies offshore north from Bel Marin Keys Boulevard between Montego Key and Caribe Isle. It is intended to provide docking space for residents of Waterways Properties Townhouses.

Richard E. Blackburn of 144 Caribe Isles, spokesman for Waterwats Properties, said today his firm had believed no permit was needed from the Army.

"Nobody's ever gotten a permit to build docks on the lagoon before. If they're required, I guess we're all in trouble," he said.

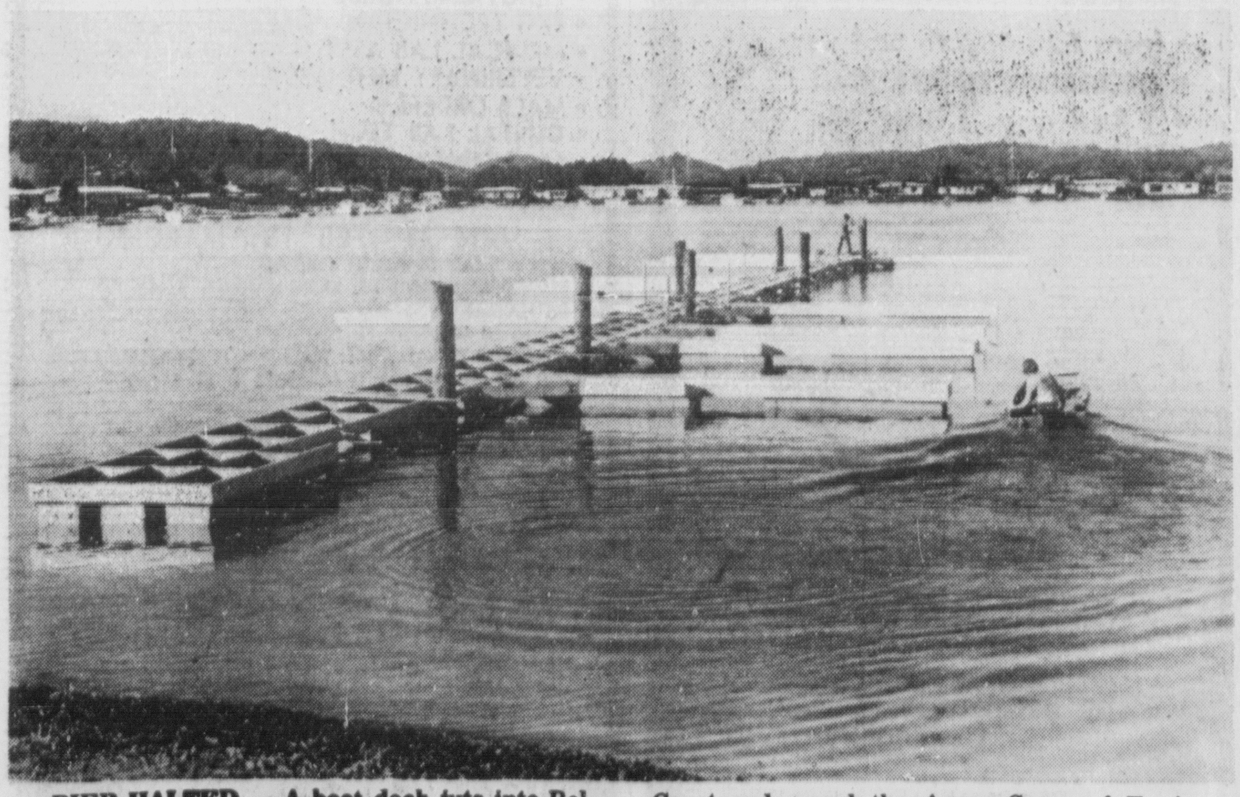

Blackburn said his firm would apply for the permit immediately.

He added that the permit was never mentioned when the firm obtained a county building permit and architectural approval for the pier, nor when it was advertised so boat owners could reserve slips.

According to the Corps of Engineers, the structure would be 280 feet long and 6 feet wide with finger piers extending along the sides.

A resident of Bel Marin Keys, H. D. Lawson of 101 Caribe Isle, said work started on the project Thursday when a pile driver arrived and by yesterday afternoon, more than 100 feet of dock and 12 finger piers had been set into place.

The dock, being built by Page Construction Co. Novato, extends from a minipark. Lawson said it would ruin the view from the park and be a navigation hazard because of its proximity to boats docked at nearby homes.

62 Perish In Turkish Jet Crash

Police said 62 persons died in the crash, which airport officials called the worst in Turkey's history.

Police initially put the death toll at 68 but said later that a final check of hospitals confirmed there were 11 survivors, many of them critically injured. They said that some bodies apparently had been counted twice when they announced the earlier, incorrect death toll.

All aboard were Turkish nationals, police said. Many were workers who recently returned from West Germany.

"I was sitting in the second row from the front of the plane," he told police. "As soon as the plane took off it veered to the left and I felt a great wave of heat. Then the plane struck the ground. I managed to throw myself out and suc-

Judge Seeks Tape Questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has asked President Nixon to state publicly why he opposes turning over five subpoenaed tapes to the Senate Watergate committee.

Gesell

U.S. District Judge Gerhard A. Gesell ruled yesterday that Nixon's claim of executive privilege "is too general" and is outdated by court rulings that led to surrender of most of the same tapes to the Watergate prosecution.

Gesell also threw out a subpoena the committee issued for all documents of 25 White House and Nixon re-election aides bearing on Watergate matters.

The judge said the subpoena for the documents "is too vague and conclusory to permit a meaningful response. . . and is wholly inappropriate given the stringent requirements applicable where a claim of executive privilege has been raised."

To Quiz Krogh

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The district attorney's office said two of their prosecutors are flying to Washington, D.C., within two weeks to question Egil (Bud) Krogh, onetime head of the White House "plumers" unit.

The prosecutors said yesterday they hope to determine if Krogh will be their star witness against his former boss, John D. Ehrlichman, surrounding the 1971 break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Deputy Dist. Atty. Stephen Trott and coprosecutor Robert Altman said they have scheduled a Washington meeting with Krogh shortly after he turns himself in Feb. 4 to start serving a six-month jail term.

Pact Protest

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Demonstrators occupied the South Vietnamese information office yesterday, accusing the Saigon government and the Nixon administration of violating the Paris peace accord.

The protesters told workers to leave the building and then locked themselves inside, according to police. But a police spokesman said officers of the Executive Protection Service, which guards embassies, obtained a "duplicate key" and arrested six of the men after entering the office.

Approves Cabinet

ANKARA (UPI) — President Fahri Koruturk today officailly approved the cabinet nominations submitted by Turkey's new coalition government, ending a three-month government crisis.

Crash Study

ATLANTA (UPI) — Seven major oil companies signed an agreement yesterday to launch a crash study on the possibility of building a deepwater "super port" and giant oil refinery in Georgia or the Carolinas.

The oil companies — Ashland Oil, Chevron, Cities Service, Exxon Pipeline Co., Mobil Oil, Shell and Tenneco — signed the agreement with the Coastal Plains Regional Commission.

FLOOD TOUR — Acting Gov. Ed. Reinecke walks along the Sacramento River at Castella in Shasta County as part of an inspection of Northern California flood areas. As he made the inspection yesterday, President Nixon declared seven counties in the northern part of the state disaster areas and available for federal help from the recent storms.

Israelis Move Out Of Canal

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Israeli troops burned their fortifications and streamed across the Suez Canal today in the first phase of a massive troop withdrawal from Egyptian territory captured in the 1973 Middle East War.

Libya, a radical Arab country and neighbor of Egypt, late yesterday denounced the Israeli-Egyptian agreement to separate their troops. It warned the Arab world would "explode in holy fury against the makers of setbacks and sufferings" in the region.

Pillars of smoke shot into the sky over the southern Suez Canal region yesterday as Israeli troops began the official withdrawal from their bridgehead in Egypt. The first phase of the pullback was scheduled to be completed by noon Monday.

The Israeli national radio said truck convoys carrying troops and supplies streamed out of the region across the canal all night and early today.

In Tel Aviv, the military command said the pullbacks were slowed somewhat because of the Jewish Sabbath, but men and heavy equipment were still moving across the canal on schedule.

The national radio said Israeli troops had abandoned their fortifications, leaving many of them in flames. It said soldiers were ordered to burn all documents that could be of value to Egyptian intelligence, even letters from home.

Libya's national radio, in a broadcast after the troop withdrawals began, called on other oil-rich countries to end subsidies to Egypt because of the pullbacks.

Libya, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait agreed in 1967 to pay subsidies to Egypt and adopted resolutions against holding peace talks with Israel. Libya said the Egyptian-Israeli agreement had broken the Arab pact.

"The Arab nation condemns the cheap attempts to liquidate its cause, and denounces the suspect regional moves," the broadcast said.

Under the withdrawal plan, Israeli troops have until Feb. 21 to complete withdrawal from Egyptian territory, and until Mar. 5 establish new defense lines in the Sinai desert about 13 miles from the canal.

The first phase of the pullbacks involves Israeli positions between the Cairo-Suez highway and Adabiya on the southern tip of the canal. The pullbacks will end the Israeli encirclement of Suez City and the Egyptian 3rd Army on the canal's east bank.

On Monday, Israeli officers will turn over the captured territory to U.N. truce teams that will hand over the land to the Egyptians six hours later.

Flood Areas To Receive Help

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Seven flood-ravaged Northern California counties which suffered an estimated $36 million damage last week were declared federal disaster areas yesterday by President Nixon.

The proclamation activates the federal mechanism for providing disaster relief assistance in the form of funds for debris removal and restoration of streets, bridges, utilities and other public facilities.

The seven counties are Mendocino, Humboldt, Siskiyou, Shasta, Trinity, Tehama and Glenn. Nixon also declared a major disaster in three other flood-hit states—Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

Citizens in the affected areas also may be eligible for food stamps, food commodities, rent and mortgage payments.

In Sacramento, acting Gov. Ed Reinecke requested a 20-day extension for relief from the federal mandatory fuel allocation program for the seven counties.

In a telegram to the Federal Energy Office in San Francisco, Reinecke said, "The cleanup efforts in Northern California are only 5 per cent complete and there is an estimated $15 million in restoration work still to be done."

Reinecke, who toured the area Thursday, also said it was "imperative that the necessary fuel be made available to expedite the vital cleanup efforts."

Residents Fleeing Island In Caribbean

SAN JUAN, P.R. (UPI) — Affluent residents on the Caribbean island of Grenada today lined up for all available transportation off the island, fleeing looting and sporadic shootouts between political opponents.

Reports reaching Bridgetown, Barbados, 150 miles northeast of Grenada, said uncontrolled looting erupted throughout the 133-square-mile island yesterday. Refugees in Bridgetown told newsmen, "Everyone who can afford to is leaving."

Violence on the island was reported to have subsided by late last night.

Grenada was scheduled to become completely independent from Britain next week, and the strife broke out between supporters of Prime Minister Eric Gairy and those who oppose independence if Gairy continues as the island's leader.

Two Gairy supporters died yesterday of injuries suffered in an attack by antigovernment militants. Three persons have died in disorders this week.

A general strike has paralyzed most services, including communications. Only an occasional telex report has reached new agencies outside the island because of the strike.

The only regular air service is maintained by Leeward Islands Air Transport (LIAT) which has two morning flights a day. The usual afternoon flight has been canceled for days.

Several large stores were reportedly cleaned out by looters, adding to a food shortage brought on by a strike of longshoremen who have refused to unload freighters.

The U.S. State Department yesterday repeated a warning to U.S. citizens not to go to Grenada and advised those already there to leave. There are about 200 Americans who live there year-round and another three dozen were reported staying at a Holiday Inn in St. George's.

U.S. Lifts The Quotas On Wheat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the first time since World War II, there are no U.S. import quotas on wheat.

As of today and through June 30, wheat and flour will be allowed to come into the country without restrictions in order to prevent a possible shortage and rising bread prices.

President Nixon yesterday ordered suspension of import quotas after the U.S. Tariff Commission recommended the move Thursday.

Although the 1974 crop is expected to fill consumer needs, it will not reach market until early summer. But record exports had drastically cut U.S. wheat reserves. Now, wheat and flour from Canada can enter the country freely.

Deputy White House press secretary Gerald L. Warren said Nixon's action will "have a stabilizing effect on price."

Although imports from Canada are possible, said Assistant Agriculture Secretary Carroll G. Brunthaver, "I don't think it will be needed."

Ford Declines To Look At Evidence In Nixon's Support

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Vice President Gerald Ford says he has talked with persons who say they have evidence proving President Nixon innocent of any wrongdoing in the Watergate scandal. But Ford said he did not want to inspect that evidence.

In an address yesterday to the annual banquet of the Columbus Touchdown Club, Ford said the information proving Nixon's innocence came from Nixon himself, Sen. Hugh Scott, R-Pa., and presidential aide Bryce Harlow.

"From the information I get," Ford told a news conference at Port Columbus International Aiport here, "the President is right and (former presidential counsel) John Dean is wrong."

The vice president said he did not want to inspect the evidence because he does not want to be in a position of having investigated the situation.

"I have made a decision not to see it or hear it myself," he said, referring to recently mentioned transcripts of presidential conversations and tape recordings. "I feel this is material that would be more appropriate before a grand jury for a federal trial."

Ford said he did not believe he had been brainwashed by Scott, Harlow or Nixon.

"I have absolute confidence in then," he said.

The vice president also said: He does not believe Republicans will lose about 10 per cent of the normal vote this year because of Watergate, a fear expressed by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

Newly seated Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, "did what any citizen has the right to do" when he contested an income tax assessment and paid a deposit on it before taking his Senate seat.

Truman's Give 'Em Hell' Letter To JFK Is Revealed

WALTHAM, Mass. (UPI) — Former President Harry S Truman sent a hand-written letter to John F. Kennedy offering words of encouragement when President Kennedy was beset by criticism in 1962.

The hand-written letter, dated Aug. 11, was among the papers made public this week by the John F. Kennedy Library.

It reads:

"Personal and Confidential

"Mr. President, don't let those damned columnists and editorial writers discourage you.

"In my opinion you are on the right track.

"The President is just as great as the Congress—and really greater—when he exercises his constitutional perogatives.

"You are going through the same situations and troubles that Franklin Roosevelt, Abraham Lincoln and I had to meet. Don't like to put myself in that class—but I had a hell of a time.

"You meet 'em cuss 'em and give 'em hell and you'll win in 1964. HST."

Marin Educators Hear A Call For 'Humanization' In Teaching

By BILL ROBERTS

A state assemblyman and the founder of the National Organization for Women yesterday urged Marin teachers and school administrators to "humanize education."

They asked teachers to change their attitudes and the educational system so that students become respected as individuals rather than instructed en masse.

Assemblyman John Vasconcellos, R-Santa Clara, and Aileen Hernandez made their pitch to about 400 teachers and administrators at the Marin County Teachers' Annual Winter Institute at the College of Marin.

"Humanizing education means recognizing a child as a person," Vasconcellos said. He asked that teachers recognize their students' bodies as well as their minds.

"In this culture people have been conditioned to look outward and upward," he said.

But, he said, students should not be forced into molds. He encouraged teachers to help students look "downward and inward" to help their humanization.

He asked teachers to teach students self-awareness, self-expression, self-determination and self-esteem, both through teching tools and their own examples.

JOHN VASCONCELLOS
'Look outward, upward'

Vasconcellos is chairman of the education subcommittee of the Assembly's way and means committee and is chairman of joint committees on the master plan for higher education and educational goals and evaluation.

Mrs. Hernandez, first national president of the women's group she founded, had more specific recommendations for her audience of educators.

"We need to begin to realize that some of the things we are doing in the educational system are dehumanizing," she said.

She listed example after example of what she termed "stereotypes" in society which contribute to the dehumanization of the individual.

She told how woman are forced into clerical jobs and other positions which pay less than those held by men. And she gave similar examples of racial stereotypes which she said dehumanized whole races.

"Take a look at your school," she asked. "See if you can find how the school budget is determined for athletics."

Mrs. Hernandez claimed that athletic emphasis is tailored for boys and does not allow girls to develop physically. Thus girls are held back from jobs, often high paid, which require physical attributes.

She claimed such stereotypes help perpetuate dehumanization.

"I'm not sure I can save you, its incumbent upon you to save yourself," she said. "We don't have terribly much more time to humanize education and in the process, humanize society."

Sponsored by the county schools office, the day-long program concluded with sixteen group sessions on various educational topics.

Patronage At Larkspur Library Up

Patronage of the Larkspur Library during the last six months of 1973 was up 16 per cent over the same period in 1972, librarian Richard A. Kilbourne reported yesterday.

Kilbourne said the increase was largely due to ongoing promotional campaigns aimed at acquainting Larkspur residents with the library.

Children checked out 26 per cent more books than during the last half of 1972 and adult useage was up 13 per cent for a combined 16 per cent increase, Kilbourne said.

Library cards were issued to 558 persons during the six-month period, bringing the library's total of registered borrowers to 4,042. Kilbourne noted that registration for the Greenbrae area increased by 40 per cent during the period.

Marin Gets Funds For School Program

The U.S. Department of Labor has funded Marin County with $23,050 for its Neighborhood Youth Corps in-school program.

The county-sponsored program hires young high school students from low income families for 10 hours of employment weekly at public and non-profit agencies.

Car Pool 'Bus Lane' Supported

Car-pool commuters should be allowed to travel the "exclusive bus lane" on Highway 101 between the Golden Gate and Richardson Bay bridges, the Golden Gate Bridge District board was told yesterday.

The suggestion from director Peter Tamaras, a San Francisco supervisor, came as district officials told the board "little progress" has been made in efforts to encourage car pools.

According to Dale W. Luehring, district general manager, a two-year study of vehicle occupancy shows the percentage of single-passenger autos has even increased slightly in recent months.

Roughly three out of every four cars carry only drivers, depsite a recent car-pool matching service cosponsored with the Sierra Club, he said.

In March 1972, the percentage of single-passenger cars was about 76 per cent, he said. This month, it is about 77 per cent.

Meanwhile, the total number of cars using the bridge has dropped because of improved bus transit.

Efforts to reduce or eliminate tolls for car pools have been stalled in a board committee pending a decision whether the 50-cent toll should be increased for other vehicles.

Tamaras said allowing car pools to use the bus lane could save the district large sums of money and reduce traffic congestion.

For example, he said, "If we can get 4,400 people into car pools that means 100 buses we don't have to buy for a savings in capital of $5.5 million."

By not operating those 100 buses, he continued, $5 million could be saved annually in payroll and operating expenses.

District officials responsible for bus operations have recommended in the past against allowing car pools to use the bus lane. They claim one auto breakdown in the exclusive lane could snarl bus schedules for hours.

Tamaras' suggestion, which he said has worked successfully in Southern California, was referred to the board's transportation committee for study.

In other action, the board approved a $36,000 contract with Sverdrup and Parcel engineers for preliminary plans for a bus terminal in Novato.

The new terminal, expected to be built by the end of the year, is to be located on about five acres adjacent to the temporary site now in use north of town.

The board also endorsed the "general design concept" of the Larkspur ferry terminal, thus clearing the way for approval of the project on Feb. 7 by the Bay Conservation and Development Commission.

Building Policy To Be Studied

New policies governing the use of Mill Valley parks and recreation buildings will be discussed at a joint meeting Monday of the city's parks and recreation commission and council at the Mill Valley Library gallery.

Among parks commission recommendations to be considered are strict new rules for parks which could exclude almost any use by large, nonresident groups.

If the new regulations are passed, groups of 150 or more can no longer use the parks unless they are city-sponsored organizations, groups made up of residents, or service or charitable groups whose membership is 60 per cent Mill Valley residents, according to Don L. Dimitratos, director of parks and recreation.

Tiburon Development Will Be Discussed

Possible plans for development of downtown Tiburon will be discussed by the Belvedere Planning Commission Monday at 8 p.m. at city hall.

A petition signed by more than 800 Belvedere residents has requested that Belvedere review the adopted Tiburon Downtown Plan and the development plans of Sequoia Pacific of Santa Ana.

Building Ban To Be Discussed

The Novato City Council will consider extending a moratorium on processing plans for planned residential developments, mainly townhouses and apartments, at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Novato Community House.

The planning commission has recommended that the city extend the moratorium, due to expire Feb. 2, eight months.

Federal Energy Office Finds Discrepancy In Oil Figures

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With U.S. stocks of crude oil reported at a six-year low, the Federal Energy Office says it has discovered a discrepancy in the oil industry's weekly production figures.

The FEO said yesterday its figures on crude oil production differ by more than 1.1 million barrels a day from industry figures for the week ending Jan. 18.

FEO officials said they have not determined the reason for the "major discrepancy," but David R. Oliver, acting chief of oil and gas statistics, said there might be a statistical error in industry figures dating back to a previous period.

It was "the biggest discrepancy in my 30 years of dealing with the figures," Oliver said.

The American Petroleum Institute, representing the industry, said 14 of the 16 reporting companies "verified the accuracy of the data submitted to us." The API said it would share that information with the FEO and will try to determine why there was a serious drop in crude stock during the week in question.

The industry said there was an 8.6 million barrel weekly drop, but the FEO said it should have been only 800,000 barrels.

In testimony before a House subcommittee yesterday, two federal energy officials said oil companies might be tempted to cheat in telling the government how much crude oil they have on stock in order to get more under the new allocation program.

Assistant FEO administrator John Weber said although there might be an "incentive to cheat," company supplies would be audited and a fine of $2,500 a day could be imposed for falsifying supply figures.

Another energy official, Eric R. Zausner, saids developing an accurate reporting system has the "highest priority."

The first evidence of White House cooperation, said McFall, could be administration acceptance of the big emergency energy bill coming up for action in the Senate and House next week.

FEO chief William E. Simon told the Senate Permanent Investigations Committee yesterday he might agree with growing demands by some senators for a petroleum price rollback, but only if it does not hurt the oil industry.

A Jump In Fuel Costs

Golden Gate Transit fuel costs have jumped sharply in the last 30 days, bus officials told the Golden Gate Bridge District board yesterday.

According to Gen. Mgr. Dale W. Luehring, diesel fuel has increased to nearly 32 cents per gallon — an eight-cent hike since late December. A year ago, the bridge district was getting diesel fuel at about 12 cents per gallon.

Luehring said the Golden Gate transit fleet consumes about 1.6 million gallons annually. The general manager added that the district has been unable to obtain a fuel contract.

Shooting Case Is Transferred

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — The case of George Session, 18, of San Francisco, charged with shooting and injuring two Marin County residents, one an FBI agent in San Francisco last Dec. 6, was transfered yesterday to the United States District Court Eastern California Division in Sacramento.

The change of venue was granted Sessions by Judge Lloyd Burke after Session claimed he could not get a fair trial in San Francisco. Sessions had pleaded innocent on Dec. 21 before Judge Burke, who set yesterday for hearing of motions and setting trial date, on charges of assault with intent to commit murder and assault on a federal officer.

The charges grew out of an encounter between Session and FBI agent Thomas R. Hopkins, 31, of San Rafael in the Federal Office Building in San Francisco. According to U.S. Attorney James L. Browning, Session slashed Hopkins with a razor and Hopkins drew his pistol and fired at Session. The bullet creased Session's arm and then hit Carl E. Rizer, 57, of Greenbrae in the right calf. Rizer was a Senate Commerce Committee investigator on special assignment to the Watergate Committee.

Watergate Panel Postpones Probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Watergate Committee today abruptly postponed public hearings at which President Nixon's friend Charles G. (Bebe) Rebozo had been scheduled to testify.

A brief statement from the committee said next week's three days of hearings, the first since Congress reconvened as well as hearings in the week of Feb. 4, had been postponed to avoid prejudicing the New York trial of two former Nixon cabinet members, John N. Mitchell and Maurice Stans.

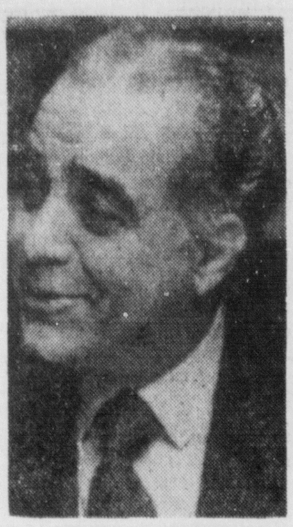

Rebozo had been the first of several witnesses scheduled to appear before Sen. Sam Ervin's Watergate committee.

Rebozo had been called apparently to explain his handling of a $100,000 GOP campaign contribution by billionaire Howard Hughes.

Mitchell, Nixon's first-term Attorney General, and Stans, formerly commerce secretary, were indicted on charges connected with a $200,000 gift by Robert Vesco.

The committee's statement said it had "decided to temporarily postpone its hearings scheduled for the new two weeks in order to make sure that no prejudice be done to the Mitchell and Stans trial in the southern District Court of New York."

Red Cross Is Taking Flood Contributions

Contributions to victims of flooding in five Western states, including California, may be made through the Marin Red Cross, according to Mary Bingham, chapter chairman.

Hundreds of families were driven from their homes by floods in Montana, California, Oregon, Washington and Idaho, said Mrs. Bingham.

"In California alone," she added, "Humboldt, Siskiyou, Shasta and Trinity counties were proclaimed in a state of emergency by Governor Reagan, and the rainy season is not over yet."

Donations for flood victims should be marked "Disaster Relief," and sent to the Marin Red Cross Chapter, 712 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael.

Police Course Is Announced

Registration for an introductory course in police work will be held from 7 to 10 p.m. Feb. 5 at the old courtroom in the Petaluma City Hall.

A spokesman for the Petaluma Police Department said the class, called administration of justice, is taught under the sponsorship of Santa Rosa Junior College and is a prerequisite in many communities for membership in police reserve organizations.

All classes will be held in Petaluma.

Youth Orchestra Sets First Concert

The Marin Youth Orchestra conducted by Hugo Rinaldi will present its first concert of the season Feb. 3 at 2:30 p.m. at the Marin Veterans' Memorial Building.

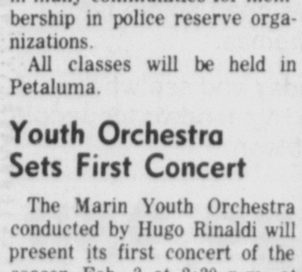

Selections by the 99-member orchestra will include music by Panufnik, Beethoven and Hindemith. Soloists will be Tom Macfarlane on piano, Mariko Smiley on violin, and Wendy Tomlinson on cello.

Highway Patrol Will Only Warn Truckers

The California Highway Patrol will not cite truck drivers who allow passengers to ride in the cargo areas of their trucks since there is no law against it.

A story in yesterday's Independent-Journal made it appear that driver's stopped by the Highway Patrol would be cited. The CHP said drivers will only be stopped and warned of the hazards of the practice.

estimated 20,857,000 while in New York it was up only 95,850 to 18,584,400.

Illinois may actually have lost people. According to the latest figures available from the Illinois Department of Public Health, the population was 11,236,000 on July 1, 1973, a drop of 8,000 as against that of 12 months earlier.

California still attracts migrants—a net gain estimated at 100,000 last year—but the state's Population Research Unit said the birth rate in 1973 was 14.5 for every 1,000 people, a half-point below the national average.

"I don't know if this represents decisions not to have babies or those planning to delay them," said unit chief Walter Hollmann of the birth rate. "The fact is it's low. But it's been low for the last couple of years. I wouldn't go so far as to say it's a trend, however."

In New York, the state health department's office of biostatistics said it recorded 225,750 legal abortions in 1973, more than half of them from residents of the state. And, it said, the figure was only approximate because of "under-reporting, particularly in New York City."

Neighboring New Jersey where the population rose 66,190 to 7,396,330 in 1973, Department of Health official Alfred W. Iaci said the increase was the lowest in 22 years.

The most obvious reasons, he said, were wider use of contraceptives by women, more abortions "and there are more women in the labor force so this reduces the amount of births."

Despite the slowed population growth, the UPI survey found that outside the biggest states the increase in populations appeared to dip only slightly in most middle and sparsely-populated states. A handful of states where unusual economic factors occurred were the exception.

In Washington, for example, the population rose only 5,500 to 3,424,300 during the year largely because of a drop of 10,600 in net migration. The slump in airplane sales hit the Boeing Co., the state's biggest private employer, causing an average of about 13,000 to leave the state each of the past three years.

But Nevada's population jumped from 489,000 to 549,500 in the year despite a drop in the birth rate largely due, state officials said, to a net migration gain of 60,000 people triggered by a hotel-casino building boom.

Police said the twin-engine plane was only about 30 feet off the ground when it crashed and burst into flames.

Airport officials and technicians said the cause of the crash remained unknown.

Witnesses said the plane fell onto its right wing immediately after liftoff. A fuel tank exploded into flames and rescue workers were unable to get near the burning wreckage.

The cause of the crash was not immediately determined. Airport officials said the weather was good when the plane crashed at 7:07 a.m.

The officials said 20 persons were taken to hospitals, but most died en route or shortly after arrival.

It was the second crash of an F28 jet this month. On Jan. 1, an F28 owned by Italy's Itavia airline crashed while landing at Turin, killing 39 of the 43 persons aboard.

Izmir, a port city on Turkey's west coast, is about 200 miles southwest of Istanbul and has a population of 400,000.

Guard At San Quentin Is Stabbed

A San Quentin Prison guard was stabbed yesterday with a flattened tin can wielded by an inmate.

The guard was treated in the prison hospital for a cut left forearm but was able to continue his shift, officials said.

Prison officials, who declined to name the guard or the inmate, said the correctional officer was trying to talk the convict into giving up a food tray at 10:25 a.m. when the prisoner lunged forward with what was described as a flattened, sharpened peanut can.

The officer was stabbed through the bars of the locked cell in the North Block segregation unit.

A report of the incident will be sent to the district attorney for possible criminal charges, according to information officer William D. Nyberg.

Indian Art Books Added

A $500 collection of 45 books on Indian art, history, literature and traditions has been purchased by the Corte Madera branch of the Marin County Library from memorial contributions for Jessica Kenward.

Most of the donations came from Ross Valley residents and students and faculty at Terra Linda High School, where Miss Kenward's father, John, is a teacher, according to a library spokesman.

Miss Kenward was killed early last year in an auto accident near Lake Tahoe. She was born in San Francisco, lived most of her life in Marin and was a 17-year-old senior at Redwood High School in Larkspur at the time of her death.

Two Preserve Areas Due Study

The Novato Planning Commission will consider establishing two agricultural preserves in the city, one under city jurisdiction, at 8 p.m. Monday at the Novato Community House.

Proposed for agricultural preserves are 478 acres south east of Deer Island, owned by Mary Richardson, and 77 acres on the Pacheco Ranch, site of a vineyard, on the Pacheco Ranch, opposite Hamilton Air Force Base.

The commission also will consider floodway zoning in the Nave Gardens area, east of South Novato Boulevard, a move to control building in flood areas.

Youth Held In Burglary Probe

Stephen R. Gommeringer, 19, of 343 Linda Way, was being held in county jail without bail to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Sheriff's deputies said they surprised Gommeringer in a home in the 400 block of Shoreline Highway in Tamalpais Valley at 1:46 a.m. He escaped arrest briefly after diving through the window but was captured a short time later.

Reading Problems Will Be Discussed

The Novato Unified School District board will have a special meeting on improving elementary reading instruction at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the Novato High School lecture hall.

The board recently set as top priority on its list of educational aims improving the reading program in the fourth through sixth grades.

(deciding) before all the evidence is in" and Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., R-N.Y., added "it would be inappropriate until the investigation is completed to prejudge the evidence ... I see myself as a grand juror."

Others were not so reluctant to express their opinions.

"I subscribe to the thinking of one of Drinan's constitutents (Rep. Robert F. Drinan, D-Mass., a priest) who said "if you can't impeach the bastard, exorcise him," Rep. Bertram Podell, D-N.Y., said.

Rep. Frank M. Clark, D-Pa., said he feels Nixon "used his office for his personal gain to the extent that Congress can't turn its back on this issue any longer."

"I would vote aye," said Rep. William R. Cotter, D-Conn. "I say this now because I believe there is today sufficient evidence to sustain a finding of probable cause that the President has committed high crimes and misdemeanors."

Many others are insistent that Nixon should go through the impeachment process and not resign.

"No, I don't think he should resign," Rep. Edward R. Roybal, D-Calif., said. "I think he should face his peers and be tried by them."

Rep. Ron Dellums, a California Democrat, added: "I prefer impeachment because more facts will come out. If the President simply resigns, there would be no guarantee all the facts would come out."

Several House members said they did not think Nixon should resign because it would be a "cop-out."

"A lot of them (congressmen) would love to have him resign," said Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., "but that would be a cop-out."

Rep. Ken Hechler, D-W.Va., added: "I have great reluctance in saying he should resign because I don't want to cop out on a direct vote on impeachment. If he insists on a vote and trial he's entitled under the Constitution to have one. I prefer impeachment over resignation."

"It seems to me it would be in the best interst of the country that he do so," Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, R-Calif., said.

And Rep. Andrew Young, D-Ga., said "I'd certainly prefer him to resign. It would be easier on the country and everything else. I'd even be in favor of dropping any criminal charges if he would resign."

The greatest number, however, felt that Nixon's resignation is none of their business.

"For political leaders to be calling for somebody else's resignation is phony to me," commented Rep. C.W. Young, R-Fla. "That's his decision."

Rep. John Rousselot, R-Calif., said I don't think that's my decision to make —that's his decision. I don't have any right to make a decision.

"If he called me over to the White House tomorrow to ask my advice, I'd really be hesistant to advise him," Rousselot said. "He alone must make the decision."

Arrest In Burglary Of Boat House

An 18-year-old San Rafael youth was arrested early today on suspicion of burglary of the Marin Boat House and an earlier burglary of Dervin Auto Sales, San Rafael police reported.

Mark Stephen Perry of 43 Cottonwood Drive, was held in Marin County Jail on suspicion of two counts of burglary as well as possession of marijuana with bail not yet set. He is to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

According to police, Thomas E. Burke, 39, of 117 Third Street, manager of the Marin Boat House, who lives above it, heard someone trying to break into the boat house at 3:20 a.m. He called police who arrested Perry leaving the scene.

Attorney's Marriage Is Dissolved

The marriage of Bolinas attorney and historian Thomas J. Barfield and his wife, Maria was dissolved yesterday in Marin Superior Court.

According to the dissolution petition, the couple was married in Reno on Oct. 2, 1963, and separated last June 24. They had no children.

Barfield, who has offices in San Francisco, will keep the family home at 350 Lauff Ranch Road, Bolinas, while his wife will receive a residence in San Francisco.

A former Naval officer, Barfield is descended from President James Monroe and Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee.

Charges Are Still Pending

Conflicting claims by parties involved in an alleged child stealing episode in Fairfax last month have prevented the Marin District Attorney's office from filing charges.

Until Fairfax police investigate the case further, said Deputy Dist. Atty. Ernest V. Zunino, no charge will be filed.

Arrested Dec. 17 on suspicion of child stealing, burglary, conspiracy and assault with a deadly weapon were James Gary Gold, 28, and Larry John Sneddon, 24, both of Fairfax, and James Lloyd Land, 28, of Malibu.

Police said the three forced their way into a Fairfax apartment, fired several gunshots, then grabbed Gold's 2-year-old son from his mother, Laurie R. Knapp, and fled. They were arrested in San Rafael.

Klein Calls For 'Balanced View'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Herbert Klein, President Nixon's former communications director, said Friday that administration critics are "biting anything that moves."

Klein, speaking before the Rotary Club, called for a return to a "balanced view."

"If one is to look at the areas of weakness in the press," Klein said, "they can be criticized today for too much bias and emotion ... and for allowing themselves to be manipulated by the leakers within government."

A Way Out For A's Finley

All You Got To Do Is Ask

MURRAY OLDERMAN

THE TIPOFF:

The only reasonable way for Charley Finley to get out of the Dick Williams impasse (he won't return to Oakland) is to trade him to the Yankees — there's a precedent since Frank Lane once traded his manager, Joe Gordon, for Jimmy Dykes. But since Charley started going around scratching writers' faces (as he did at the major league meetings in Houston), who's looking for reasonable?

Q. What's the real story on Billy Kilmer's stomach disorder? I think they're hiding something. — Guy Creasy, Arlington, Va.

The only thing the Redskins underplayed was Billy's mental state. He had an intestinal blockage which was aggravated by his emotionalism. The night he went to the hospital after the Skins' season finale, Billy almost collapsed at the wheel of his car and had to walk the final mile through a snowstorm.

Q. They have a magazine for fight fans, a magazine for football fans, a newspaper for hockey fans, etc. I am an avid soccer fan. I would like to know if there is a soccer publication in this country. — Tony Lang, Cincinnati, O.

Lamar Hunt, who has a deep interest in the sport (he has sunk losses into it as an owner since 1968), recommends Pro Soccer Report, a magazine which is published in Toronto. Lamar also reports the North American Soccer League — he's part-owner of the Dallas team — is "going like gangbusters." There were nine teams in 1973, and there are five more franchises already committed for '74. But they still all lost money last year.

Q. Can you tell me who was the first specialist kicker either collegiate or professional, who didn't participate in games in any other capacity? — Charlies Brochous, Denver, Colo.

The first true kicking specialist I can remember was Ken Strong, who came back to the New York Giants as an old man who did nothing but kick during World War II, when free substitution was installed for the duration, allowing teams the luxury of a kicking specialist. No doubt there were others.

Q. I want to know why the NBA doesn't have three officials on the court at the same time. It seems to me that with three officials they could cover all the moves of the players without being screened out of the play. — Leo Kaczmarek, Crivitz, Wis.

The idea of an extra official has been discussed and tried out experimentally. The problems — they can't even get enough competent pro officials to man two for each game; they tend to clutter up the court. The problem is not getting screened out but how to exercise judgment in the very physical game which basketball, purportedly a non-contact sport, has become.

Q. Is there any time in football when a team is awarded a free kick for a field goal? If so, did it ever happen? — Chuck Casetllano, Clark, N.J.

Absolutely. A team is privileged to try a field goal from placement after the fair catch of a punt. Paul Hornung once kicked a crucial field goal for the Green Bay Packers against the Chicago Bears on just such a play.

Q. What do O. J. Simpson's initials stand for? — Dan Sheedy, Hamburg, N.Y.

PARTING SHOT:

My idea of assistant coaches who should get shots at head jobs in the NFL (San Diego, New York and Houston are sure seekers) are Ernie Stautner, who handles the defense for Dallas, and Monte Clark, responsible for Miami's offensive line.

Wildcats Upset Drake In Basketball

Marin Catholic High School traded baskets with Drake and got the better of the deal last night for a 68-62 Marin County Athletic League basketball upset in San Anselmo.

Mike Mahoney and Terry Ahern scored 16 points and Gary Johnson added 15 as the on-again, off-again Wildcats bounced all the way back from their loss to Redwood on Tuesday.

Mahoney also played man-to-man defense on Drake's high-scoring Eddie Joe Chavez, holding him to nine points. Dan Trimble fired in 25 for the Pirates and Mark Lavin contributed 12.

The defeat, coming on the heels of a loss to league-leading San Rafael Tuesday, left defending champion Drake in third place with a 4-2 MCAL record and a game coming up Tuesday against second-place Redwood. Marin Catholic is 3-3.

"We finally found a team that wanted to play our game," said Marin Catholic coach Dave Gonsalves. The 'Cats like to run and shoot, and while it's actually fatal to try to outgun Drake, it wasn't last night.

"We let 'em get going," lamented Drake coach Pete Hayward. "We aren't playing together, and we aren't playing good fundamental basketball."

Marin Catholic led most of the way, holding a 49-40 advantage at one stage of the third quarter before Drake rallied to take a brief, 51-50 lead.

The Wildcats recovered to go up by seven or eight later, saw it whittled to three, but held on. Johnson, a sophomore, made four clutch free throws during the closing stages.

Ahern also made a key contribution, Gonsalves said. In a burst of brilliance with about five minutes left, he scored a basket, stole the inbounds pass, scored again and was fouled, and made a follow shot after missing his free throw.

Marin Catholic shot only 35 per cent for the game (25 of 72), but got the second shots by outrebounding Drake, 49-33. Mahoney had 11, Johnson 10 and Tom Cronin nine, and Chris McCarthy made some key grabs after Cronin fouled out.

Drake's Trimble "played an exceptional game," Gonsalves added. Unable to find Chavez or others open off the high post, he turned around to launch successful jump shots.

FOR BASEBALL WRITERS

Banquets A Literary Phenomenon

By PHIL ELDERKIN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Daniel Webster's style would have been considered too ordinary for a place on the dais. Bob Hope might be invited, but he'd definitely have to limit his monologue to three minutes. And Lincoln's Gettysburg Address is never recited, even in the cloakrooms.

Still the paying customers hang on every word, crowd the speaker's platform for autographs, and mentally make their World Series reservations.

This is all caused by a literary phenomenon called the annual Baseball Writers' Banquet — a midwinter staple now in almost every city with a major league franchise.

Boston's dinner is often the loudest, Chicago's the most sophisticated, and New York's the most theatrical. But even at prices which would be considered outrageous for heating oil, the fans accept without question.

To them, the chance to gaze at the chiseled profiles of Hank Aaron or Pete Rose or Dick Williams at $30 or even $50 a plate (a figure New York reached nearly 10 years ago for its dinner) is cheap. Tickets to the Boston banquet generally sell out in two weeks. In New York, it helps to get seats if you know a congressman or live in the same neighborhood as a baseball writer.

The wonderful part about these dinners is that the cities they represent often win a pennant, produce a batting champion and at least one 20-game winning pitcher all in the same night.

It is all done verbally, of course. You can get a better guarantee from a guy who sells oil stock by mail. But when you're stuffed with filet mignon and sitting under the soft ballroom lights of a mid-town hotel, anything seems possible.

Most baseball dinners come complete with certain specific awards for local stars — like

Tam Quint Dominates San Marin

By LEW CODDINGTON

When Tamalpais High School's basketball players fell back on defense last night, they heard coach Bernie Schneider shouting a simple order from the bench: "Dominate." They obeyed.

Tam held San Marin High to three points in the second quarter and went on to a 58-41 victory in a Marin County Athletic League game witnessed by about 500 fans at College of Marin in Kentfield.

"We were in control defensively," said Schneider. "Our press really hurt them. They were hesitant, and made two or three turnovers in a row."

San Marin held a 12-11 lead late in the first quarter, but went the next eight minutes without scoring a point, missing about a dozen shots until Skip Starnes banked one in with 1:47 left in the half.

Tam moved out to a 22-12 lead and was never in trouble afterward, getting the margin up to 22 points later at 52-30. The victory gave the Indians a 2-4 MCAL record and left San Marin at 1-5.

Mike Dinehart led Tam with 19 points and 16 rebounds, while Alvin Hall contributed 13 points and Ethan Winterling 10. Starnes had 12 points and nine rebounds for San Marin.

Dinehart and Hollis Owens were murderous on the boards in the second quarter, Dinehart getting seven rebounds and Owens five. Owens finished with 11, and Tam had a 43-28 team advantage.

Dinehart and Owens each stand 6-foot-5, and Tam's double low-post offense is built around them. "We try to go inside," said Schneider, "and they (opponents) have to foul us."

Tam made 18 of 24 free throws ("our best this year") and San Marin hit just three of 13. The Mustangs missed the front end of one-and-one situations six times in eight tries.

Schneider started an all-senior lineup, with Winterling and Bill Clarke replacing Dan Butterfield and Danny Lucia at guard. Both played well, as did Hall, who had several steals off the press.

San Rafael Five Defeats Novato

San Rafael High School last night survived its own emotional letdown and Novato High's onslaught for a 59-49 Marin County Athletic League basketball victory.

The outcome left the Bulldogs on top of the MCAL with a 6-0 record, and dropped Novato to 2-4.

"We were standing around a little at the start," said Bulldog coach Bret Tovani. "We had a letdown after our big emotional wins over Redwood and Drake (the previous two games).

"But we have learned to play with poise," he continued. "We were down in the first half by three points or so, but we hung in there, kept working, maintained our patience and eventually got some easy buckets off of our offense."

Sn Rafael moved out toa five or seven-point lead and stayed there most of the night. The final margin of 10 was the largest.

Byron Stewart scored 21 points to lead the Bulldogs, with Jim Grant adding nine and Steve D'Ambra seven.

Novato was led by Mike Moroski and Willie Barnes with 10 points each. Curtis Saine was held to six by San Rafael's man-to-man defense, which Tovani installed late in the first quarter. Arthur Brooks, Gary Patterson and Mike Ellingson took turns defending Saine.

"There were a lot of turnovers for both sides," Tovani said. "I felt at halftime we were lucky to be where we were (a 31-27 lead)."

Elder Scores 22; Redwood Triumphs

By DAVE DEL GRANDE

Darrell Elder scored 22 points and pulled down 21 rebounds in little more than half a game last night to lead Redwood High School to a 96-60 basketball bombing of outsized Terra Linda.

The 6-foot-7 Elder, who stood towering over the helpless Trojans, put in 11 of 20 shots for his 22 points. Also, his 21 rebounds falls one short of a Redwood school record. "He was unstoppable," remarked Redwood coach Dick Hart.

The crowd of 700 at Terra Linda saw their team momentarily hold a 7-6 lead mid way through the first quarter only to fall victim to an 18-7 Redwood spurt that gave the Giants a 24-14 lead. The surge was led by Neil Hennessy, who scored 11 of his 13 points in the quarter, and Elder.

After Redwood now 5-1 and sole possessor of second place in the Marin County Athletic League, lengthened its lead part way into the second period, the Giants let their bench take over and according to Hare, "They really played super ball, every one of them."

The Redwood non-starters scored 51 of the Giants' 96 points, sparked by seniors Dirk Wells and Mark Wagner, who hit for 12 and 11 points respectively.

For the smaller Trojans, now 1-5, it was some sloppy play and their inability to control Elder that caused their downfall. They committed 23 turnovers, partly due to a Redwood

Dundee Said He Didn't Know Jurisdiction Of Commission

DEER LAKES, Pa. (UPI) — Angelo Dundee summed up the feeling in both fighters' camps.

"I'm not bum rapping the New York Boxing Commission," said Muhammad Ali's trainer, "but I didn't know they had jurisdiction over the 'Wide World of Sports.' (The show will be seen today on Channels 7-11-13 at 5:30 p.m.

It was during a television taping of that program Wednesday that Ali squared off with Joe Frazier. The boxing commission slapped a $5,000 fine on both fighters Friday.

Bruce Wright, attorney for Cloverlay, Inc. which manages Frazier's affairs, said the fines were "absolutely unfair."

Wright said all the commission can do "is revoke our license, not fine us. The only option they have now is to sue and we'll oppose it."

Dundee said Ali boxed four rounds yesterday for the last of his heavy training before the match. The fighter will have a light workout this morning and will then leave for New York by car.

According to his trainer, Ali will "go into seclusion at a midcity hotel and probably watch TV" through the weekend.

Meanwhile in Philadelphia, Eddie Futch, trainer for Frazier, said yesterday that "Joe is not shaken by the fine and it won't have any effect on his fight Monday night," Futch said.

Frazier worked out lightly yesterday and then went into seclusion in a downtown apartment.

After breakfast today, he will leave for New York city where Futch said he will relax, listen to records and watch television.

Upon learning that Ali was made a 9-5 favorite, Futch said, "I don't know where those gamblers get their information."

10,776 WATCH FLYERS WIN

Did Seals Crowd Want Blood?

OAKLAND (UPI) — The largest crowd ever to watch the California Golden Seals entertain a visiting expansion club probably came out for blood.

All they saw was some great goaltending.

California last night hosted Western Division leader Philadelphia, the league's most penalized team and the Seals' opponents in two of the wildest, most fight-filled contests the National Hockey League has produced this season.

The crowd of 10,776, also the largest for the Seals this season, saw Philadelphia take the 5-0 verdict as Bernie Parent, who will mind the goal for the West in the forthcoming All-Star game, turned in his 10th shutout.

Despite the Seals lowly standing, it was only the second time all season they have been shutout. They fired 33 shots at Parent, who saw his goals against average dwindle to a remarkable 1.78 and the team's record with him in the nets rise to 27-9-6.

The Seals scored one goal against him four times and were shut out last night as Philadelphia concluded its season with the Seals with five victories.

Only eight penalties were called as Philadelphia concentrated on the Seals' goal instead of their chins. Gary Dornhofer scored in the opening period and then Rick Macleish and Terry Crisp got second period tallies. Bad boy Dave Schultz and Ross Lonsberry completed the Flyers scoring in the final stanza.

Score by periods:

Rancho Cotate Cagers Rally To Top Piner

After trailing most of the way, Rancho Cotate High School of Rohnert Park rallied in the fourth quarter to post a 47-44 victory over Piner in Santa Rosa in a Sonoma County League basketball game last night.

In other SCL action, Casa Grande of Petaluma suffered a one-point loss at Sonoma, 47-46. In North Bay League play, visiting Petaluma was Vallejo's victim by the same score. In the North Central II, host Tomales fell to Kelseyville, 58-51, and St. Vincent of Petaluma lost to visiting Calistoga, 49-36.

Rancho Cotate (3-3 in the league) trailed after three periods, 36-30, but surged in the fourth behind five points by Roger Marsahll. Scott Wlodarczyk, playing well the whole game, led the Cougars with 14 points.

Casa Grande (2-4) trailed by two or three points most of the way. The Gaouchos cut the deficit to one on a late basket by Larry Thomas, and subsequently got the ball back, but missed the go-ahead bucket. Tom Davini scored 12 for Casa Grande.

Petaluma (2-4) made only 14 of 29 free throws in its loss to Vallejo, and trailed by three to five points throughout the game after falling behind in the first uarter, 15-8. Sid Shired scored 15 and Kris Mungle 13 for the Trojans.

St. Vincent (1-2) was able to shoot only six free throws, making two, while Calistoga went 13 of 25 from the line. Dan Tocchini led the Mustangs with 16 points.

most valuable player, best rookie, No. 1 pitcher, unsung hero. It is a shame the fans cannot sit in on the meetings, among the writers, which produce these decisions. World wars have been fought over less.

The scribes who eventually get to sit at the head table and make these presentations often add unexpected drama to the evening. They have been known to forget the names of their heroes, their notes, their glasses —and sometimes all three. And the quick wit which flows so freely in their daily columns often turns to silly putty once they step in front of a microphone.

The New York dinner, which has the most money to spend, also has the most eleaborate entertainment. Sometimes a Broadway director is hired to convert the writers into actors for one night. So far most have been able to think up a convenient excuse for not helping out a second time.

Mistakes have even been made in such unbelievable areas as decorations — like the year the Boston writers hired a professional architect to add a touch of class to tables designed to hold 10 people.

This gentleman had the right idea. He designed a three-bat centerpiece. This was fine for the three people who arrived early and grabbed the bats. But the other seven went home hopping mad.

The Boston writers, in their rush to make sure that everybody had a bat the following year, created a Frankenstein monster by giving away 900. By the end of the evening, table guests had bounced a miniature baseball bat off at least one part of their neighbor's anatomy.

In other games, Tim Hurley's 16 points led Drake (4-2) to a 56-54 triumph over visiting Marin Catholic (4-2), and Arthur McIntosh tallied 10 points as Tamalpais (3-3) overcame San Marin (1-5) at College of Marin, 38-34.

Baseball

Tennis

MISSION VIEJO — Fourth-seeded Nancy Gunter of Lake Livingston, Tex. yesterday beat Rosemary Casals, of Sausalito, 6-7, 6-2, 6-1, in the $50,000 Virginia Slims Women's Professional Tennis Tournament.

PHILADELPHIA — Seventh-seeded Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia and eight-seeded Arthur Ashe of Gum Spring, Va., overcame strong opposition last night and advanced to the semi-final round of the $100,000 U.S. Indoor Pro Tennis Championships.

Kodes, a Wimbledon champion and runnerup for the U.S. Open title, won 6-4, 6-4, over Eddie Dibbs of Miami, Fla., while Ashe, making the most of his powerful serve, downed Italy's 11th-seeded Adriano Panatta, 6-1, 6-7, 6-3.

Track-Field

NEW YORK — Tony Waldrop, fast asserting himself as the premier miler in the U.S., ran the first sub-four minute mile in the history of the 67-year-old Millrose Games and the new Madison Square Garden last night with a time of 3:59.7.

Backcourt Turnaround May Be A Warriors' Key

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Golden State Warriors have been looking sharp with big Clyde Lee back in the lineup, but maybe the real secret to the turn-around is in the backcourt.

Moving into tonight's 8 o'clock game with Cleveland, Jeff Mullins is riding a five-game hot streak that has seen him score over 23 points four times, including a season's high of 29.

Mullins admitted that he was worried about his slow start this season. "Deep down, I felt I had lost it. I thought it was caused by my legs and when your legs go, you've had it. I thought this was my last year."

But he said "one day in practice a few weeks ago I started fooling around with my shot. I found there was something wrong with the way I was releasing the ball...Now I have my touch back and it feels good. Like I rediscovered something."

Tonight's National Basketball Association meeting with the Cavs will be the first since the last November battle in which Lee tore his knee ligaments falling over Cleveland's Bob Rule, who has since been dropped from the squad.

COLLEGE BASKETBALL

UCLA Can Make Up Lost Ground Vs. Notre Dame

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Tonight is the night when the West Coast's best basketball teams hope to make up a little lost ground in the national rankings.

UCLA, top-rated until its 88-game win string was rudely interrupted at Notre Dame last Saturday, undoubtedly would regain the number one spot with a big victory over those same Irish tonight at 8:30 in Westwood. The game will be televised on Chanel 2.

The Bruins looked more than ready as they flattened Santa Clara last night 96-54. Seventeen-year old freshman Marques Johnson hit 10 of 11 from the floor and 20 points in that one while big Bill Walton cashed in on five of nine fielders and settled for 14 points.

Ninth-rated Long Beach State lost a heartbreaker by two points at sixth-ranked Marquette Wednesday, but the 49ers flattened University of California at Irvine 82-58 last night and might at least hold their rating with a big win tonight over Northern Illinois. The 49ers got 19 from Glen McDonald last night in running their record to 13-2.

Southern California, derailed from the top 10 by a couple of early season upsets, might make it yet. The Trojans were sharp in winning over Seton Hall Thursday night in Madison Square Garden and strut their stuff in New York again tonight when they battle Fordham.

In Coast action last night, Stanford snapped a six-game losing streak with a vengeance with a 108-62 romp over Denver. Ed Schweitzer had 25 and 7-foot Rich Kelley 20 for the Cards in that one.

The West Coast Athletic Conference had an especially strong night as St. Mary's called on tough Hawaii and pulled out an 86-85 upset.

University of San Francisco of the WCAC finally got on the sunny side of .500 by running its record to 8-7 with a 95-57 win over San Francisco State. Phil Smith had 29 for the Dons, who are rolling after a disastrous start.

And Loyola of the WCAC upset visiting Pacific Coast Athletic Association powerhouse Fresno State, now 11-3, with a 77-74 win.

But Pacific, another tough customer from the PCAA, warmed up the tonight's game with San Francisco by taking Hayward State 78-65. Gary Dean and Ron James had 30 points for the Tigers while Stan Cherry had 22 for the Pioneers and grabbed a school record 22 rebounds.

Oregon meets Oregon State in a game this afternoon while tonight, Cal hosts San Jose State and Washington faces Seattle in a couple of neighborhood brawls.

In the all-Cal tourney at Davis, the host Aggies took UC Santa Cruz 96-67 and tonight meets UC Riverside, which ran its record to 12-3 by squeaking past UC San Diego 66-62.

In more action last night, Ron Davidson scored 22 on 10-of-13 from the floor to lead Portland to a 69-51 win over Gonzaga. Portland ran its record to 11-6, the most Pilot wins in the past decade.

Los Angeles State made it five straight with a 98-84 win over Cal Poly Pomona while Bakersfield State took Stanislaus State 86-80 despite 28 points by Steve Harris. Freshman Derrick Brooks scored 20 to lead Portland State past Idaho 75-70.

Elsewhere, Idaho State outscored Boise State 75-67, Western Washington rolled over Eastern Oregon 96-65, Pacific Christian edged Cal Tech 69-66, Fullerton bounced San Diego 85-68 and Cal Poly San Luis Obispo crushed Cal Lutheran 95-46.

'PRACTICE MAKES PERFECT'

San Diego Open Leader Kite Is Testimony To An Axiom

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Tom Kite is a living testimony to the old bromide that practice makes perfect.

The young Texan was so disgusted with his play on the pro tour that he took a week off and went back to practicing basics.

He hit bucket after bucket after bucket of balls off practice tees and when he got tired of that routine he went to the green to work on his putting.

Kite's problem was two-fold. He felt he wasn't getting enough distance off the tee and that he was putting off line. To regain his touch on the greens he laid out a carpenter's line and putted along the line rather than aim for the cup.

"It may sound strange," Kite said yesterday after a two-under par 70 had given him a two-shot lead on Ben Crenshaw after two rounds of the $170,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open. "But I simply couldn't line up my putts. It seemed that I was always off a couple of inches on either side."

Kite didn't have all that much luck putting in the second round of the Williams event but he made the most of his limited opportunities.

"I got the ball in the hole when I had to," he said. "I missed some putts I should have made but that was due more to bad luck than anything else. I had the right touch and that's important."

Crenshaw and Kite had matching seven-under par 65s in the opening round but Crenshaw, who has been battling Kite and beating him regularly since both were in the junior golf ranks around Austin, Texas, had a 72 in the second round.

Thus, with two rounds left in the chase for the $34,000 prize, Kite had a halfway total of nine under par 135 and Crenshaw was at 137.

Another shot back at 138 were Bobby Nichols, Leonard Thompson, Homero Blancas and John Schroeder, while the 139 group, five under par and four off the lead, was made up of Peter Davidson, Mike Morley, Cesar Sanudo, Bobby Mitchell, Rod Curl, Tommy Danderson, Jim Simons, George Archer, Dave Stockton and Gene Littler.

Billy Casper, Lanny Wadkins, Miller Barber, Chi Chi Rodriguez and Orville Moody were in a group at 140 and defending champion Bob Dickson was in a big group at 143 —the cut off point for the final two rounds.

A total of 74 players survived but among those who didn't were Bruce Crampton, winner of nearly $300,000 last year, Bruce Devlin, Hale Irwin, Al Geiberger, Phil Rodgers, Dave Hill and 1973 Masters champ Tommy Aaron.

Swimming Star Turrell Upset

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand, Jan. 26 (UPI) — It happens in every games — the unexpected.

Yesterday an unknown New Zealand farmer, Richard Tayler, smilingly flattened a crack field to win the final of the 10,000 meters.

Today, 18-year-old Christ church law student Mark Treffers thrashed Commonwealth Games champion Pat Hughes of Canada and favored Brian Brinkley of England to win the 400 meters individual medley.

That, too, was most unexpected.

But no one, not even her father, not one of the 5,000 fans who jam-packed the Queen Elizabeth II pool expected Jaynie Parkhouse — "Jaynie Who"—to pull off one of the great upsets in the 34 competitive years of the Commonwealth Games.

Her father — the Christchurch swimming coach — Vic Parkhouse stood openmouthed as his student daughter tipped out the Aussie teenage world champion by the margin of an uncut fingernail — 8:58.49 to 8:58.53.

The New Zealanders' victories, as unexpected as they were, had given this Games a home town lift and a shot of much needed adrenalin for the host country.

The wholesome thrill in the blue tiled pool provided a welcome contrast to the acrimony of the track and field stadium where squabbles and controversy carried the day.

Ten hours after the sensational 3,000 meter steeplechase final, in which the Welsh and Kenyans clashed in a rough and tumble gold medal chase, Christchurch was still talking about the "Davies-Mogaka incident".

Even the Games jury's decision to maintain the placings as they crossed the line hadn't quelled the argument or settled the discussions at the stadium or crowded hotel bars in the friendly city.

John Davies and Evans Mogaka, after a pushing duel, both fell to the synthetic track in the final lap, with both getting back up to finish behind Kenya's Ben Jipcho.

The meet referee disqualified Davies but the decision was reversed after the Welsh squad protested to the athletics of appeal.

TWO BIG MEN

Vice President Gerald Ford and 400-pound Munich Olympic wrestler Chris Taylor appeared at the Columbus, Ohio, Touchdown Club awards banquet last night. Taylor was honored as wrestler of the year and Ford, one of the few former Michigan football players to be welcomed in the home town of Ohio State, was cited for his contribution to politics and athletics.

West's Absence Doesn't Stop Lakers' Explosion

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Even the absence of Jerry West couldn't dampen the explosive Los Angeles Lakers' attack last night.

Sharp-shooting Gail Goodrich sank 41 points and added nine assists as the Los Angeles Lakers riddled the Capital Bullets 143-124 in a battle of National Basketball Association divisional leaders.

It was the highest total of the season for the Lakers and they did it against the club with the third best defensive record in the league.

Los Angeles had 101 points by the end of the third period and that's two more than the Bullets have averaged for the season.

The 6-foot Goodrich, scoring equally from the outside and on lay-ups, connected on 17 of 25 field goal attempts. He poured in 13 points in each of the first three periods and sat out the last 9:34 of the contest.

In other NBA games, KC Omaha downed Buffalo 118-113, Chicago edged Seattle 104-99, Boston clobbered Philadelphia 112-97, Detroit nipped Houston 93-89, Milwaukee beat Phoenix 112-108 and Cleveland downed Portland 87-84.

Nate Archibald scored 10 of his 23 points in the final period to pace KC-Omaha past Buffalo.

Bob Love entered the NBA's 10,000-point club with 34 points, including two clutch baskets in the waning minutes of the game, to lead the Chicago to a 104-99 victory over Seattle. He joined 21 other players in the club. The victory was the Bulls' third straight and marked the return of Coach Dick Motta, who was suspended for three games by NBA Commissioner Walter Kennedy for a violent outburst after a Chicago loss in Seattle Jan. 4. Seattle's defeat Friday night broke its three-game winning streak.

John Havlicek scored all but two of his 20 points in the second half as the Celtics overwhelmed Philadelphia. Curtis Rowe sank two shots in a row in the last 38 seconds last night to give Detroit the victory over Houston.

Cornell Warner and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar each hit a pair of free throws in the closing seconds to give Milwaukee its narrow victory over Phoenix.

Bobby Smith's jumper with 55 seconds remaining helped Cleveland past over injury-plagued Portland. The Blazers, who lost their seventh straight game, failed to make several attempts at a basket during the final two minutes of play in a contest that was close throughout.

Portland played without allstar guard Geoff Petrie and forward John Johnson, who between them average 41 points a game. Both were injured and their firepower was missed.

NFL Bills Swap Shaw To Cards

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — The Buffalo Bills of the National Football League traded veteran quarterback Dennis Shaw to the St. Louis Cardinals for wide receiver Ahmad Rashad, the Bills announced today.

"There has been considerable speculation that Shaw would either be traded or jump to the new World Football League since he lost his starting job to rookie Joe Ferguson last season.

"Shaw, the Bills' number two draft choice in 1970, was relegated to the bench when Ferguson won the starting spot and led the Bills to a 9-5 season, their best in several years.

Shaw never started in 1970 and tossed only 46 passes for 22 completions and 300 yards. During his career with the club, he completed 485 passes for 6,286 yards and 35 touchdowns and was intercepted 67 times.

A graduate of San Diego State University, Shaw will be reunited with his old college coach, Don Coryell, now coach of the Cardinals.

Rashad, formerly known as Bobby Moore, was drafted first by the Cards in 1972. He played college football at the University of Oregon.

Rashad, who made the UPI All-Rookie team last year, caught 59 passes for 909 yards and six touchdowns in the 1973 season.

The Bills said they will be looking for a quarterback in the draft and will also be looking at possible trades. The trade today leaves the Bills with only Ferguson and Leo Hart, a member of the taxi squad last season, as quarterbacks.

Swiss Skier Fights Off Italian Rivals

KITZBUEHEL, Austria (UPI) — Roland Collombin of Switzerland fought off a powerful Italian challenge today to win his fourth world cup downhill race this season but said he needs one more—next week at the world championships at St. Moritz.

Collombin, 21, by far the most impressive skier this winter, roared down the 3,848- yard long "Streif" track— considered the most difficult in the world—in a record time of 2:03.29 minutes, ahead of three Italians.

Stefano Anzi and Giuliano Besson, both regarded outsiders on this highly demanding track, were tied for second place in 2:03.47 while Herbert Plank, the winner of this season's opening downhill race at Val d'Isere, France, was fourth in 2:04.36.

Bob Cochran, the most consistent racer on the U.S. team, came 10th in 2:05.38, while Canada's best finishers were Dave Murray and Dave Irwin, who finished 16th and 17th in 2:06.26 and 2:06.34, respectively.

Collombin, a jolly wisecracker, rejected comments from his rivals that he has had enough wins this season.

"No," he said. "I need one more—next week at the world championships".

His victory today puts him in first place of the world cup standings with 140 points, followed by Austria's Franz Klammer, who was fifth, with 122 and Italy's Piero Gros with 120.

Collombin is the only skier to capture four world cup races this Winter. His victory in the world cup downhill is all but cinched.

Portland May Gain Grid Team

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Gary Davidson, president and founder of the fledgling World Football League, said yesterday that Portland has "better than a 50-50 chance" of becoming a charter member this year.

But Davidson told a news conference that no firm money commitments were asked or obtained at a meeting with several prominent businessmen.

The league now has 12 franchises, 10 of which are east of the Mississippi River. The other two are Honolulu and Anaheim, Calif.

"We need another West Coast team geographically," Davidson said.

He added that, if the money (an estimated $2.5 million) is raised in Oregon, the franchise switched here most likely would be Memphis, Tenn. Memphis franchise holder Steve Arnold of Corte Madera has said he would like to move to Portland if financial backing can be arranged.

Davidson said he would meet further with Bob Hazen, president of a local savings and loan firm, to discuss financial matters.

"An announcement should come very soon," he said.

Beleaguered Flames Release Hostilities

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The Atlanta Flames, smarting under the wrath of Coach Boom Boom Geoffrion, responded last night with 40 shots on goal and a 2-2 tie with Detroit.

At the rate the Flames have been sagging, a tie was welcome and Geoffrion said after the National Hockey League game, "I'm very pleased for the 40 shots, and I'm pleased with the desire they showed me tonight."

After losing Wednesday night to the Rangers in New York, Geoffrion marched the Flames straight from the plane to the rink in Atlanta for an unscheduled practice.

"Their wives were waiting for them but they couldn't go home. I gave them hell yesterday. There were a few fights on the ice. They showed me something tonight."

Keith McCreary put the Flames into the lead early in the first period with his 10th goal of the season, which was answered late in the same period by Mickey Redmond's 26th goal for Detroit.

The Red Wings took the lead in the second period on Marcel Dionne's goal, but the Flames tied it 22 seconds later when Jacques Richard knocked in a rebound.

In the other two NHL games, Philadelphia blanked California 5-0 and Minnesota edged Vancouver 5-4. In World Hockey Association action, Minnesota downed Chicago 6-2, Winnipeg clipped Edmonton 4-3 and Los Angeles beat Quebec 2- 0.

The Minnesota North Stars scored three times in the first three minutes and checked a late Vancouver rally to gain the win.

Mike McMahon drilled his first two shots of the game past Chicago goalie Andre Gill and Steve Cardwell later scored a three-goal hat trick to pace Minnesota to the WHA triumph over Chicago.

Danny Johnson fired two goals, including the winner, to propel Winnipeg past Edmonton in a rugged game. Bobby Hull, with his 34th goal of the season, and Cal Swenson, with his second, were the other Winnipeg goal scorers. Rusty Patenaude had two for the Oilers with Tom Gilmore adding one goal.

Newly-acquired goalie Jim McLeod recorded only the third Los Angeles shutout of the year in the Sharks' win over Quebec.

Foreman-Norton Title Fight Set For Venezuela

Foreman, who won the title last year in Kingston, Jamaica, by knocking out Joe Frazier in the second round and successfully defended it against Joe Roman in Tokyo, will make his next defense in Caracas, Venezuela against Ken Norton on March 26.

"The parties are in general agreement and expect to have total agreement," said Hank Schwartz, executive vice president of Video Techniques which will put the bout package together. Schwartz met yesterday with Aldemaro Romero, president of the new Polideportivo Stadium in Caracas.

Romero arrived here with a $350,000 letter of credit to seal the deal for the stadium, which can accomodate 15,000 for the bout. Financial terms call for Foreman to receive $700,000 or 40 per cent, Norton to receive $200,000 or 20 per cent.

734 Series For Henry In Bowling

Two San Rafael adults and three juniors shared the limelight this week in Marin County league bowling action.

Ed Henry Thursday night bowled a 734 series in the 910 Classic at Greenbrae Lanes. The 1973 Marin County Masters Tournament victor had games of 237, 249 and 248 — the best three-game series showing in Marin this week.

Bea Hoffmann paced the women with a 687 garnered Thursday night in the 680 Mixed Limited League at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael. She had games of 231, 265 and 191.

Greenbrae Lanes Junior League bowlers Rich Epidendio, Bryce Coleman and Larry May shined last Saturday. Epidendio, a 16-year-old Terra Linda High School student, shot a 645. Coleman, an 18-year-old College of Marin studnet, notched a 637, and May, 16, of Drake, collected a 603. They were the only Marin juniors to surpass the 600 series level this week.

Trade Shocking To Nets' Ladner

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

"I wasn't happy at first. I was with a first place club and I thought I was playing well. It's a shock to hear you've been traded. It was probably the shock of my life."

That was scrappy forward Wendell Ladner's recollection of how he felt early yesterday when he was told he had been traded by the Kentucky Colonels. But the 6-foot 5, 220-pound Ladner, who was sent to New York along with 6-4 guard Mike Gale for Nets reserve guard John Roche, needn't lament too much. At least he's still with a first place team.

First place in the American Basketball Association East followed Ladner and Gale last night as they made important contributions in New York's 93-89 victory over San Antonio and enabled the Nets to climb a game ahead of the Colonels, who were beaten 100- 94 by the Utah Stars.

"I've had a little time to think about the trade and I'm happy about it now," Ladner said after his two long range jumpers in the fourth period and excellent defense through 23 sometimes bewildering minutes helped his new club snap a two-game slide. "For one thing, I won't have to guard Julius anymore."

Julius Erving was just as glad to have Ladner on his side now. Ladner is a dogged defender and, though the Doctor burned him for 35 points last Sunday in the Nets' one-point loss to Kentucky, he made Erving work hard for all his points while scoring 28 himself.

Erving scored only 23 points against the Spurs last night to lead all scorers but he notched 10 points in the final period to give the Nets enough of spark to hold off a charging San Antonio team. Erving also added nine rebounds and six assists.

Guards Rick Mount and Johnny Neumann each had 17 points to lead Utah past Kentucky.

Indiana, led by George McGinnis with 32 points, outscored Memphis 40-25 in the fourth quarter to take a lopsided victory. The Tams, now 13-39 for the season, were in contention at 81-76 at the end of the third quarter, but Indiana's Bill Keller sparked the fourth-quarter surge that turned the game into a rout.

Frosh Basketball

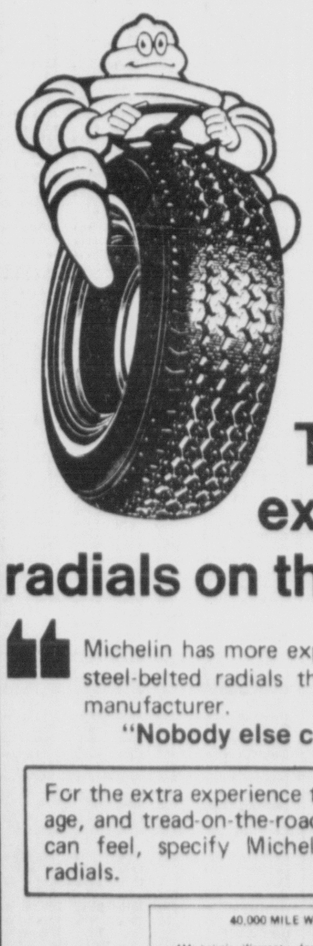

Joe Yetter and Lance Phillips scored 12 points each yesterday as host Marin Catholic High School (5-1) cruised to a 50-40 victory over visiting Drake (3-3) in a Marin County Athletic League freshman basketball game.

Flipping Out—Frisbee Style

By NELS JOHNSON

Victor A. Malafronte flipped it out in Fairfax.

A partner flipped it back.

What the pair flipped was a Frisbee, trade name for a popular plastic disk players toss to and fro, and what they were playing was the "Frisbee free style," a game akin to an aerial ballet.

An assembled crowd of youngsters from Deer Park School, treated to the display by the Fairfax Parks and Recreation Department, loved every minute of it.

The 27-year-old Malafronte, who considers himself to be one of the world's best Frisbee players, is a member of the Berkeley Frisbee Group, an informal band of Frisbee freaks who flip the lids for fun and profit.

The group has won top honors in national competitions, according to Malafronte.

"Frisbee originated in Bridgeport, Conn.; home of the Frisbie Pie Co.," he told the crowd of Deer Park youngsters. "Local college kids would buy the pies and toss the tins on campus," he explained.

One day Wham-o Manufacturing Co., a novelty company, learned of the airborne plates and, realizing there were no mere pie in the sky item, registered the name Frisbee as a trademark and began producing plastic disks, according to Malafronte.

Amid a chorus of squeals, Malafronte demonstrated the six basic throws of Frisbee: the underhand and backhand shots, the two finger side arm shot, the overhand reverse flip shot, the side arm thumb throw and the behind the back shot.

Malafronte and a colleague from the Berkeley Frisbee Group engaged in a spirited Frisbee dance, bounding and twirling through the air as they ricochetted the discs off the school blacktop, snagged them on one finger and hurtled them back.

There were boomerang shots that magically returned, shots that whistled through the air, and shots involving two and even three Frisbees simultaneously.

To Malafronte, Frisbee is a new art form.

"Frisbee has given mankind a new way of expressing himself artistically and athletically, and in the hands of a serious scientific stylist, it is a veritable new art form, comparable in its swift grace and motion to ballet and the Japanese martial arts," he said.

Malafronte, a San Francisco State creative arts major, said he first began playing Frisbee seriously in 1969. He has amassed a collection of more than 300 of the disks since then.

Malafronte is so talented with the plastic saucer that Wham-o has sent him to several national Frisbee competitions, where he has won top honors.

He has also appeared in a beer commercial doing his Frisbee act, and entertained spectators at halftime during Warrior basketball games.

"I am a serious, freaked out Frisbee freak," he declared, admitting to daily work outs with the disk.

"When the energy crisis first came down, I worried about a Frisbee shortage because they are petroleum-based products," he said.

"But Wham-o has assured me that they have enough Frisbees stockpiled to meet the 1974 demand."

THE LAST WORD

Chances Are Good Your Grocer Won't Run Out Of Paper Bags

By BETTY FROST

Will Marin women be walking to the market place in sturdy shoes, bringing string bags or market baskets to carry home the day's groceries?

While crystal balls are admittedly murky on the future availability of paper and petroleum products, the answer seems to be "not yet." Furthermore, rumors that customers in other parts of the state are being charged directly for the customary carry-home paper sack find no substantiation in the Bay region.

The virtues of recycling in the paper industry have been known and practiced for years, because they are good business, and may have received only a little added emphasis by the current crunch.

Leon Dillenburg, director of education for the Bay Area Grocers Association, explained that there are currently no shortages of the ordinary "barrel bag" used to carry groceries out of the store, but that increased costs of such paper products may well be passed along to customers.

"Recycling paper is nothing new," Dillenburg said. "Paper companies have been doing it for years. However we are not too keen about reuse of the barrel bag, because if there is any moisture in the bottom of the bag, it can dissolve the glue."

Nothing like a bottomless bag.

"POLYETHELYNE BAGS are a by-product of petroleum refining and represent a use for what was formerly a waste product. The clear bags have reduced shoplifting because the clerk can easily see if a steak or two has been carefully placed under a sack of onions. Many shoppers also find a useful secondary use for the polyethelyne bags at home," Dillenburg continued.

The plastic foam used for meat trays, cups and other containers is also a by-product of petroleum refining. The plastic netting in which such produce as lettuce and grapes are wrapped allows air to keep the perishables fresh. The netting also prevents spilling and lessens the possibility of skids and tumbles in the produce section, he said.

Peninsula representatives of a large paper concern were reluctant to talk for publication and their public relations department is on the East Coast. However they freely gave "background material."

The company, said to be a large controller of land in the United States, second only to the federal government, grows and harvests trees like a farmer grows corn. Many of its forests are located in the southern states. It follows a genetic program that produces taller, straighter trees, starting from seed.

The paper industry is constantly developing new packaging that takes less paper, and continually recycles paper. But federal law prevents packaging food products in recycled paper because of possible contamination.

United Markets, with headquarters in San Rafael, prepares corrugated paper for recycling by securing it in bales and sending them to a recycling center.

FRED SACCONE, vice president of United Markets, spoke of current problems in the grocery business. "We have not experienced any great shortages of anything," he said. "We keep an inventory on hand. If we can't get one brand, we take another, or we take another size. From time to time there is a spot shortage. We handle each problem as it arises."

The United Markets are not double-bagging any more. They are using a heavier grade of double-walled bag, instead.

Can't fight your way out of a paper bag? It looks like we won't be fighting for them, either. At least not now.

FIRST WOMAN RESERVIST

By DOROTHY NEWELL

A woman has broken the barrier in Novato.

Sara Glasser, the first woman accepted, has made the grade as a reserve officer and hopes eventually to go on to beome a regular police officer on the force.

She passed the oral exam, and then, last Saturday, the first time she ever fired a weapon, she passed the weapon's test using a .38 caliber revolver at the police firing range in San Rafael along with five men in the new reserve outfit.

Sara had her choice of a .38 or a .357 magnum. She preferred the .38 because it is a lighter weapon. She will also be taught the use of Mace. Her response when questioned about eventually carrying these weapons was, "It's just part of the job."

THE RESERVISTS act as back-up "men" for the officers in Novato, where there is only one officer in a car. Most of the cars stopped have been for traffic violations, when Sara was with an officer.

Officers Ronald Basque, head of the Novato reserves, und Barney Reynolds were in charge of the target practice Saturday.

Mrs. Glasser said reservists only have to put in two-hour shifts on Saturday nights, but she said she enjoys the job so much she has spent as many as six and seven hours a night. Officer Basque said the reservists put in an average of 34 hours a month on the beats when only 12 hours is required for the program.

In February, Mrs. Glasser will take a semester in administration of justice, a three-unit course covering search and seizure, laws of arrest and firearms training, at College of Marin.

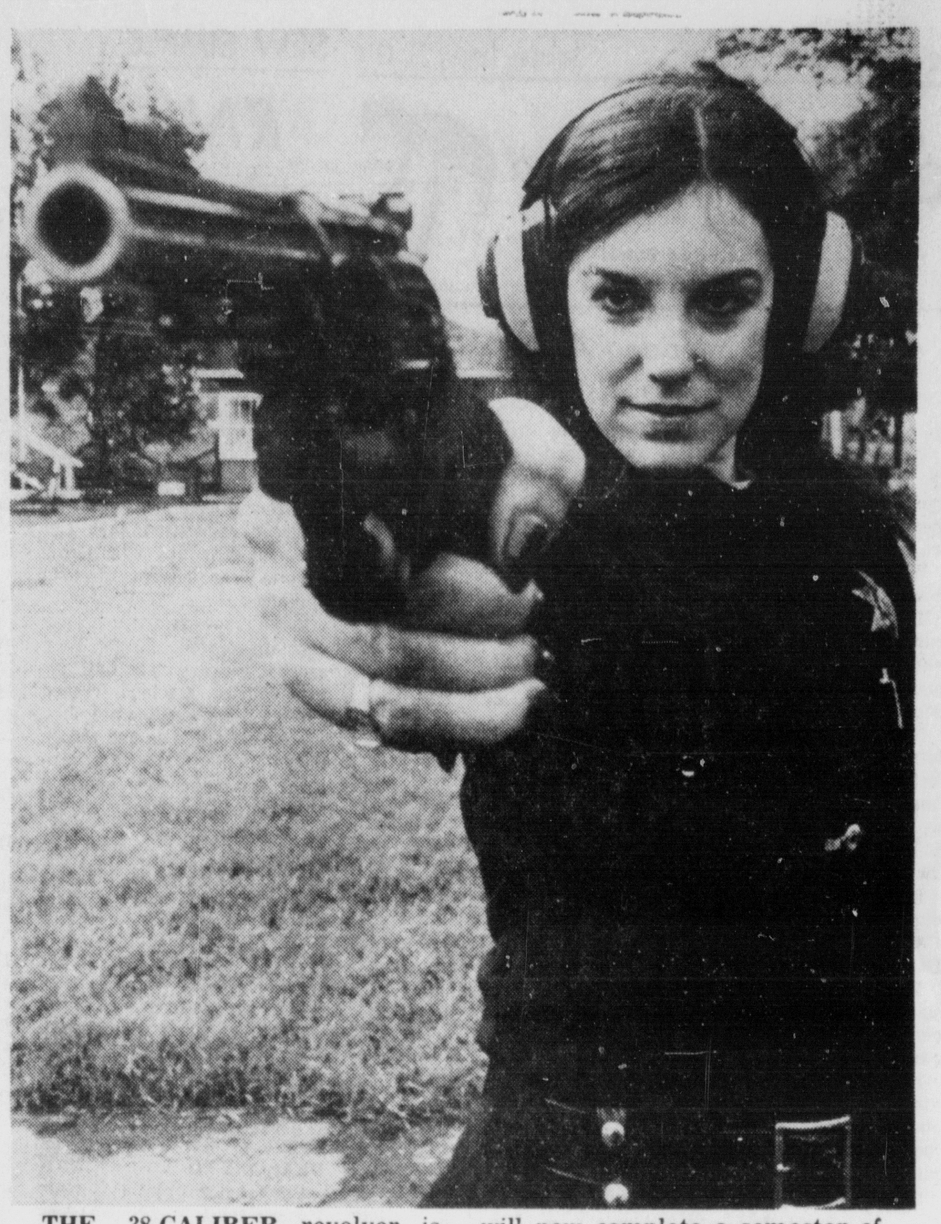

Sara, 28 years old, was graduated from San Rafael High School and attended Linfield College in McMinnville, Ore., two years before going on a year's tour of Europe. She came back to San Francisco and met and married her husband, Frank, seven years ago. He is employed with the state Department of Transportation. They moved to Novato in September.

IT WAS AFTER she met her husband, who rode a motorcycle, that she became involved in police work. She took a civil service examination, and has been a meter maid in San Francisco the past five years. She checks the tow-away zones in the financial district on the morning shift and Chinatown in the afternoon, riding a three-wheel motorcycle. She enjoys it, she said, because it keeps her outside.

"But it's a little scary riding the cycle over the cable car tracks" she said, "especially when the tracks are wet or icy."

Sara said her husband worries about her at times when she is out late on the beat as a reservist in Novato.

"But he knows that's what I want to do," she said.

THE .38-CALIBER revolver is pointed at the target by Sara Glasser, the first woman to be accepted in to the all-male force in the police officer's reserve in Novato. The target practice was held at the rifle range of the San Rafael Police Department. Sara will now complete a semester of three-units in administration covering search and seizure, laws of arrests and firearms training, at College of Marin. She accompanies a regular police officer on the force at least 12 hours a month. (Photo by Jim Kean)

Luau Is Held In Students' Honor

By MOLLY MARIN

Mrs. Walter Hall hosted a luau yesterday at her home in Tiburon for foreign students and local students who have studied abroad.

The guests included six Brazilian boys, who are touring the Bay Area for a month; students at Redwood High School, who have studied in Europe on the Redwood International Student Exchange program; and foreign students currently attending Redwood.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

What Was Intended As Joke Backfires On Two Sisters

DEAR RAP:

My sister and I are getting the silent treatment from someone we like very much. We wonder if this is fair, and how we can make him stop it?

While in class, you see, we wrote on my jacket with chalk, "Mr. So-and-so has a cute rear end," using the name of our student teacher who is young and real nice. We were pretty good friends, before.

Now, he just looks at us, and hits his fist in the other hand. Nobody saw the jacket but him (and he wasn't supposed to — we were just goofing off, and were going to erase it right away).

Don't you think he's making a big deal out of a little thing? — CASE OF SILENCE

DEAR C OF S:

Maybe, maybe not: It isn't such a "little thing" when students start a joke or saying that can get the class giggling about a new teacher. It's hard enough for an instructor to stand before one of his first groups, without the added fear that the kids are just sitting there waiting for him to turn his back. — SUE

DEAR COS:

. . .So apologize, tell him no one else saw the jacket-billboard, you're sorry —and I think you'll be "pretty good friends" again. — HELEN

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

I'm 15 and have a lot of freedom since my parents got divorced. One night on my way home from my boyfriend's (just after we'd had a fight, so he didn't walk me home), a man stopped me and asked me where the Baptist church was. He seemed okay. So I started to give directions, and he suggested I take him there. I was terribly dumb. I got in the car.

We drove past the church before he pulled the knife. I was raped — and afraid to tell anyone. I was ashamed because I'd been so stupid.

Now, I'm pretty sure I'm pregnant. My folks would never believe the truth, and will only blame my boyfriend. Maybe he won't believe me either. What can I do? — IN TROUBLE

DEAR IN TROUBLE:

You must tell your parents. Whether they believe you or not, they can help you through this trouble. Unless you've given them much cause to mistrust you, they'll probably be more understanding than you think. — SUE

NOTE TO READERS:

We printed this letter because we receive so many like it.

All too often a girl or woman won't report a rape, and the reasons are frighteningly apparent: She fears the repeated questionings, the veiled disbelief, the implied guilt and shame connected with a court case, should it come to that. She'd rather just pretend it never happened, if she can. This especially if she suspects, as "Troubled" did, that she might be blamed for "dumb" actions.

Later, when complications develop (VD or pregnancy), the rape story sounds fabricated, and she feels stranded, with nowhere to turn.

We urge again: if you are attacked, tell someone immediately! Get a medical examination. Even though you dread questioning, make your report to the authorities — you may save others from harm if you help put the rapist in jail.

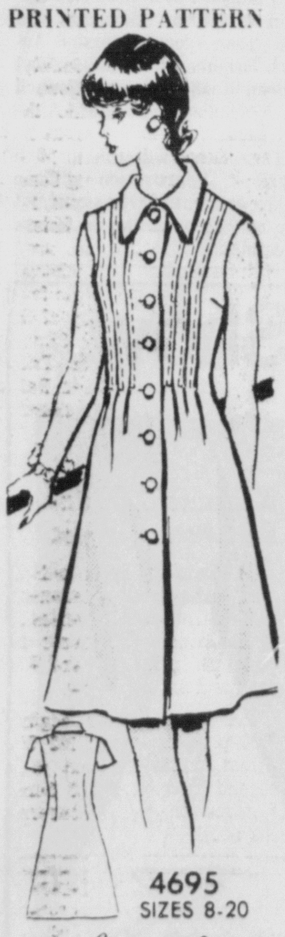

We realize the ordeal of reliving a rape scene is miserable, but (perhaps as a result of recent publicity on the traumas caused by crude investigations) police departments are learning how to handle such cases with more consideration for the victim.

The only way we'll stop this epidemic of rape is to let the criminal know he won't get away with it. Don't help him by remaining silent! — HELEN

SEW SIMPLE

RN's Suggestion Proves Valuable

By EUNICE FARMER
Distributed by the Register and Tribune Syndicate

Here's another useful tip from a registered nurse.

DEAR EUNICE,

Thank you for the opportunity to let us write you and express our opinions about this mysterious world of home sewing. I am an RN and have stumbled onto a great suggestion that I'm sure will help any others who have to wear uniforms in warm climates.

Make your uniforms from permanent press sheets. They are half polyester and half cotton, can be machine washed and dried and need no pressing. The sheets are wide and can be used economically and are much less expensive than any type fabric for uniforms. I prefer to wash and dry my sheets first before cutting, just as I pre-shrink the zippers, interfacings, etc. Hope this will help others who resent the high cost of dressing in uniforms.

DEAR EUNICE,

Why do pattern companies continue to put a seam in the back of stretchable knit blouses? Can we cut the back on the fold and avoid the seam which is annoying to look at? — MRS. D. J. C.

DEAR MRS. D. J. C.,

I'm not sure why this is done. I guess most women who sew are still used to facings and zippers. If you wish to keep your tops more like the ready-made ones, avoid the facings, and just turn the raw edge to the inside and machine stitch.

These body shirts don't need zippers as a rule because there is enough natural "stretch" to the fabric and can easily be slipped on and off. If you wish to avoid the back seam, place the center back seam line on the fold.

DEAR EUNICE,

Please clear up an argument I am having with a friend of mine. She tells me that Quiana is a polyester and the clerk in the fabric shop didn't seem to know. — MRS. M. K.

DEAR MRS. M. K.:

Quiana is 100 per cent nylon, and the name is a trademark used by DuPont. Quiana is less than five years old, and originally was out of reach for the average woman. It was so expensive that it was used by the designers only. Today, with more availability, it is very reasonably priced and comes in many weights and types, including velvet, taffetas, silk type twills, knits.

Everyone who uses this new fabric seems to love it. Quiana is completely washable and requires no pressing, is great for travel and packing, and is a year-round fabric. If you live in a very hot climate, you may find it a bit warm to wear because it is nylon.

DEAR EUNICE,

I have an old sewing machine that belonged to my mother, and it has always behaved beautifully for me. Now I am having problems. My latest was making a heavy latex nylon swim suit — the machine kept skipping stitches and yet the repairman tells me that nothing is wrong with my machine. Can you offer any suggestions? — VIRGINIA P.

DEAR VIRGINIA,

Remember that today we have a whole new world of fabrics, the stretchables, sheer knits, and such, many of which were unheard of 10 years ago. The old sewing machines weren't made for these fabrics of today and many of them simply won't work because of tension, feed control, and so on. In the case of the swim suit you are making, be sure to use a ball point needle and a larger size. The stretch nylon is a tough knit and probably too heavy for your present needle. You will have to experiment to get the best results.

If you are shopping for a new sewing machine, I can't recommend too highly one that has built-in tension that adjusts to the weight of the fabric and the thread automatically. Be sure to take any prospective sewing machine home with you for a few days and give it every test leisurely.

Most important, test a new sewing machine's ability on those difficult fabrics, such as knits of all types and stretch fabrics. Test for "ripping" as well as stitching, because (let's face it, gals), we do have to rip occasionally and some of the stretch stitches available cannot be ripped.

A sewing machine is one of the major purchases of any household. They are very expensive and must be chosen with care. If a company is constantly coming out with new models, be careful, because you're liable to purchase a machine that has built-in obsolescence. Please write to me if you desire any more information about the sewing machines available today. A good sewing machine makes sewing much easier.

Try making some unusual gifts with your machine. Ideas abound in the booklet, "Boutique Gifts." For your copy, send 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal, Box 330, San Rafael.

Think About Pan Storage Near Water

Where you store kitchen utensils can save some time and steps in the ordinary day. Pots seem to belong near the stove, but water is often needed to begin cooking, so a better plan might be to store pans near the sink, suggests the Soap and Detergent Association.

Try keeping hot cereals, rice, noodle and measuring utensils near the stove. Group together sifter, rolling pin, flour, mixer and cake pans and cookie sheets. Grouping utensils and foods that are used together often is a good plan, says the association.

Best Detergent Depends Upon Water Conditions

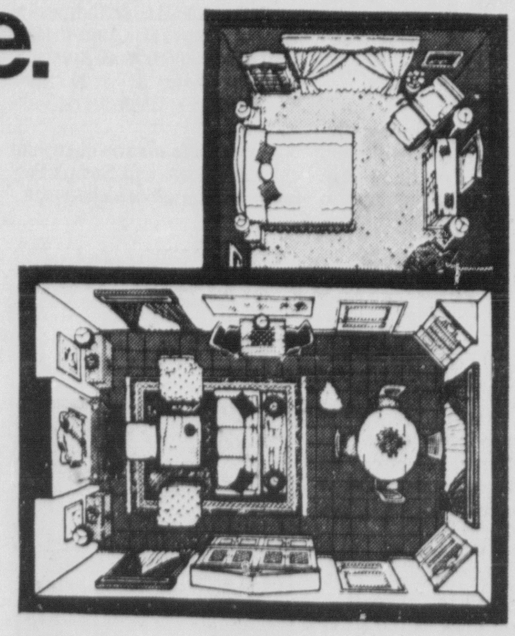

The primary purpose of a soap or detergent is to loosen and remove soil from fabrics and to hold the soil in suspension in the wash water until it is drained away. There are many products on the market designed to do just that. Which you choose depends on water conditions in your area, the kind of washer used, fabrics laundered, degree and types of soil and personal preference.

Soaps and detergents are classified according to use. The Soap and Detergent Association offers the following information to assist in the selection of laundry products for individual needs.

It should be noted that the main difference between a soap and detergent is in the way each performs in hard water. While soap is satisfactory in soft water, in hard water it reacts with the minerals, to form an insoluble curd or film which deposits on clothes.

PEDALING PARSON — When gas rationing hit during World War II, Rev. Richard Irvin took to his bicycle to visit members of his church. Today the 59-year-old is back aboard the two-wheeler to help ease the energy shortage, though he admits riding is a little more difficult than it was 30 years ago. (UPI Telephoto)

Preacher Is Again Pedaling Around To Visit His Flock

HOUSTON, Tex. (UPI) — During World War II the Rev. Richard Irvin rode his used bicycle with coaster brakes to save fuel and track down backsliding church members.

Today, the 59-year-old pedaling preacher has answered the energy call and again is hopping on his two-wheeler to terret out sinners.

"I had a bicycle on hand and when the announcement of the limitation of fuel came I began to ride not just for pleasure but for the visitation of my church members and their homes," he said. "It makes me feel better physically and it seems like I have a more healthy communication with everybody I meet along the way. There are days now that the car never leaves the garage."

On most days the slightly balding minister slips his shiny 10-speed racer out of the garage and pumps his way along the shady streets that crisscross the neighborhood where most of Oakwood United Methodist Church's 299 members live.

The Rev. Irvin encouraged his congregation to conserve energy, and although there hasn't excactly been a run on local bike shops, he knows the word is getting out.

"They are very pleased that I am interested in practicing what I preach," he said.

"I visit the regular members, those who are sick, prospective members — just any of the regular visitation programs I have. I get on my bicycle and do it."

After riding in the cushioned comfort of an automobile for three decades, the Rev. Irvin admits it was more difficult to resume bike riding than in 1942 when he bought his "plain vanilla" bike for $7.50.

"It's a little more an adjustment to make now," he said.

"There didn't seem to be any question about a shortage as there are questions now among many elements of our society that maybe this isn't for real.

"We were into the rationing system hardly before we knew it. And that's the difference. It wasn't as gradual then as it is now."

OF GOD AND MAN

The Conversion Of Paul

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

(EDITOR'S NOTE — This will be the last "Of God and Man" column by Louis Cassels, United Press International's religious editor who died Wednesday night of an apparent heart attack.)

The Christian Church throughout the world is celebrating this week one of the most important events of its history.

It occurred in the year 33 A.D. A zealous young Pharisee named Saul was riding along a dusty highway between Jerusalem and Damascus. He was going to Damascus with warrants to arrest and imprison members of a new Jewish sect called Christians.

Saul regarded Christians as blasphemous heretics. For they claimed the long-awaited Messiah had already appeared in the person of Jesus Christ. Saul felt certain Jesus could not have been the Messiah.

Jesus had been ignominously put to death by crucifixion, and Saul could not believe God would let that happen to the real Messiah.

As Saul approached Damascus, according to his own subsequent account, "a light from the sky suddenly flashed all around him," He was so afraid that he fell to the ground.

Then he heard a voice saying, "Saul! Saul! Why do you persecute me?"

"Who are you, Lord?" Saul asked.

"I am Jesus, whom you persecute."

Never has a single event more thoroughly transformed a man. From a persecutor of Christians, Saul became the greatest of all Christian missionaries.

To symbolize his new commitment as a faithful and utterly fearless servant of the Christ in whom he had hitherto disbelieved, he changed his name to Paul.

Once he had overcome the suspicions of the original Christian apostles — who were understandably wary of the conversion of their former enemy — Paul made three long, hazardous missionary journeys through the Roman Empire.

He concentrated especially on the countries of Asia Minor on the eastern end of the Mediterranean, planting Christian churches wherever he went.

When problems or dissensions arose in one of his young churches and he was unable to go in person to resolve them, Paul wrote letters to them. Cherished and carefully preserved by the early Church, these epistles today form more than half the text of the New Testament.

Although we know much more about Saul's beliefs than his appearance and personality, available evidence and his own writings indicate he was a short bald headed bowlegged man; sensitive, proud and hot-tempered; afraid of women and anxious to keep them "in their place" in the church; almost totally devoid of a sense of humor.

He suffered from a chronic disease, probably epilepsy.

No one demonstrated better than Paul the agony of the human condition which he once bewailed by saying: "The good I would do, I cannot do; the evil I would not do, I do."

Paul was capable of great love, magnanimity and forgiveness. But he could also lash out at critics with sarcasm.

On balance, Paul is not the warm personality that Jesus was. What stands out most vividly about Paul is his absolutely unswerving devotion to his late-discovered Lord and his unshakable conviction that only through Christ could weak and sinful men like himself attain enough grace to be reasonably decent human beings.

A brilliant man by any standard, Paul interpreted the Christian gospel in its infancy with such persuasive lucidity that his imprint has forever remained on Christian teaching.

As Dean Alexander C. Purdy of Hartford Theological Seminary once said: "Paul must be reckoned as second only to his master, Jesus Christ, as a creative personality in Christianity."

REV. FREDERICK JAGOW
New Resurrection pastor

New Pastor Takes Over Tomorrow

Resurrection Lutheran Church in Terra Linda will install its new pastor at 9:45 a.m. tomorrow. He is the Rev. Frederick Jagow, who is coming here after serving three years at a Lutheran congregation in Hilo, Hawaii.

Pastor Jagow took his theological training at Concordia Theological Seminary, Springfield, Ill. He earned a bachelor of arts degree at Xavier University, Cagayan de Oro City, Philippines, and has done graduate work at the university.

His first assignment after the seminary lasted for 12 years — as a missionary in the Philippines. His assignments included Iligan City, Medina, Misamis Oriental and Cagayan de Oro City. The major emphasis of his work was evangelism. While assigned at Cagayan de Oro City he served as pastor to the city congregation and two barrio (village) congregations. The work program for the entire area included five other barrios where Sunday school, vacation bible school and Bible study classes were regularly conducted.

In Hilo, community services were an important part of Pastor Jagow's ministry. He is the 1973/74 president of the Hilo-Inter-faith Counseling Service and was the organizer of he Hilo chapter of GROW, Group Recovery Organizations of the World.

The Jagows are a family of seven. Lois, Mrs. Jagow, has been teaching in Hilo three years in Christ Lutheran Nursery School. Deborah, 16 and Mark, 15, are attending Concordia Lutheran High School, Portland, Ore., Rhoda, 14, Kristine, 12, and Jonathan, 10, are at home attending local schools.

Rev. Jagow will be the fourth minister in the history of Resurrection Lutheran Church. Rev. Arthur Nitz of Trinity Lutheran Church in San Rafael has been serving both churches for the last six years.

Acupuncture Will Be Lecture Topic

A DAY FOR CHILDREN

Conservatives Cheer Reagan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan of California brought hundreds of conservatives cheering to their feet last night with a speech on the need for more individual freedom, less government and a strong military.

Reagan, a possible candidate for the GOP presidential nomination in 1976, was the principal speaker at the 1974 Conservative Political Action Conference sponsored by the American Conservative Union and Young Americans for Freedom.

The former Hollywood actor, speaking at a $125 a plate dinner, kept his audience laughing, applauding and cheering with a mixture of jokes and a cataloguing of "what's right" with America.

Reagan won the most applause after saying the "lesson of Vietnam" had been that young Americans should not be sent to fight abroad "unless we pledge all our resources to win a victory as quickly as possible." Such a statement he said, might open him to the charge of "warmongering ... but that would be ridiculous."

Reagan also drew applause after he accused "those on the other side" of saying that conservatives want to "take the country back to McKinley."

"Of course, I never found that so bad," he said.

Reagan spoke at length about the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution. He said other countries, including the Soviet Union, had borrowed from the latter in drawing up their own constitutions.

But "Under other constitutions," he said, "the government grants you these rights. ...Ours says you were born with these rights and no government on earth can take them away from you."

When Reagan finished he received a standing ovation during which members of Young Americans for Freedom chanted, "We Want Reagan."

ICE CREAM AT LAST

Kosher Seal Of Approval Given

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Rabbi's wife knew what she wanted, so now San Francisco's ice cream-loving Orthodox Jews are finding their favorite confection "strictly kosher."

But they'll have to suffer along deprived of rocky road, chocolate chip and tutti frutti. And the cones are out too.

After ice-creamless years of frustration, the Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregrations has given the kosher seal of approval to 25 flavors available at Uncle Gaylord's Old Fashioned Ice Cream parlors.

"I'm just crazy about it," said Dinah Schick. "I was so frustrated that I kept asking my husband, 'Isn't there a kosher ice cream.' "

Her husband, Rabbi Michael Schick, who certifies products as kosher, told her there was no ice cream in San Francisco that complied with the strict Jewish dietary laws.

Commercial ice creams available here contain preservatives, emulsifiers, stabilizers, chemicals, geletins, artificial flavorings or artificial colorings which can be made with animal derivatives.

To be kosher, meat must be killed in a prescribed fashion and certified by a rabbi. Since there was no way to guarantee that manufacturers weren't including non-kosher animal derivatives in ice cream, it was impossible to given the kosher seal to any commercial ice cream.

Undaunted, Mrs. Schick pressed on, hunting a solution to her ice cream cravings. Several months ago she found one. She heard about Uncle Gaylord's and learned that except for three flavors contained no additives.

An excited Mrs. Schick passed the news to her husband and soon afterward, Rabbi Schick made a thorough inspection of the company's manufacturing equipment, ice cream ingredients and premises.

The verdict: ice cream at Gaylord's is kosher except for rocky road whose marshmallows contain animal derivatives and tutti frutti and chocolate chip which use non-kosher sherry. But no cones or toppings allowed because they also include non-kosher additives.

Gaylord said the result of the kosher seal has been a 5 per cent increase in business.

Mrs. Schick has been satisfying her long-neglected ice cream cravings with her favorite strawberry, her husband reports.

No Verdict Again In Prison Case

For the second time in two months, a Marin Superior Court jury yesterday was unable to reach a decision in the case of a San Quentin inmate charged with assaulting a guard.

Following two days of deliberations, the panel reported to Judge E. Warren McGuire that it was deadlocked 9-3 for conviction of Burl Lloyd Brown, 25.

Another jury deadlocked 6-6 in December following a four-day trial. The most recent trial also lasted four days.

Brown, a convicted armed robber from San Diego County, is accused of striking guard Francis J. Roland on the head with a three-foot piece of wood in the prison laundry last March.

Water Rate Hike To Be Discussed

The North Marin County Water District board will have a workshop on a proposed hike in water rates at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the district office, 999 Atherton Avenue, Novato.

As proposed the rate for 100 cubic feet of water would be 32 cents, up 8 cents, and all users, large and small would pay at the same rate.

Under the present system, large users pay at a lesser rate per cubic foot than the smaller users.

"CRAZY"

That's what they told us - trying to sell a house ourselves in winter! But we will because it's a beauty.
On ¾ acre in complete privacy w/that famous Kent Woodlands prestige - private driveway - patios - decks - POOL - and other features too numerous to mention (as those real estate people say). Looks like Frank Lloyd Wright but more comfortable!
How about a floor-to-ceiling rock fireplace? Or a 60' long picture window? Or new, luxurious, rich carpeting throughout? Or a secluded private garden for the master bedroom? Not to mention a super GUEST HOUSE for that troublesome teenager or in-law! PLUS walk to S.F. bus stop.
See it - you'll love it! How about $115,000.

Nonsmokers Arise — They're The Majority

TOBACCO SMOKE is, in the opinion of informed authorities, the most dangerous of all air pollutants. To nonsmokers, it certainly is the most objectionable.

The U.S. surgeon general has warned that breathing smokers' air may be hazardous to nonsmokers' health.

Nonsmoking adults outnumber their smoking counterparts two to one. Until recently, nonsmokers — despite their numbers — have in effect been a persecuted minority.

Now at last, the nonsmoking majority is becoming more insistent or its right to breathe wholesome, smoke-free air.

Let's hear it for San Anselmo City Councilman Martin Blinder. At his instigation, the council has agreed that on Feb. 19 it will discuss Blinder's suggestion for regulating smoking in public places.

Let us hope that some meaningful action results.

SOME CITIES have banned smoking in retail stores and elsewhere.

Nearly every U.S. airline has finally segregated smokers and the Civil Aeronautics Board probably will make the practice mandatory.

The Interstate Commerce Commission adopted a similar rule for interstate bus service. Unfortunately, the rule has been challenged and is presently not enforced. Smoking IS prohibited on Golden Gate Transit buses.

Some motels and apartments now offer discounts to nonsmokers.

The Mayo Clinic has long prohibited smoking in its waiting rooms and patient areas.

Two national organizations — ASH (Action on Smoking and Health) and GASP (Group Against Smokers Pollution) — have emerged as increasingly effective advocates of the rights of nonsmokers.

A new California law, authored by Sen. James R. Mills, D-San Diego, provides that every railroad, bus and airliner operating in the state must provide designated space for nonsmoking passengers."

Four other nonsmoker rights bills introduced in the 1973 legislative session — three by Assemblyman John V. Briggs, R-Fullerton, and one by Sen. Arlen Gregorio, D-San Mateo, apparently have been lost in the shuffle.

One of these (AB 202, Riggs) would require designation in all public accommodations of specified places where tobacco smoking is prohibited. Specifically mentioned are hospitals and other public and private health care facilities, every room, chamber, place of public meeting or assembly in which public business is conducted, wherever motion pictures, stage dramas, music recitals or other public performances are presented, and every restaurant room with a capacity of 50 or more.

AB 202 was referred to the Assembly Committee on Criminal Justice and there it reposes.

MEANWHILE, HERE in Marin, we nonsmokers, including those of us with rather serious allergies to tobacco smoke, must inhale the exhaled smoke of others while we wait in doctors' offices, while we try to enjoy a drink or a meal in a restaurant, and even while we attempt to watch a public activity like a football game.

Awareness is at last building that nonsmokers ARE the mainstream.

Earlier this week when the matter was under discussion at the San Anselmo council meeting, a spectator rose from the audience to declare, "If you don't like smoking (in public places) then stay out."

Nonsmokers have been discriminated against too long. Nonsmokers do constitute the majority. Smoking IS the most dangerous form of air pollution. The surgeon general has warned against the hazards of breathing the exhaled tobacco breath of those who smoke.

It is time for the nonsmoking majority to say to smokers, "If you must smoke, stay out."

Correction

The last name of the visiting judge who dismissed the San Quentin Six indictments was mis-spelled in editorials on Monday and Tuesday. The name was carried as Vernon Stohl. The correct spelling of his last name is Stoll.

Restless Raccoons

Marin's raccoons are restless, alert creatures, driven by hunger and fear and by a strange curiosity that transcends their own species. They are fascinated by man, yet at the same time frightened by this often-vicious, unpredictable two-legged giant. Many raccoons make more or less regular rounds each night, staying longest where the entertainment is best and the food to their liking and plentiful. But they always move on. They are almost religious in their seeming belief that things are more interesting next door. At least, that is the way they appear to us.

Squirrel Stew

Probably most younger Marinites never thought of Mr. Bushytail Squirrel as suitable item for dinner. Yet, those of the generation that grew up on mostly on farms before World War I are well aquainted with the dish in many guises. Pioneer women showed their good sense and thrift by taking the meat of the squirrel and making a variety of tasty dishes. However, it is probably good that we have lost our taste for squirrel because, with so many of us now, the poor squirrels wouldn't have a chance.

CAPITOL QUIPS

By PHIL DESSAUER

In these times of supply problems, the White House is proving to everyone's satisfaction that there's no shortage of lawyers.

Maybe the oil industry should be taken over by the government. Then it could be turned into a model of economy and efficiency like the postal service.

Drawings Help Patrol Promote Traffic Safety

I have written to Mr. Jack Lucey expressing my thanks for his superb drawings which have, over a period of months, depicted Highway Patrol philosophy on a variety of subjects which are critically important to the motoring public.

I did want to let you know of my deep appreciation as well, for his contributions to the traffic safety effort have been both timely and influential.

You are fortunate to have a man of such talent.

Smokers Should Also Have Rights In Hospitals

I'm sure Dr. Hill is quite correct in his letter ("Readers Say," Jan. 21) that nonsmokers should have rights in hospital, but also so should smokers. Smoking is still one of our liberties, even though supposed to be bad for our health, and even though most of the severest critics of smoking are reformed smokers, than which there is nothing worse.

At the prices patients are now paying doctors and hospitals, both should provide the smoker with at least gold-plated ashtrays, and let him go to hell in style.

Burton Not Claiming Credit For Idea

In one of Paul E. Peterzell's recent columns, he stated that I am trying to take credit for a proposal advanced by Sen. Peter Behr and others concerning the building of an executive office in conjunction with the governor's mansion and rehabilitating the present state capitol as strictly legislative space.

I have not in the past and do not try to claim credit for such a proposal. I have merely in my responsibility as chairman of the Joint Rules Committee of the Legislature proposed that this possibility be studied and contrasted with the other studies that have been done concerning legislative and governmental space needs.

The concept of an executive office building in conjunction with the governor's mansion has come from many sources, and I am merely reacting to those proposals by introducing a resolution. I have not endorsed that concept or any other concept at the present time. . .

Comparisons Drawn In Letter Ridiculous

Mrs. Ida Johnson's apparent comparison of Martin Luther King with Marx, Lenin and Stalin (I-J, Jan. 17) is ludicrous.

The Communist leaders were responsible for purges that killed thousands of their own people in efforts to wipe out the dissenters to the Communist form of government. They also succeeded to closing almost all of the churches in Russia in their anti-Christianity drives.

Martin Luther King was a non-violent religious man, who crusaded peacefully for the rights of his people. He had a dream of equality for the black people, as promised by the U. S. Constitution. He never struck back when attacked by the whites, who hated and feared him for his crusades, for — like Jesus — he believed that he must "turn the other cheek." . . .

Mrs. Johnson, I am not black (or militant or Communist) but I mourn the untimely death by violence of Martin Luther King, who was a bridge of sanity between the white bigots and the black militants.

About all that Martin Luther King wrecked in America was the idea of white supremacy.

How Far Should Secretary Go For Boss (And Vice Versa)?

WASHINGTON — The Rose Mary Woods tape incident has raised a great moral issue in this country: how far should a secretary go to protect her boss?

I posed this question to my secretary, Ellie Cobey, the other day. "Ellie," I asked her, "would you lie for me to keep me out of jail?"

"I do it all the time," she replied.

"I don't mean that kind of lying," I said. "I mean if I committed a high crime or a misdemeanor."

"THAT'S THE ONLY kind of lying I do for you," she said. "Like when you're taking a nap and I tell people you're in conference, or when you've taken some beautiful girl to lunch and I tell your wife that you're at the Watergate hearings. Or when someone calls and asks you to address a Lions Club and I tell them you're going to be in Tucson. I can't remember a time when I haven't lied for you."

"All secretaries do that," I said, "I mean REALLY lie. Suppose I tape-recorded a conversation I had with Frank Sinatra in which he told me his personal thoughts about Maxine Cheshire, and these tapes were subpoenaed. Would you erase those tapes for me?"

"You mean by pressing the play button and the record button at the same time?" she asked.

"If you couldn't erase it with your foot, yes."

"Wouldn't that produce a hum?" she wanted to know.

"Possibly," I said. "But we could explain away the hum by pointing out that you had your electric typewriter and a lamp on the same time."

"It sounds rather farfetched to me," she said.

"THAT'S NOT the point. The point is would you, as my personal secretary, be willing to get on a stand and swear under oath that to the best of your knowledge the erasure of that particular tape was an accident?"

"Are you asking if I'd commit perjury for you?"

"Well, if you want to be technical about it, yes."

"Couldn't I refuse to testify on the grounds that it would incriminate me?" she asked.

"You could," I said, "but that would not be showing much candor. I think because of my position it's important that all the truth come out. If you're going to take it upon yourself to erase tapes to protect me, I think you should be willing to pay the price for it."

"THAT WASN'T the question," she protested.

"Ellie, even if you are my secretary, I can't condone a crime that you have committed."

"Are you trying to tell me that if I perjured myself to help you, you wouldn't protect me?" she said.

"Ellie, this is a land of laws, not of people. No matter what your motives were, the position of trust I hold would demand that I see that justice is done."

"Does that mean I would have to go to jail?"

"Ellie, jail isn't that bad. Some of our best people are going to jail for perjury."

SHE STARTED to cry. "I don't know how I got into this."

"It's all right, Ellie," I said, trying to console her. "We all make mistakes. The important thing is to be big enough to admit them and take your punishment. I'll forget we had this conversation, unless of course I'm impeached."

Huge 'Defense' Budget Increase From Inflation Plus New Weapons

WASHINGTON — Get ready for a shock. The rumor on Capitol Hill is that the defense budget for fiscal year 1975 will be $93 billion. This will be up from the actual spending for the current year of $79 billion.

That is a startling measure of the inflation that is spiralling upward so fast. For the $93 billion, if that is the figure unveiled in coming weeks, includes no new developments. It covers only ongoing programs. The increase is due largely to inflationary price rises and to pay increases.

An appraisal by the congressional joint economic committee put the total for '75 at $86 billion. But this did not include possible new obligational authority of $5 billion to $6 billion which may be included in the budget request.

The Department of Defense is expected to come in shortly with a supplemental request of $2.3 billion to $3 billion. That would go in part for aid to Israel and South Vietnam. It is also to upgrade strategic readiness which was revealed by the Middle East alert as lagging.

BUT THIS IS ONLY part of the shock to come. The likelihood is for massive new weapons systems that will cost many additional billions of dollars. That can be surmised from the Delphic utterances of Secy. of Defense James R. Schlesinger about "retargeting" of America's nuclear striking force.

Translated from the dense vocabulary of the nuclear weaponeers, this signifies a whole new nuclear strategy that has thus far been only dimly perceived outside the small circle of those who determine these matters. It would be hard to exaggerate the portentous nature of this change, for it means a shift from mutual deterrence to a counterforce.

Retargeted ICBM missiles would be capable, in theory at least, of knocking out Russian silos rather than destroying Russian cities in response to a nuclear attack on the United States. This opens the way to a "nuclear war fighting capability," as the war planners call it, rather than deterrence which has kept the peace for 20 years.

Even if retargeting could assure that military targets would be hit — and this is far from certain — there is no assurance that a nuclear exchange would not go on to destruction of the cities of each side. And the Soviet Union would have reason to believe that the counterforce coming into being might well be a first strike capability. Thus, the whole nuclear structure would be shaken to its foundations, with consequences impossible to foresee.

WITH RETARGETING requiring a vast array of new nuclear weapons costing billions of dollars, the prospect for any agreement out of SALT II, which resumes in Geneva at the end of the month, are dimming to the vanishing point.

It has long been true that what one side gets the other side is sure to strive for, and so the see-saw goes onward and upward.

A strange commentary is how little any of this gets through to the public. One reason may be that minds are closed to what seems beyond the comprehension of the average person and so fearful in its meaning that the only recourse is to shut it out. So Schlesinger and the top level weaponeers have the field to themselves. As the New York Times put it in a powerful editorial:

"The strategy of deterrence has preserved the world from nuclear holocaust for two decades. Unpleasant as it is to live under the nuclear sword of Damocles, the wisdom of trading it in for this dangerous new doctrine is highly doubtful — and surely deserves more national debate than it has yet received."

But one thing the average citizen does understand and that is the rapidly rising cost of everything from a gallon of gasoline to a loaf of bread. While the Defense Department has reduced its fuel needs, a spokesman recently testified that the Pentagon's fuel bill would go up this year between $750 million and $1 billion. Military inflation across the board is contributing to the cost squeeze that hits every household budget.

Can this go on into the indefinite future? No one in the administration up to this point has an answer. A great deal of hand wringing goes on as each month's figures show the spiral up once again.

Big military spending is sure to be another kicker.

Congress Gives President Power, Then Decries His Use Of It

By ARNOLD B. SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In the late 1950s, it was political chic to embrace the theory that the country needed nothing so much as a real take-charge president.

The promise of an activist presidency was a major element of John Kennedy's 1960 campaign. But his victory was so narrow that he never really dared to try it out, with the possible exception of the Cuban missile crisis.

The theory got its test after Lyndon Johnson won big mandates in 1964 and 1972. Both expanded the traditional limits of presidential power and both got the country into nasty situations. This has made the Cult of the Strong Presidency about as popular as snake handling in church and propelled a number of its former true believers into print with recantations.

WITNESS ARTHUR M. Schlesinger Jr., the political historian whose works on the Jackson and Franklin Roosevelt eras could be taken as manuals for presidential activists. In his latest book, "The Imperial Presidency," he says in his foreword:

"Especially in the twentieth century, the circumstances of an increasingly perilous world as well as of an increasingly interdependent economy and society seemed to compel a larger concentration of authority in the presidency. It must be said that historians and political scientists, this writer among them, contributed to the rise of the presidential mystique."

What has this led to? Says Schlesinger: "The constitutional presidency — as events so apparently disparate as the Indochina War and the Watergate affair showed — has become the imperial presidency and threatens to be the revolutionary presidency."

ACADEMICS LIKE Schlesinger are not the only source of "mea culpa" pleas. Sen. J. William Fulbright wrote last year in his book, "The Crippled Giant," that "celebrants of the presidency have found it appropriate" in recent years to reconsider the notion that the chief executive was "the fountainhead of wisdom, creativity and humanitarianism in politics."

"I do not say this with any personal pleasure or pride, because I myself was among those who took an ingenious view of presidential power until the disaster of Vietnam compelled me to re-evaluate my position," Fulbright wrote.

Most who now see a "runaway presidency" do not favor over-reaction. The usual prescription is for Congress to reassert its authority and reclaim powers assumed or usurped by recent White House occupants.

THE PROBLEM WITH THAT — recognized by Schlesinger and Fulbright but ignored by others — is that Congress has been the willing victim for much of the presidential rip-off.

It was, after all, Congress that overwhelmingly gave Johnson the Tonkin Gulf resolution in 1964 with little debate; did nothing to stop its use to fight a major war; did not act to rescind it until 1971.

It was Congress, too, that gave Nixon power to impose wage and price controls in 1972 and Congress that is now preparing to hand him power to make all kinds of decisions on energy, including gasoline rationing.

Congress obviously cannot fly the B52s, supervise grocery prices, or pass out ration coupons. But it can decide whether such things should be done instead of voting time after time to let the president make vital decisions on specific questions of national policy.

This kind of lawmaking has been described as preparing for emergencies and promoting efficiency. It also has been called political buck-passing. Whichever fits, the effect is the same: to sell out congressional power.

WHAT TO DO — A Nigerian ponders a problem — the possibility of more income. While a nation of small markets, Nigeria is expected to triple its income from oil sales by 1975.

Behind The News

TOO MUCH?

Nigeria Has Money Problems

By HENRY S. HAYWARD
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

LAGOS, — Nigeria — Nigeria's unexpected tripling of its oil income in just one short year will have tremendous repercussions at home.

It is in some ways an enviable predicament: Can the Nigerian government cope with its growing income from increased oil profits?

And neutral experts here calculate that the country will earn no less than $7.5 billion in 1975, due to current price increases.

If the oil revenue is pro-rated over Nigeria's huge, low-income population of 70 million people, the amount per person is less than overwhelming.

Even so, making best use of the oil money is a prickly problem. To come up with workable plans for the country's long-range welfare and to see them properly implemented will almost certainly stretch to the maximum Nigeria's thin veneer of administrative and managerial talent.

Although the top level of Nigerian management has a reputation for a high caliber, the middle echelon that carries out business, government, and construction programs is not generally so well educated nor skilled.

Probably the most ironic problem facing the planners is a gasoline shortage — in a country that produces 2.3 million barrels of oil a day.

Nigeria currently imports 10 per cent of its gasoline. And some experts believe it may have to import 20 to 30 per cent of its petrol needs at sky-high prices if domestic consumption continues to grow at the present rate.

This surprising shortage stems from insufficient refinery capacity. Nigeria has one refinery at Port Harcourt which produces sixty thousand barrels per day for domestic consumption.

One new refinery has been announced but not yet built at Warri. Another, at Kaduna, is under consideration. Until these are in operation, Nigeria faces spending some of its crude oil revenues for purchases of refined gasoline abroad.

But with so much crude to sell — and production is increasing by 10-12 per cent a year as new fields are developed faster than old ones play out — few here expect Gen. Yakubu Gowon's government to run into serious difficulty in finding industrial nations willing to exchange some of their own precious gasoline for a large amount of good Nigerian crude.

As of last August, the latest month for which figures are available, this country had 88 producing oil fields, mostly in the southeastern delta area. Nigeria has both onshore and offshore oil, in the ratio of 70 to 30.

It is known oil reserves are probably enough for 10 to 20 years at current production rates. The government, however, is determined to conserve this natural resource as long as possible.

Instead of speeding up production at all costs to take advantage of booming prices and the world oil shortage, the government intends to hold increases to a modest, planned rate. It can effectively control the output of foreign oil companies here by restrictions on new leases and drillings.

As a national resource, Nigeria's oil ranks with Zambia's copper and South Africa's gold, diamonds, and coal as one of the foremost money producers in Africa south of the Sahara.

"Oil has given Nigeria vitality, influence, and stature in Africa," a Western informant declared in Lagos. "But equally important, it provides a vast sum with which to improve living conditions here."

HONEYMOON OVER

U.S.-Sino Relations Are Leveling Off

By CHARLOTTE SAIKOWSKI
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON — The honeymoon is over.

After a period of euphoria generated by the historic presidential pilgrimage to Peking and subsequent high-level U.S. visits, Sino-American relations are settling into more routine, institutional patterns of diplomacy.

As a result, the U.S. and China are getting into more and more of the kind of problems that characterize dealings between a Communist and a non-Communist country.

Far from being an ominous development, say U.S. State Department officials, this is a healthy sign that relations are becoming more normal. Since Washington seeks a stable relationship with China, such a trend is deemed desirable and welcome.

Gone are the early days of excitement for the staff of the U.S. liaison office in Peking, which has now had a realistic taste of life and work in the Chinese capital. For some there are grumps and gripes. American administrative personnel are still housed in a hotel, for instance, while the Chinese here were able to purchase a hotel and have their own quarters.

As the range of bilateral relations expands — and U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger says he looks at an acceleration of this process — the lack of housing and office space poses a problem for the American side. The Chinese in the U.S. have no worry on this score.

But solving these and other problems is now more difficult. It used to be that decisions could be and were made at high levels and therefore took less time. But the Chinese are operating through normal, bureaucratic channels and, because more government officials are involved and Chinese bureaucrats are not as free-wheeling as their American counterparts, decisions take longer.

There are delays on visa applications by American citizens, to cite an example.

"When things were new, every matter got high-level action on both sides and got done," comments a U.S. official. "Now a routine proposal does not go to the top but is processed by some Chinese bureaucrat."

For the moment, two-way cultural and scientific exchanges have slowed, with no Chinese group visiting the United States or American delegation traveling in China.

A package of ten exchanges in each direction was tentatively agreed upon when Dr. Kissinger was in Peking in November, and details and dates are being worked out. These exchanges are not expected to begin until April.

American cultural officials say they are not running into resistance from the Chinese, who are still interested in sending their scientific and technical people to this country. But they suggest that a scarcity of facilities in China and perhaps unresolved domestic problems are inhibiting factors that keep Peking Government from making needed policy decisions.

Washington clearly would like to move into longer-term exchanges, with scholars visiting each other's countries for six months or a year's academic study. That presumably will be the next sought-after step in the exchange program.

One area of decided and unexpected progress is trade. Commerce Department officials anticipate that the United States will export between $1.1 billion and $1.3 billion worth of products to the People's Republic this year, including about $1 billion worth of wheat and other grains. Imports from China, including textiles, handicrafts and rugs are put at between $100 million and $120 million.

While the imbalance in trade in the U.S. favor is still huge, the gap (if forecasts prove correct) should thus narrow somewhat. Nevertheless U.S. policymakers recognize that the sensitive problem of most-favored-nation tariff treatment for China must be resolved if trade is to develop normally. Of as much symbolic importance to the Chinese as it is to the Russians, MFN could be a prickly obstacle to further Sino-American detente.

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The week's news started off ominously Sunday with China mounting an all-out land and sea attack against three South Vietnam bases on the disputed Paracel Islands in the South China Sea.

In a matter of 20 minutes all three positions were captured, giving China complete control of the archipelago 200 miles east of the South Vietnam central coast and 200 miles south of China's Hainan Island.

South Vietnam requested an urgent meeting of the U.N. Security Council on the new crisis. And although an American Embassy employee, assigned to the Saigon government's navy as an observer, was among those missing in the attack on the islands, the United States refused to send ships and helicopters for rescue purposes.

Foreign Minister Vuong Van Pac called in foreign ambassadors in Saigon to explain the situation and filed complaints with the United Nations and "friendly" countries.

Twenty-three survivors of South Vietnamese warships sunk have been picked up since the weekend, and 59 still are missing. There have been no reports of the fate of the 150 troops or Gerald Kosh, the American, who were stationed on the islands. A total of 13 died in the fighting and 37 were wounded.

Around The World, Around The Clock

WASHINGTON — Several congressional committees began work to determine the seriousness of the nation's energy crisis, who caused it and what can be done about it. Hearings produced figures showing at least six oil firms had bigger supplies at the end of 1973 than in 1972, but the firms' officers said that proved little since oil supplies were below average at that time.

Later in the week President Nixon asked Congress to approve spending $1.5 billion during the next fiscal year for a crash program aimed at making the United States self sufficient in energy.

LONDON — In Britain's economic crisis Prime Minister Edward Heath met with major union leaders to try to avert all-out strikes. The meetings were a failure, leaving the government and unions heading into a test of strength and the crippled economy caught in the middle.

AZUL, Argentina — As a result of a seven-hour guerrilla attack on an army tank garrison in Azul, in which five persons were killed, President Juan Peron has ordered a massive drive to end terrorism in Argentina. A bill being debated in the legislature would outlaw political associations not specifically approved by the government and provide stiff penalties for incitement to violence.

KILOMETER 101, Egypt — Egypt and Israel paved the way for a separation of forces at the Suez Canal by agreeing on the final details of a troop withdrawal accord. The head of the U.N. peace force in the region, Finnish Lt. Gen. Ensio Siilasvuo, called it "the initial step toward understanding, reconciliation and peace in the Middle East."

HEUSDEN, Belgium — Twenty-two boys, aged 12 to 15, were asphyxiated when fire swept through a Roman Catholic school dormitory. Two others are in serious condition with second and third degree burns, and 40 more students escaped.

WASHINGTON — According to the Labor Department's statistics consumer prices shot up 8.8 per cent last year. Higher food prices accounted for half the rise and fuels another 10 per cent. The nation's inflation in 1973 was the severest since price controls were abolished after World War II.

Amused Muscovites look at a poster in a shop window on Gorky Street attacking the recent publication of Soviet author Alexander I. Solzhenitsyn's book which attacks the country's penal system. The poster shows the book with the author's name and skull and crossbones and depicts a group of musicians labeled, "The Anti-Soviet Orchestra," calling Solzhenitsyn a traitor.

Sabotage Held A-Plant Danger

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The greatest potential danger of nuclear power plants bursting forth with clouds of deadly radioactive gases comes from sabotage, legislative researchers testified yesterday.

Bernard D. Haber and Charles Washburn, of the energy panel of the Assembly Science and Technology Advisory Council, said they were unsatisfied with current safeguards against internal or external assault on nuclear facilities.

The two recommended to the subcommittee on state energy policy that nuclear plants in California be sited only in low-density population areas, and that population growth be controlled, until plant security is proven satisfactory.

Haber is vice chairman of the advisory council; Washburn a professor at Sacramento State University.

Of events that could lead to the feared "class 9" nuclear failure, Haber testifed, "in the long run, sabotage represents by far the most serious threat."

The "class 9" accident involves the potential release of clouds of radioactive materials that can cause illness and death.

The testimony reinforced a May 1973 report by the advisory council on the safety of nuclear generating faciliites.

The men told the subcommittee there had been no evidence to change their minds about the risk of assault on one or more of the plants by "a group of undetermined size bent on a suicidal terrorist act."

Currently, managers of nuclear power stations form their own security plans under the review of the federal Atomic Energy Commission.

Haber and Washburn urged the legislature go behind closed doors and study the matter in greater detail.

The testimony came at another in a series of hearings by the energy subcommittee on the safety of nuclear plants. Another Sacramento session is scheduled for Feb. 1.

Right Card Must Be Selected In Switching Suits Or Boom

Your partner's opening lead is sometimes just a guess. If it seems like a good guess or if you have nothing better to suggest, you continue his suit. There's nothing immoral, however, about leading a suit of your own — provided that you pick the right suit and the right card.

NATURAL LEAD

It was natural for West to lead a spade, but there was no future in the suit. Declarer did his best, however, to disguise the situation by playing the jack of spades from dummy at the first trick.

East won the first trick with the king of spades and wondered if his partner had a long suit headed by Q-10. But if South had only 9-x-x of spades he would surely play the low spade from dummy rather than the jack. (This would work for South if West had led from K-10 or from Q-10, but playing the jack would work only if West had led from K-Q).

East came to the correct conclusion: South was not really afraid of the spades. Dummy's diamonds were strong and South had bid clubs, so East decided to shift to a heart.

LOW LEAD FAILS

East was quite right, but he slipped in choosing the card. He returned the eight of hearts.

Declarer played low, and dummy was able to win the trick with the nine of hearts. Now South could force out the ace of clubs and assure the contract with four clubs, two diamonds, two spades and at least one heart.

SECOND TRICK

East should lead the queen of hearts at the second trick. South wins with the king and must tackle clubs. West takes the ace of clubs and leads a heart, whereupon East can take three heart tricks to defeat the contract. If South refuses the first heart trick, East continues with a low heart to produce the same fine result.

DAILY QUESTION

♠ - A J 2
♥ - J 9 3
♦ - A K 10 9 7
♣ - 9 7.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one diamond.

If partner voluntarily bids a major suit you will gladly raise. This is better than doubling one club for takeout, thus urging partner to bid a major suit whether or not he wishes to do so.

Chavez Allies Plan Legislation For Secret Ballot Elections

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Legislative allies will introduce next week a United Farm Workers bill to provide secret ballot elections for California agricultural workers, UFW leader Cesar Chavez said yesterday.

He told a news conference the bill would bar growers from signing contracts with any union not designated as collective bargaining agent by a majority secret vote of the workers.

"This will end the disgraceful practice of the growers and the Teamsters getting together and forcing Teamsters contracts on the workers," Chavez said.

Many growers last year refused to renew UFW contracts and instead signed agreements with the Teamsters.

In Sacramento speculative reports have said that Assembly Speaker Bob Moretti, Democratic contender for governor, would carry the UFW bill.

Moretti's staff aides said he has consulted with the UFW and the California Labor Federation on the bill drafting.

Chavez and John F. Henning, AFL-CIO federation secretary, said several legislators are ready to carry the bill and specific sponsors will be reported next week.

Grower-backed bills for secret worker voting on union representation have died in the legislature and Prop. 22, a ballot measure, was soundly defeated in the November 1972 election.

The grower-backed proposals called for barring secondary boycotting such as Chavez employed with supermarket picketing against non-UFW lettuce and grapes. They also barred harvest time strikes.

Chavez said the UFW bill is a simple one for secret union representation voting and says nothing about boycotts.

Henning said the grower bills also contained eligibility rules that would have "eliminated two-thirds of the field workers from voting."

He said their entire purpose was to destroy the farm workers union.

Chavez said these were the UFW bill's key provisions:

The agricultural workers secret election law would be administered by three commissioners appointed by the govenor and confirmed by the state Senate.

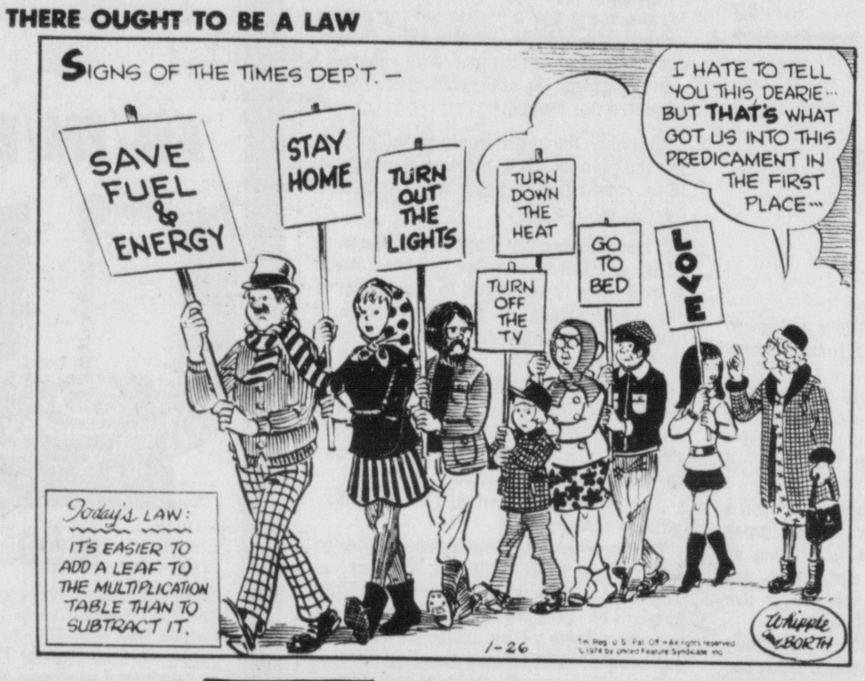

An election must be held within seven days after the filing of a petition signed by 50 per cent of the grower's work force.

Both growers and unions would be barred from coercing or intimidating the workers. Specifically growers would be banned from firing or threatening discharge of any worker for union activity.

Both Chavez and Henning said they were confident the legislature would pass the bill. Henning said he felt that there was a chance that Gov. Ronald Reagn would sign it.

"He's been saying for years he wanted secret elections for farm workers. He hasn't said anything about boycotts. We hope to put this bill on his desk," Henning said.

Today is Saturday, Jan. 26, the 26th day of 1974 with 339 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter. Technically there is no morning star. The evening stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

American Gen. Douglas MacArthur was born Jan. 26, 1880.

On this day in history:

In 1837, Michigan became the 26th state.

In 1861, Louisiana seceded from the Union.

In 1950, India ceased to be a British dominion and became the Republic of India.

In 1971, Russia said it had landed an unmanned spacecraft on Venus and that it was sending data back to earth.

A thought for the day: Gen of the Army Douglas MacArthur said, "It is fatal to enter any war without the will to win it."

Most bears avoid humans, so hikers on the Great Divide Trail in the Canadian Rockies sometimes tie small bells on their packs so grizzlies will hear them coming.

ART REVIEW

The Creativity Of Louise Nevelson

By ADA GARFINKEL

SAN FRANCISCO — The exotically rich yet awesome assemblage sculptures of Louise Nevelson are strangely compelling, evoking a multitude of responses and identification which have little to do with their origins.

In this New York artist's exhibit at the San Francisco Museum of Art through March 10 — the second leg of a national six-museum and art-center tour extending into 1975 — 80 of her sculptures on loan from major collections fill three galleries.

Working intuitively and according to "her own reality", Mrs. Nevelson, a strikingly handsome and dynamic 74-year-old artist, is "guided by my own vision."

Looking elegantly regal in a fashionably "layered" costume topped by a flowing chinchilla-lined brocade coat and a plum-colored visor cap, on her arrival from New York to attend the opening of her San Francisco show, she stated at a press conference:

"The world is a great mystery and is becoming more so in its physical components. I follow my own feeling about materials and objects. I don't question my own breathing, and I don't question what I do creatively!"

Her greatest impact upon the art world has been with her enormous "environmental walls." Constructed of "found" objects — architectural details, mill-ends, discarded and disassembled furniture, and even every-day "ready-made" elements, their final aggregation is much more than the sums of their parts.

The "walls" are modular constructions made up of cases or boxes which are stacked and joined into large, free-standing units.

Primarily architectural in feeling — some are as high as 15 feet and as wide as 30 feet — her works are filled with geometric and natural objects and elements, some recessed and others in relief.

In their totality there is a "grand design." Their narrow depth — usually about 14" — lends a precarious quality to them. Questioned about their balance, Mrs. Nevelson said: "If they didn't have law and order, they wouldn't stand."

The artist never sees her elements as chair legs or balustrades, as finials and cable spools, or as splintered shingles or 2 by 4s. "I'd be lost if I did," she declared. Their contour lines and textures become "drawings in wood; some things draw themselves — such as knotholes and cracks."

Mrs. Nevelson who composes everything by eye, improvising as she goes along, starts out by pre-painting all of her parts a uniform black or white. The total sculpture is either all black or all white. Each rhythmic element becomes part of an over-all light-catching and light-reflecting surface, exuding an aura of mystery and poetry.

A richly Baroque quality characterizes some "walls" such as "Sky Cathedral Presence" and "Homage to 6,000,000." "Night Focus Dawn" is severly simple with stalactite-and-stalagmite-shaped units dominating. "Black Crescent," "New Continent" and "Tide 1 Tide" exert a similarly sharp contrast to the austerity of the sky-scraper-like "City Reflection."

"New Continent" — one of the few white sculptures and the "Jig-saw-puzzle" "Mirror Image I" shows the artist's affinity both to the Cubiest rationalism and to the delightful irrationalities of Miro and Klee. Both attitudes reflect her personal philosophy about human needs in an urban environment.

Mrs. Nevelson contends that people have need for both "metaphysical and physical architecture." This would include housing, places of worship, productive working sites, and special places for psycho-emotional fulfillment.

Mrs. Nevelson's broad outlook finds expression in several series in her exhibit. Her basic themes in addition to the impressive "environmental walls" include "table-top landscapes," "columns," "reliefs" and "boxes."

The last would include the reliquary-like "Cryptics" — a "storage chest of memories and treasures" perhaps, and the seven sandcastle-like "Dream Houses" — wondrous wish-fulfillments of the "kind of house I never had."

Relationship to elemental forces are conveyed in the tall, slender "Rain Forest Columns," the totemic-like group of "Young Trees," and the spiky, two-part "First Personage."

Others, such as the grid-like precision of small objects fitted into the narrow slots of type-setting cases, or the gleaming white poetry of "Dawn's Wedding Pillow" and "Dawn's Wedding Chapel" are also "distillations of experience."

This exhibit, which will travel to the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts after its San Francisco showing, may be seen at the San Francisco Museum from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. The museum is at the corner of Van Ness Avenue and McAllister Street.

Sinatra Returns To Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Singer Frank Sinatra, welcomed back by one of the greatest gatherings of celebrities ever for a night club opening here, returned to the stage last night for his first show appearance in this gambling resort in more than three years.

Opening with "Come Fly With Me," Sinatra sang for about an hour, saying little, highlighted by the standards, "My Kind of Town," "I Get A Kick Oout of You,""You Make Me Feel So Young," and "I've Got You Under My Skin."

Gamblers, packed about eight persons deep for about 40 feet, lined the entrance to the main showroom at Caesers and applauded each show business luminary as they made their entrance.

Among the 50 entertainment celebrities in attendance were Don Adams, Eddie Albert, Jack Benny, Edgar Bergen, Suzanne Pleshette, Rosalind Russell, Red Skelton, James Stewart, Danny Thomas, Esther Williams, Zsa Zsa Gabor, Milton Berle, Jack Benny, Sammy Davis Jr., Johnny Carson, Ed McMahon, Neil Diamond, Carroll O'Connor and Ricardo Montalban.

Sinatra, who has an eight-day engagement booked here this week with another as yet unscheduled week later in the year, made his first appearance since 1970. In the interim, he had announced his "retirement," but changed his mind and returned to show business.

The opening night audience of 1,500 was by special invitation, but tickets are scaled at $30 for the rest of the engagement, probably the most expensive ticket price ever for an act here, with $15 a head for Elvis Presley previously the highest-costing.

Fair Will Be Part Of Centennial

A centennial faire in the style of an old-fashioned country bazaar will be held May 25 at Forest Meadows at Dominican College as part of San Rafael's 10-day 100th birthday celebration.

Space is now available for organizations wishing to participate, said fair director Charlene Skinner. All participants will wear costumes of 1874 and the theme will be carried through in red, white and blue decorations.

Food, game, crafts and exhibit booths will be filled on a first-come basis, said Mrs. Skinner. Applications may be obtained at the Centennial Committee office, San Rafael City Hall, weekdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The site of the fair was formerly called Foster Park and was acquired by Dominican College in 1927. In 1906 the park was a refugee camp for victims of the San Francisco earthquake-fire.

Nixon's Deed Date Questioned

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The deed justifying President Nixon's tax deductions for his vice presidential papers was signed after a July 1969 cutoff for such deductions, the California secretary of state's office said yesterday.

Deputy Secretary of State Thomas Quinn said principals involved in the case have told him the deed dated March 27, 1969, actually was signed and notarized more than one year later, on April 10, 1970.

Quinn said the information came from Frank DeMarco Jr., Nixon's California tax lawyer; DeMarco's secretary, and others.

Also, Quinn said an investigation disclosed that the typewriter used to prepare the deed and an accompanying affidavit was purchased for DeMarco's Los Angeles law office in July 1969 — four months after the documents were dated.

The office of Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr., a Democratic candidate for governor, has been investigating the case because it oversees notary public activities in California.

"The deed could not have been prepared before July of 1969," Quinn said in an interview. He said the April 21, 1969 date notorized by DeMarco was "obviously false."

The information came in a legal deposition from the secretary and an informal discussion with DeMarco, Quinn said. DeMarco is tentatively scheduled to make a formal deposition next Wednesday in Los Angeles, Quinn added in an interview.

Quinn said DeMarco told the secretary of state's office that an original deed actually was executed in April 1969, before the expiration of the tax law that permitted Nixon to claim income tax deductions.

But DeMarco said he had no copies of the original deed, Quinn said. The deputy secretary of state added that neither the original nor any copies had been located.

The White House has disclosed the President claimed deductions of $482,000 over the past four years for the gift of the papers. That enabled him to pay less than $6,000 in federal income taxes the past three years, on total income of more than $800,000.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Texas Criminal Justice Council has been allotted a $580,000 frant to be used to improve criminal justice systems and fight crime by providing technical and financial assistance.

Moretti's Plans No Secret Now

FRESNO (AP) — Assembly speaker Bob Moretti's certain intention of running for governor seeped into several press conference remarks yesterday even though he won't announce formally until Tuesday.

Moretti noted he flew here from Sacramento to name a subcommittee to investigate fuel allocations to farmers, then had to leave for Los Angeles. "If any of you want to drive yourselves crazy, run for governor," the Los Angeles Democrat told newsmen.

"Is that an announcement," asked the Associated Press.

"I expect to make one Tuesday," Moretti replied.

Later, Moretti was asked if he will stay in the governor's race despite any obstacles in the light of decisions by state Sen. George Moscone, state Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger and former Lt. Gov. Robert Finch not to run. "We're going in with the intent of going all the way to win the election," Moretti said.

The fuel allocation subcommittee, lacking legal sanctions, will depend heavily on public pressure to make oil companies deliver amounts farmers need as ordered by the federal energy office, Moretti said.

"I believe to some extent we can be successful just by bringing it to public attention and putting the oil companies on the spot," he said.

The subcommittee was formed in response to complaints that farmers and crop dusters are having trouble obtaining enough fuel, Moretti added.

THE EXCITEMENT OF TRAVEL

One Thing Is Certain: The Interest Is There

By DON KEOWN

"It's a crystal ball kind of year," Marin's travel advisers tell us, confessing that things are in such a state of flux that confident predictions for the 1974 vacation traffic are virtually impossible.

Most unpredictable of all the factors, they add, is the fuel shortage and its eventual impact.

Whether the crisis will ease or worsen seems to be anybody's guess.

And already it is making itself felt, as some airline passengers reporting to the airports are greeted with the announcement that their flight has been cancelled, and that they will have to wait upon a later departure.

SOME TRAVEL agents say frankly they suspect the airlines of using the fuel shortage as an excuse for cancelling less patronized and less remunerative flights, thus increasing their payloads upon the flights that do depart.

"I am confident that the airlines are using the energy shortage to their financial advantage," says one agent. "I expect that they will come out of this situation smelling like a rose, financially."

Which is small solace for the passenger who despite reservations and tickets in hand, finds his flight, domestic or overseas, cancelled with short notice.

STILL, SAY MARIN'S travel advisers one thing is certain in this winter of uncertainty:

The interest in and urge to travel among Marin residents is as high as ever.

Agencies report that there has been no slackening of early planning for travel at their offices.

"BECAUSE THE situation is so confused and involved," he says, "the traveler who might have made his own plans and arrangements in the past is now likely to turn to us and our experience and facilities."

"He will," the agent adds, "be wise to do so."

Another element in the 1974 travel picture is a domestic one. Especially if gasoline is rationed, more and more motorists planning to visit grandfather and grandmother, or other kin, in other regions of the country will be likely to leave the automobile at home and travel by public transportation. Must U.S. resorts and sights are also accessible by such transit. This will also involve a greater use of the professional services of the travel agent.

THE AMTRAK TRAINS, the buses and the domestic airlines should also benefit greatly from this trend.

As the interest in jet travel holds strongly, the interest in cruise vacations continues to swell, the advisers say.

Cruise ships should enjoy a very brisk patronage in 1974, if the energy shortage doesn't clamp down on their schedules.

And as far as destinations are concerned, a number of agents reported a very high level of interest in the South Pacific this year, from Hawaii on west to Australia, New Zealand, Japan, Fiji, Tahiti and the Asian mainland.

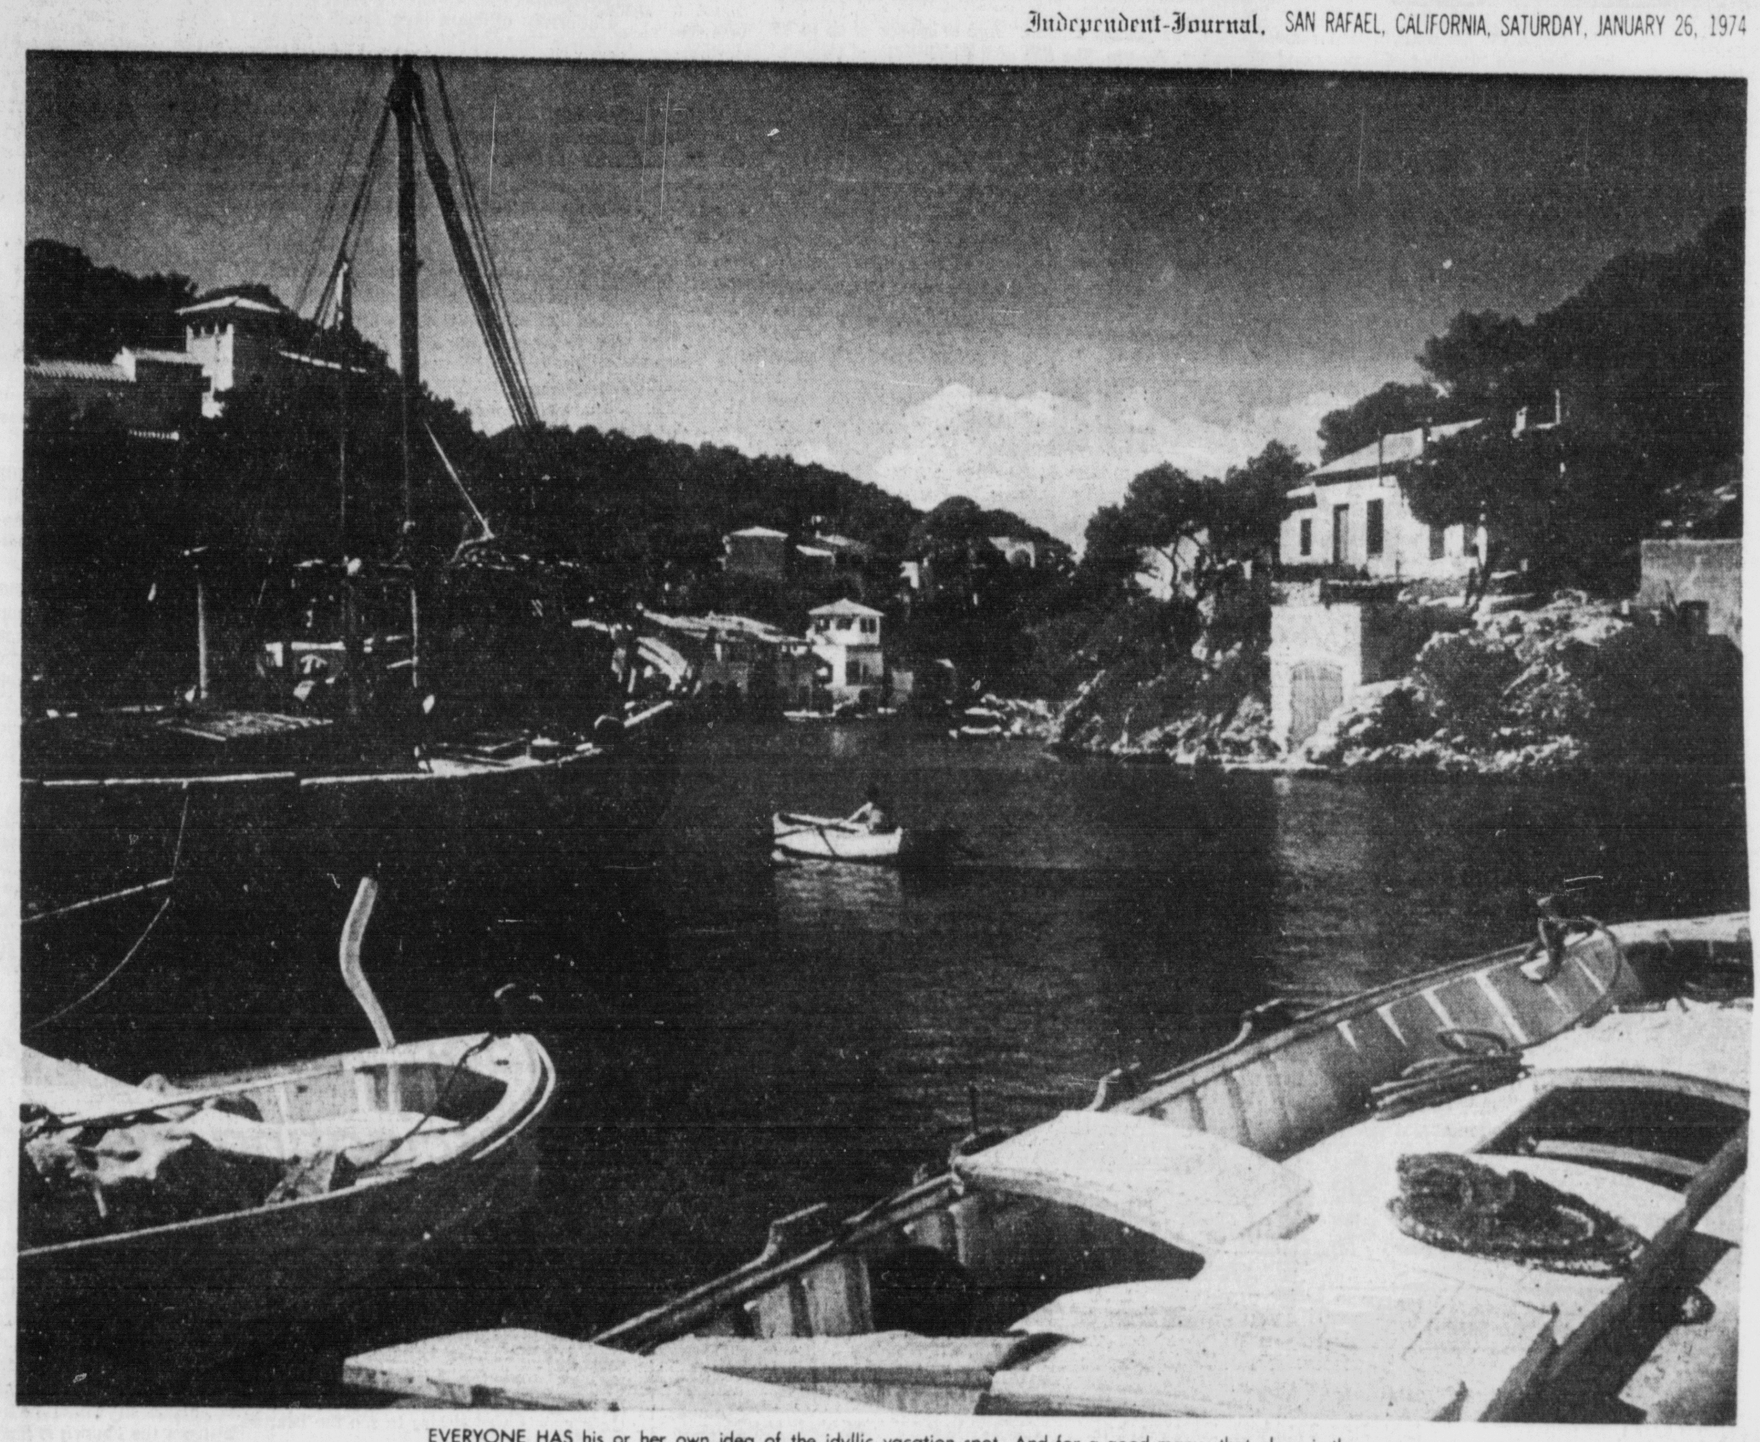

MORE MARIN travelers are looking toward South America, the so-called "sleeping giant" of tourism, as well.

Europe, some say, seems to be in a slight slump as far as early interest among Marinites is concerned, probably, according to one agent, "because of the publicity given high prices and crowded accommodations on the continent last year." Higher fares are another factor. Nevertheless, Marinites in large numbers will throng to Britain and Europe again in 1974.

EVERYWHERE, IT seems, government and private tourist and publicity agents have been directing a major portion of their effort toward reassuring potential visitors that they will not have their holidays marred by the fuel and energy shortage.

Whatever develops on the crystal ball, the travel advisers seem to agree, it is unlikely that Marinites will stay put when vacation time comes around.

EVERYONE HAS his or her own idea of the idyllic vacation spot. And for a good many, that place is the Spanish island of Majorca. The scene above of Majorca's Figuereta Bay demonstrates amply the island's appeal for those wishing to escape temporarily the hustle and bustle of their every-day life. But wherever your own vacation destination might be in 1974, it is time now to start planning your travels. And this is the annual special travel edition of the Independent-Journal's weekend supplement, Marin Living, to assist you with that planning.

There Are Ways To Beat The High Cost When You Take Your Trip To Europe

By MURRAY J. BROWN

NEW YORK (UPI) — There are ways of beating the higher costs of travel in these days of devalued dollars and inflation.

The secret includes careful planning, spending wisely and taking advantage of money-saving bonus plans and other tourist promotional offers.

So says a travel expert, who has lived and worked in Europe for many years, during a recent visit to New York for a series of seminars and other discussions on tourism.

"No one can deny that prices are up, but there still are travel bargains in Europe —it's all in knowing where, when and how to find them," said Claude Guerin, a top-ranking American Express official, whose headquarters are in Paris.

"If anything good comes out of devaluation as far as tourism is concerned, it should be a better awareness on the part of the American traveler. He may learn to research his trip more and search for values once he's there. And he probably will enjoy himself more in the process."

GUERIN SAID there are many countries, such as Portugal, Spain, Ireland, Greece and Yugoslavia, where there still are excellent travel values and where the rates of exchange remain favorable to the U.S. dollar.

At the same time, he said, even in countries like France, Germany and Switzerland — where devaluation has hurt the dollar most — Americans can economize by doing as Europeans do.

For instance, there are scores of excellent medium-priced hotels in Paris and in London, Rome and other European capitals, he said (in an aside) where Americans can stay without sacrificing comfort or convenience, according to the French-born Guerin.

"And there are hundreds of good restaurants in Paris where you can get a three-course meal, often including a carafe of table wine, for about $3 to $5. Check the prices and menus posted outside before going in.

HE SAID AMERICANS also can save money by using public transportation instead of taxis. Paris has an outstanding subway and bus network, which extends as far as Versailles, and you can buy unlimited travel for four consecutive days for only 30 francs, he said. Visit museums on Sundays, he said, when admission fees are reduced or dropped.

If planning to travel around the continent, Guerin suggested considering trains instead of planes. You'll save on transportation to and from the airports — railway stations are centrally located — and you can buy a Eurailpass good for 21 days of unlimitd first class travel through 13 countries from Scandinavia to Italy for only $150. Great Britain also offers special cut-rate train travel.

Guerin said probably the most economical way to visit Europe is on a prepaid vacation — "if you go on your own, you'll pay about 30 per cent more." He noted there are hundreds of such package plans, based on the low off-season Group Incentive Tour (GIT) air fares, for Americans to choose from.

THE PREPAID TOUR should be particularly attractive for the first-time visitor to Europe, he said. The traveler knows what his vacation will cost while all the essentials of a worry-free trip — including transportation, accommodations, sightseeing, etc. — have been arranged by the tour operator.

Guerin said Americans should take advantage of the numerous tourist incentive programs sponsored by official and unofficial tourist organizations in various European countries.

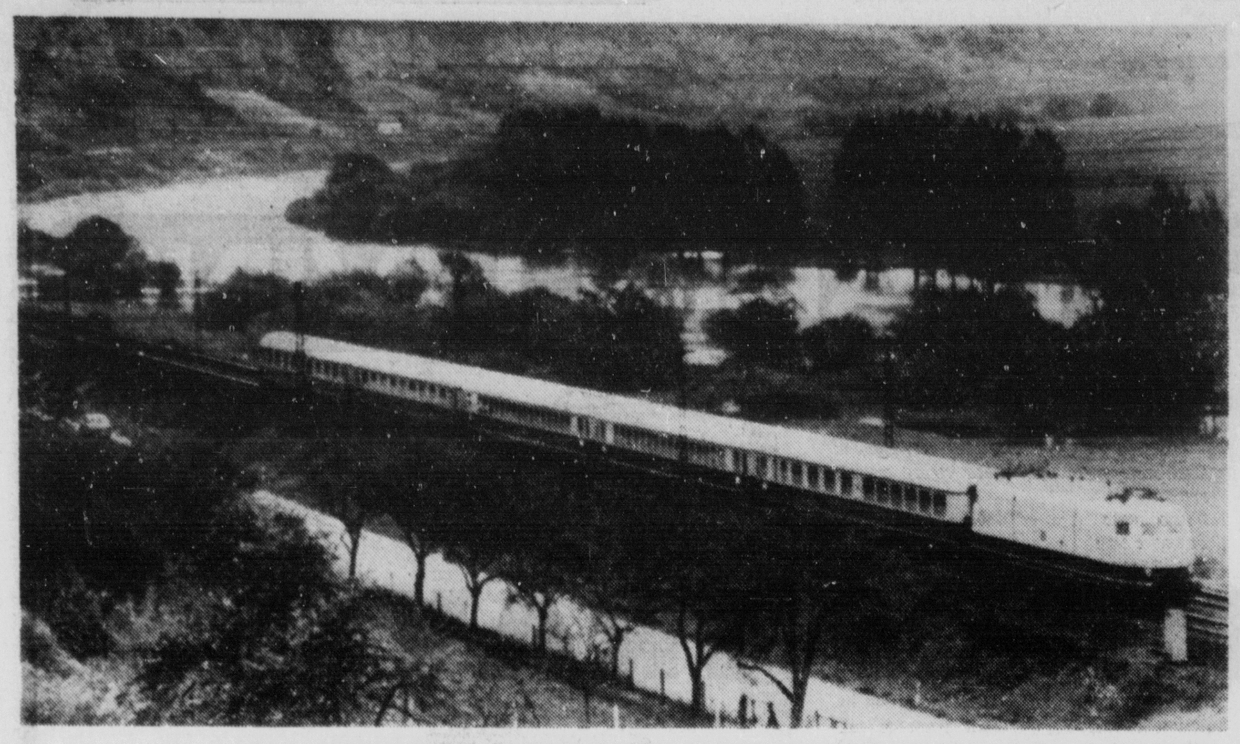

These include such bonuses as free sightseeing and entertainment and discounts on lodgings, meals, and shopping.

Some other tips for cost-cutting aboard:

Where it is the local custom, eat your larger meal at mid-day, a lighter meal in the evening. The house wine in European restaurants is often very good, and inexpensive. In London, Paris, etc., use the subway as your transportation. Cash your checks at banks, not hotels. Matinee theater performances are usually cheaper than evening shows. And the countryside is usually more economical than the cities.

IN GERMANY, the crack Trans-Europe Express, the "Blauer Enzian," runs at speeds of up to 120 miles an hour between Hamburg, Germany and Klagenfurt, Austria. The aim of the International Union of Railways: an integrated system of European trains operating at that speed by 1985. A master plan has been adopted, and its implementation is already under way.

Europe's Trains Of The Future

Passenger trains that will be faster and more convenient than cars and aircraft over distances up to 300 miles by 1985 — this is the objective of Europe's railroads, which are even now competing favorably against other modes of transport.

The recently published study entitled "Master Plan for the European Railway of the Future" reveals specific plans of the International Union of Railways (UIC) to keep rail transportation competitive with over-the-road and air transport within the confines of Western Europe.

The UIC, a group of 50 European and other railroads, formally approved its planning committee's document last year and is now gearing up to proceed with implementing the plan.

To meet both the quantitative and qualitative requirements of traffic forecasts for 1985, the UIC has developed specific plans — based on individual railroad programs actually under way or presently planned — for an international network that will allow:

Uniformly efficient high speed service over five routes linking Germany, Switzerland, Austria, Italy, France, Spain and Great Britain (Munich-Innsbruck-Verona; Basel-Milan; Chambery-Turin; Narbonne-Barcelona; and Great Britain-Tunnel-Continent).

Night journeys possible between eight and 12 hours.

The basic network used will aggregate 24,000 miles of track. What the UIC committee calls a "desirable journey" by rail is defined quite clearly:

"The requirements of a journey equal to two-thirds of the time taken by a car running at an average speed of 54 miles-per-hour implies an average speed of 81 miles-per-hour by rail over equal distances." This means a 90 miles-per-hour average speed for a train, allowing for starting and stopping times at intermediate stations.

Over distances greater than 180 miles, a train speed of 120 miles-per-hour will be needed to compete with aircraft.

The UIC points out that although most existing lines do not permit such sustained high speeds, several do. For example, Germany's TEE "Blauer Enzian" between Hamburg and Klagenfurt (Austria), and France's "Etendard" (Paris-Irun) and "Capitole" (Paris-Toulouse) all can log speeds of 120 miles-per-hour.

Both modernization of present track and new lines are required, however, and UIC projects planned include the construction of 3,470 miles of new track and the upgrading of 8,100 miles of present track.

Important to the success of the 1985 Plan will be harmonizing the many countries' railroad management and operating groups. Standardized operations will be required, including uniform track lay-out criteria; regular intervals for passenger train service; separation of slow from fast traffic; environmentally acceptable locomotive power, and many other factors.

Careful consideration of container, "piggy-back" and increasing demands for "car-sleeper" services is also being made in developing the Master Plan.

In working out "ideal travel times" between cities, the UIC committee has proposed some of the following:

London to Paris - three and a quarter hours (presently seven hours).

Brussels to Cologne - one hour, 40 minutes (presently three and a half hours).

Copenhagen to Stockholm - five hours (presently seven and a half hours).

Paris to Madrid - 12 hours (presently 15 hours).

"The Master Plan is the first stage in meeting the demands of 1985," the group says. On the basis of the European railroads' proven ability to cooperate with one another we are confident that we are on the threshold of a truly integrated, modern rail network."

Copies of the Master Plan summary (in English) may be obtained by writing Union Internationale des Chemins de Fer, care of A. J. Lazarus Associates Inc., 60 East 42nd Street, Suite 2122, New York, N.Y. 10017.

London To Glasgow By Motor Car Is Fascinating Way To See Britain

It's an old cliche, but it's true — the only really good way to see a country is to get out into the countryside away from the hustle and bustle of the big city tourist magnets.

This is particularly true in Great Britain, a country of infinite charm and variety. And the hard-pressed British insist that the fuel will be available for their guests who desire to see the island by automobile.

A three-day, 456-mile motoring trip from London to Glasgow takes the visitor through what the American Automobile Association describes as some of the most interesting spots of the British Isles.

The trip starts in London, where you should spend some time visiting that great city's many attractions, and makes its next stop at Oxford, site of the oldest university in Europe.

In addition to the University's many colleges, you'll want to visit the Bodleian Library, founded by Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, in 1480. Entitled to a free copy of every book printed in England, the library holds more than 2,500,000 volumes. Included are such rare manuscripts as the 7th-century Coex Laudianus and the 12th-century Anglo-Saxon Chronicle.

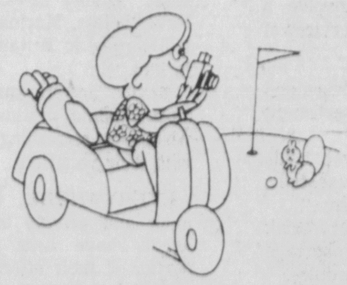

Less than 60 miles down the road from Oxford is another famous literary attraction, Stratford-Upon-Avon, home of William Shakespeare. Naturally, the biggest attractions are places associated with the famous bard's life, including the house in which he was born and the 15th-century church in which he is buried. Not far from the church is Shakespeare Memorial Theatre where his plays are performed every year from April to October.

Next on the trip is Birmingham — the metropolis of England's midlands and one of the major industrial cities of the world. From there it's on to Manchester, center of the country's cotton manufacturing, and gateway to the English Lake Country where the scenery is stony and green, with the most picturesque area being the Duddon Valley.

From the Lake Country to Scotland, with a stop-over at Carlisle to see Hadrian's Wall, is the next leg of the journey.

First stop in the land of the kilt is Edinburgh, the capital. Edinburgh Castle dominates the city, but a must attraction is the Royal Scottish Museum with its departments of technology, geology, natural history, and art and archaeology.

From the capital city to the largest city of Glasgow is a 43-mile drive. Arriving at the end of your journey you'll want to see the 12th-century Glasgow Cathedral and the University. Here you'll also find the shipyards where the famous "Queens" — the ocean liners Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth I and II — were built.

Hungary Now Has Museum Of Sculptures

An open-air sculpture museum has been opened in Southern Hungary, in a one-time marble quarry of Mount Nagyharsany where grey marble and other kinds of limestone have been mined for many centuries.

It was the idea of the sculptors living at a nearby artists colony to establish an open-air sculpture museum in the one-time quarry. These sculptors carve big sculptures out of the marble of the quarry and leave their finished works there in order to enrich the collection of this unique museum.

The sculptors are usually working there from the end of March and late October.

The two-kilometer long Mount Nagyharsany is still being quarried here and there. The open-air museum is on the southern side of the mount and it can be easily reached by an asphalt road.

CRUISE SHIPS, schooners and fishing boats are all common sights in the port of Pointe-a-Pitre, Gaudeloupe's principal city. There's a distinctive French feeling to the island, and to its sister island, Martinique. And while Martinique has long been popular with vacationers, Guadeloupe is on "the recently discovered" list.

Shipboard Travelers In Caribbean Find A Bit Of France In The Indies

Cruise passengers plying Caribbean waters in search of romantic ports of call are asking that part of their on-shore romance nowadays be served up French-style, according to major cruise lines.

And for the Caribbean, "romance French-style" means, quite simply, a stop at either Martinique or Guadeloupe, or both.

An indication of how in demand the French West Indies have become on cruise itineraries is the number of sailings for the 1973-74 season that include calls to these popular ports. From October until May, some 350 cruises will set sail from New York, Florida, the West Coast and San Juan, dropping anchor in Martinique, Guadeloupe, and even the latter's tiny satellites of St. Barthelemy and Les Saintes.

WHAT IS THE special lure of these islands?

First, their easy friendliness and truly foreign flavor. They are unmistakably French, yet spicily Creole. Add the delights of their renowned cuisine, their shopping and sightseeing, and the attraction is complete.

Of the two islands, Guadeloupe is the newer "new" destination, a gorgeous butterfly-shaped mass of green, with two interesting ports: Pointe-a-Pitre, where most ships now dock, and Basse-Terre, the small capital, whose protected anchorage close to shore and proximity to Soufriere Volcano, one of the island's top sites, make it a desirable stop.

Martinique, on the other hand, has been in vogue for quite a while. Smart cruise passengers began discovering her the same time Humphrey Bogart did, albeit in small numbers. But now the numbers have grown. So much so that last year Martinique was the most popular non-U.S. port of call in the entire Caribbean, greeting nearly 180,000 cruise visitors.

THIS YEAR, BOTH islands are easily accessible through a variety of air-sea packages. Through March 9, for example, the MS Istra will originate a dozen cruises from Guadeloupe, half of them stopping in Martinique. Air France provides the transportation from New York and Miami to Pointe-a-Pitre and back.

At least four lines have seven-day fly-cruise offerings from San Juan which take in the French Caribbean. Costa Line's Carla C has been calling at Martinique every Saturday while the Amerikanis of Chandris America visits Guadeloupe every Saturday. Eastern Airlines, cooperating carrier for both, will fly passengers roundtrip from at least 15 U.S. cities.

Incres Line's Victoria also calls at Guadeloupe on weekly cruises out of San Juan. The air portion is via Pan American from about 10 cities. And Cunard, in conjunction with American, Eastern and Pan Am, offer packages including Martinique on the Ambassador, departing San Juan every Saturday.

SEVERAL NEW SHIPS that debuted in 1973, such as Holland America's Volendam and Veendam, are calling at both islands, The Vistafjord, Norwegian America Line's most recent addition, and Sun Line's Stella Solaris, among them. The latter sails from Port Everglades on the 14-day cruise every other Saturday through March 2.

What will the passengers on these ships find during their one-day visits to the islands? In the countryside, breathtakingly beautiful vistas, verdant and unspoiled; in the towns and villages, bits of provincial France transplanted to the topics.

The joie de vivre of the islanders is quickly evident. They are a friendly, handsome people, peaceful and happy, proud to know their homelands are drawing visitors from faraway places.

The pleasures of the French islands to be enjoyed in a single day are many and varied; sightseeing excursions, shopping expeditions, dining adventures unequalled in the Caribbean. Many organized tours are available, as are cars with English-speaking drivers.

ON MARTINIQUE, some of the "must" sights include: St. Pierre, once the "Paris of the West Indies," devastated in 1902 by the eruption of Mt. Pelee; La Pagerie, the delightful birthplace of Napoleon's Empress Josephine, and downtown Fort-de-France, for a taste of what this city is like. There are museums in all three places worth visiting.

One could also go to Carbet, where Columbus landed and Gauguin once lived and painted; or down to the sea to watch fishermen bring in their catch; or drive through a forest primeval. Or one could just laze away the day with a beach picnic, or a poolside lunch at a local hotel.

Highlights of Guadeloupe include the 74,000-acre Natural Park crowned by Soufriere Volcano and the majestic Chutes du Carbet waterfalls; the Pointe des Chateaux, an eerie grouping of castle-like pinnacles in the sea, resembling the Breton coast; superb swimming at white sand beaches, and dining that alone makes the trip worthwhile.

At last count, the tourist office was listing 100 restaurants: some grand and expensive, most small and inexpensive; some in resort hotels, others on the front porch of the cook's home.

CRUISE PASSENGERS landing at Les Saintes, Guadeloupe's little offshore islands, will be able to see life as it is lived in few places today, nicely unspoiled, with a total of three vehicles tooting about.

St. Barts, to the north, is more developed (three gendarmes and 650 vehicles!), yet still a perfect get-away-from-it-all type place. Behind the shop windows of Gustavia, its lovely port, are some excellent duty-free buys.

Shopping in the French islands can turn a browser into a buyer in minutes. There are straw dolls and wood souvenirs, as everywhere, but the difference here is in the boutiques and shops bursting with quality French goods: crystal, china, silks, wines and liqueurs, fashions, and, of course, perfume. When bought with travelers checks or certain credit cards, 20 per cent is discounted on such luxury items as perfume, making them very good bargains.

IRON BALCONIES provide a good view of shoppers in Fort-de-France, Martinique. The best bargain: perfume. The finest French perfumes can be bought at about half their price in the United States.

The 'Now' Generation Discovers The Cruise

By THOMAS L. BARBOUR

And with good reason, reports the Trans-Pacific Passenger Conference, whose memberships serve all the Pacific, one of the world's fastest-growing vacation areas.

Integral ingredients are many-fold.

Important ones are reasonable cost, casual sun-sports, romance, fine wining and dining, fast-paced night life offset by delicious relaxation, exotic ports of call offering new experiences, different cuisine and bargain shopping. Also more personal freedom for couples with children, because of built-in baby sitters and youth programs; and an ecological reward in the peace of the sea, its varied bird and fish life, and a feeling of purity close to nature.

ANOTHER SALIENT factor is that cruise delights can be enjoyed during even a short vacation period, thanks to fly-sea combinations that allow maximum time aboard ship and at ports of call.

In fact, according to TPPC, the fly-sea concept is one of the hottest travel arrangements in the Pacific. And TPPC member lines have developed more variations on the idea than there are days in a month. They can be tailored to any length holiday and concentrated on those sea-centered areas travelers most desire.

Active recreation, like swimming and sun-tanning, deck tennis, shuffleboard and other open-air sports such as skeet shooting and golf practice, especially appeals to the under-30 age group.

Aboard ship, such outlets are readily available and can be enjoyed anytime.

FUN AT NIGHT is an important factor, particularly when every evening is like a night on the town with regular dancing, dance games, floor shows and other entertainment. Piano bar and other late-late spots mean singing, dancing and a pleasant time until the early hours of morning.

Gourmet dining is another big drawing for the Aware Generation. Multi-course meals feature several types of cuisine in addition to food generally associated with the country the ship hails from. Thus, plenty of chances to sample new dishes, including specialties in various ports of call. Wine lists are long and tax-free, a festive touch at little extra cost.

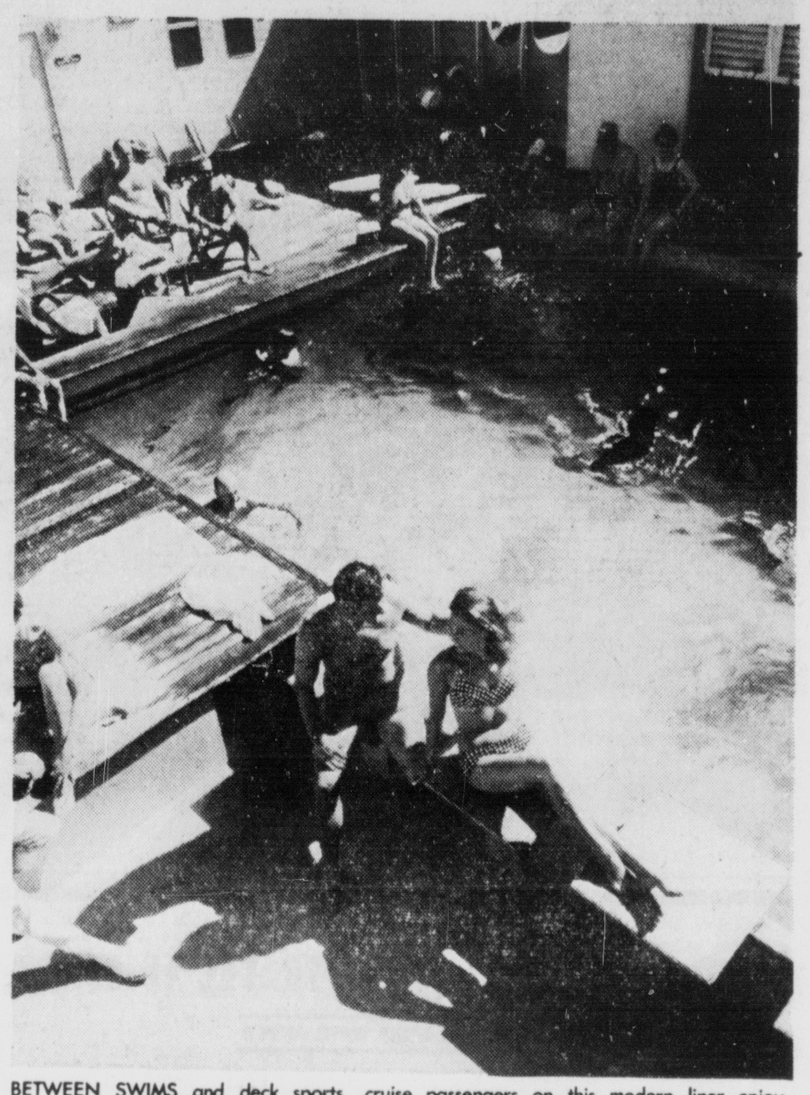

Since ocean air builds up hearty appetites, between-meal appetites are satisfied with afternoon tea and pastries, cocktail hors d'oeuvres and similar treats.

TIME IN PORT provides excellent chances to go prowling, getting the real atmosphere of a country — its sights, food, entertainment and culture. Since ships are "port hotels," there's no hassle about finding accommodations, so passengers can concentrate on experiencing the different facets of each city.

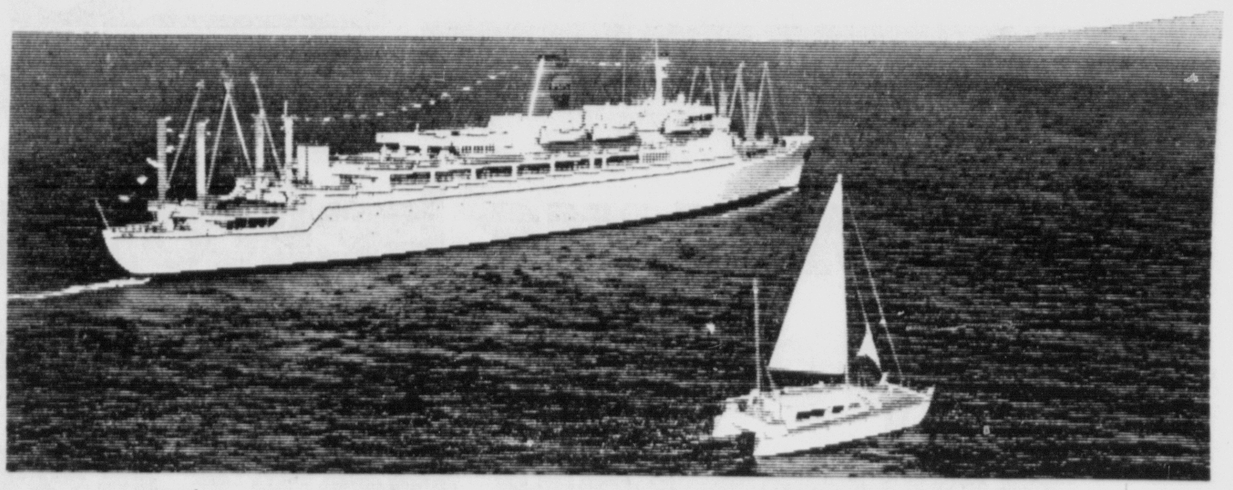

Despite the stereotype, the younger generation isn't always on the go. Thus Pacific ship travel brings young America opportunities to relax, to get away from the rush, the phones, and fumes, and other hectic shoreside elements. Young families gain new perspectives, new insights that refresh the mind and body. And they come to know what a precious thing it is to find this gift from the sea.

Proof of the value of an ocean vacation, the TPPC points out, comes not only in the increased number of younger people going on cruises, but also by the fact that they return for another taste of the good life aboard ships.

Don't Hurry Your Visit To Historic Cologne

ONE OF THE pleasures of visiting Cologne, Germany's historic and fascinating city on the Rhine, is the fine dining it affords. And one of the favorite restaurants is Die Bastei with continental cuisine, a magnificent view and modern architecture that contrasts strikingly with the city's Cathedral and other Gothic edifices. Soft music and a romantic atmosphere are among the other special delights of the place, a favorite with residents and visitors alike.

By BILL HOLLENBECK

Too many tourists, with the idea there is nothing else worth seeing, limit their stay in Cologne to one day — enough time to visit the Great Cathedral and then by boat or car set off up-river along the valley of the Rhine to Mainz, or Strassbourg, or all the way to Basle.

If you have yet to include Cologne in your travels, at least give it two or three full days.

There's much to see, plenty of tempting shops and a remarkable assortment of good restaurants serving a variety of ethnic dishes. Quite like San Francisco, whatever your mood for dining may be, chances are there's a restaurant to please you.

BRUSHING UP ON European history will make your stay even more rewarding.

It was the Roman Emperor Claudius around 50 A.D. who granted city rights to what was then a military camp. And it was probably his wife Agrippina who suggested it be named to honor her birthplace, Colonia. It was the residence of the Frankish kings, and it was Charlemagne who elevated the city to the status of an archbishopric. The Lords Spiritual of Cologne were the advisers of the German emperors.

One of these brought the remains of the Three Magi from Milan in 1164. After Rome, Cologne then became Europe's main goal of pilgrimage. Today their crowns appear on the town's coat of arms.

THE SHRINE OF the Three Kings stands on a dais behind the high altar of the Cathedral and is the largest goldsmith's work in the world. It is one of a great multitude of reasons to marvel at the sacred treasures and the awesome grandeur of the structure itself.

Every year hundreds of thousands of tourists come to Cologne to see Germany's largest cathedral; interior length, 468 feet; width, 145 feet; height above the central aisle, 140 feet; and the spires soar to 510. Yep, it's big!

MARIN LIVING'

However, the impression is that of unsurpassed architectural harmony rather than plain massiveness. The unity of Gothic design (1248-1880) is truly amazing.

IT WAS DURING a sudden thundershower one day as I stood watching from the window of our hotel room that I understood for a moment the lofty dedication of those who had willed this monument to man's hungering creativity to be. As a pair of young falcons flirted with this stone intrusion in the gathering murk, darting and swooping, I could see what this magnificent silhouette must have meant to those who lived and toiled in an age with little hope.

In those days, before the gradual pollution of man's senses, the sight of the great Cathedral of Cologne could well have sparked greater sensual pleasure than a present-day light show, more spiritual fervor than an hour with Billy Graham.

On foot it's difficult to get lost in Cologne. You look up, and soon, perhaps at that next intersection, you'll spot the spires of the Cathedral.

AND AT NIGHT you can sit at an outdoor table at the Hotel Dom and watch the procession of night clouds high behind that towering patch of black and toast the vanished breed of master stone masons.

Cologne is by no means a city lost in reflection on its past glories. We found the smartest shops here we'd seen in some time. It's an important radio and television and recording center, and one of Europe's most important convention centers.

ANOTHER FINE restaurant rises 16 floors above the fairgrounds on the other side of the Rhine.

Other than German and French cuisine, you'll find a half-dozen Chinese restaurants, those of the Balkan countries, Swiss, and at least one recently opened Spanish restaurant where we had a fine pepper steak with a fair Rioja on our last night in town.

We lunched in Im Walfisch, 13 Salzgasse. Well worth looking for. A typical wine house, with much character, delicious regional specialties and the best Mosel we'd tasted since Trier.

THE EXPRESSION, "It was hard to leave wonderful so-and-so," has been used before, but never, I think, with such justification as right here. In fact, we found it almost impossible. The distance between the entrance to our hotel and the underground garage where our car was parked was no greater than what a baseball covers on a long throw to the plate. Yet, through a devious, highly intricate maze of one-way streets we found that in a series of over a dozen passes through downtown Cologne we were still no nearer our hotel than when we started. Several pedestrians began smiling in recognition as we passed. Fortunately, they couldn't hear what I was yelling. Unfortunately, my wife could.

It must have been the spirit of one of the Three Kings who finally revealed the way. Of course we found our long-suffering porter had toted our luggage back into the lobby 20 minutes ago.

It seemed best to tell him that mein frau had some last minute shopping to do. That's something all men understand.

Switzerland's William Tell Country

Since William Tell has gained such international popularity as a heroic symbol of freedom, the Swiss now have concluded that the incidents of the drama would have begun at a little town called Altdorf.

It is the first stop of a do-it-yourself tour to see where the Tell tale unfolded.

It was at Altdorf, Switzerland, that the tyrant Gessler placed a cap on a pole and demanded that the oppressed Swiss bow to it. Fiercely independent, the gallant William removed the headpiece from its perch with a well aimed arrow.

OF COURSE, TELL was seized for this act of defiance and, in one of the classic scenes of drama, was ordered to show his marksmanship by shooting the apple from his son's head. The likely site of the pole and cap and where the arrow that inspired an overture by Rossini was shot is at the tower of Altdorf.

There are paintings of the Tell legend at the tower but none of the Lone Ranger, the radio show which made the music of Rossini as well known to Americans as the hero of the Friedrich Schiller play.

Visitors can see the birthplace of the famous archer which is at a small chapel in Buerglen. Nearby is the Schaechen stream where the aged Tell met tragic death in a final act of heroism.

IN 1354 A CRADLE with an infant was seen in the Schaechen which had swelled above the banks by flood waters. Onlookers immobilized by fear just watched what appeared to be a duplication of the biblical journey of baby Moses down the Nile. An elderly man joined the group and then seeing the imminent tragedy waded into the water until he reached the crib. With his strength ebbing against the powerful rushing waters he secured it to an overhanging branch. It was William Tell who then dropped exhausted into the water and was swept to his death.

At the Tellsplatte there is a memorial at the point in the lake where Tell escaped to freedom from the boat taking him to prison; and at the hollow lane near Kuessnacht there is a chapel where Tell waited in ambush to slay the dictatorial Gessler. The tower in this area is considered the remains of Gessler's castle.

All of this is part of the fun of putting reality to enduring fiction. However, if it did happen, it would have been at these places.

Vancouver's Chinatown Is For Gourmet

After San Francisco, the second largest Chinatown in North America is located in Vancouver, B.C., where some 50,000 of Canada's 125,000 Chinese live.

Take your pick of the huge, black, Chinese mushrooms, lotus roots, yams, eggplants, kumquats, and lichee nuts.

Or you can try sturgeon, rock cod, sharks' fins, bird's nest soup, Hong Kong oysters, and barbecued ducks.

For cooking your own, you can buy a wok, a round-bottomed Chinese pan, originally designed to extract the maximum amount of heat from the tiniest fire.

In the restaurants, you msut give at least one days' notice if you wish to order Eight Precious Jewels Chicken, Peking Duck, or Winter Melon Soup. Chinatown chefs are very jealous of their international reputation for excellence in the kitchen.

They use helicopters to report traffic jams because helicopters don't get into traffic jams.

City traffic turns the Jet Age into the Stone Age. The planes fly 600 miles per hour, but you have to creep to them at 5 or 10.

Rise above it all . . . Fly SFO Helicopter.

SFO connects San Francisco International Airport with Oakland, Berkeley and Marin Heliports 74 times daily (54 on Saturday). You're there in minutes. Your luggage checked through to your final destination. And, SFO has one of the industry's best records for reliability.

The biggest surprise is SFO's low cost. Cab fare between Marin and San Francisco Airport can run $18.00 or more. SFO's full fare is only $13.50, and it may cost much less. There are big discounts available, depending on your connecting flight. For information call 388-5555, or see your travel agent.

CAMPING WITH CHILDREN can be fun — with the right kind of preparation and equipment. Without that preparation, it can be something considerably less enjoyable.

Short Camping Trip Family Adventure

By AILEEN PAUL

A short camping trip on a weekend, or at mid-week when facilities are less crowded, will offer you and your family a change of pace from the usual late spring-summer activities.

The experience might also help in deciding whether to invest time and money in longer trips.

Even for a short trip, advance planning is essential. It's also part of the pleasure, a part that children can share — such as looking through camping catalogs, making grocery lists, practicing putting up the tent.

If children are encouraged to share in advance, their participation at camp in work and play follows naturally. And if everyone shares the work, the load is lighter.

WHAT EXPECTATIONS do members of your family bring to a camping trip — hiking, fishing, swimming, sitting in the sun?

As you choose a destination with specific objectives in mind, remember to provide a balance between younger and older children; young ones need shallow water and easy paths to climb, while the older youngsters need more of a challenge.

Researching the facilities of campgrounds and matching your family's needs with what is offered at each location, is comparatively easy. Write to the Department of Parks or Department of Conservation at your state capital, or contact the National Park Service, Washington, D. C., 20240, for "Campground Directory of the National Parks" (free); "Camping in the National Park System" (25 cents); "Camping, the National Forests, National Parks and Landmarks" (60 cents), "National Forest Vacations" (30 cents).

If time is short, look for these pamphlets in your library or contact your congressman who might mail them to you from his office.

COMMERCIAL CAMPGROUNDS are described in books on sale at book stores and camping stores (sometimes at libraries), including Woodall's Trailering Parks and Campgrounds Directory, which may be ordered from 500 Hyacinth Place, Highland Park, Ill., 60035, for $5.95.

A word of caution: many commercial campgrounds are unsatisfactory, and it is difficult to determine their quality through directories. The franchised campgrounds generally have higher standards. KOA (Kampgrounds of America) maintains uniform quality but varies in facilities from location to location. Their directory can be obtained from Post Office Box 1338, Billings, Mont., 59103.

It seems wise to choose a first campground not too far from your home, with water and sanitary facilities available. Many also have small stores where one can buy forgotten supplies.

Tents are at the top of the equipment list.

IT'S HELPFUL for beginners to scrutinize camping catalogs before the family decides to purchase or rent. Many families prefer two two-person tents rather than one large cabin tent; some use the large tent as a gathering place, with small back-packing tents for sleeping. A family that is used to privacy might not enjoy being crowded in at night.

Whether you rent or buy, consider carefully the size of the tent and the ease with which it can be erected. An excellent choice in fabric is water-repellent cotton with some nylon. There must be sufficient ventilation with openings protected by netting. The sewn floor of the tent should reach up the lower part of the walls.

Practice putting up your tent in your backyard, at a neighbor's or in a nearby park. You may feel a little foolish, but there's no substitute for practice.

THE NEXT MOST important piece of equipment is the sleeping bag. Duck with polyester fiberfill is one of the most practical combinations. The zipper should be sturdy, full length, and separating.

An air or foam mattress is a must for all but the most rugged.

For beginning campers, keep cooking simple and familiar. Buy all that you can before you leave. You can manage without refrigeration by taking canned or packaged foods, non-fat dry skim milk (chocolate flavoring for the youngsters), and fresh fruits and vegetables that can be served raw; wash and dry them, then store in insulated bags.

Chilled fresh eggs keep their quality if wrapped in heavy foil and packed in an insulated bag; under such conditions, eggs remain fresh for two days unless the weather is extremely hot.

To keep costs at minimum, use one or two old saucepans and a fry pan from your own kitchen. If your cookware is spotlessly lovely, buy used utensils from a nearby thrift store. Pots and pans are never the same again after use over an open fire.

USE PAPER OR styrofoam serving ware.

When you check into the campground, ask for information about the water from the park officials who usually have printed material. Campsites are sometimes assigned; sometimes chosen. The site should be level, near water and wood supplies, and within a reasonable distance from clean toilet facilities and efficient garbage disposal.

Campers develop their own individual routes but there is general agreement that the most important first step is to set up your tent and place sleeping bags and rain gear inside, along with insecticide and flashlight. If you talk about the importance of beginning in that manner as part of your planning, the children will help with good spirit and leave exploration until later.

After the tent is in place, start your campfire and prepare the first meal, which should be simple. Many campers find it good to bring along hot soup in a thermos for the first meal, to simplify preparation.

COMMON SENSE ALSO tells you to divide your site into areas of activity, even if it's for a brief stay.

Place your tent 10 to 20 feet away from the fire. Mark areas for cooking, eating, and washing. Place the appropriate gear in those areas.

Marking off areas of activities helps to keep camp life running smoothly, as does assignment of duties. Decide at home whether each adult or young person will take turns cooking.

Everyone should be responsible for cleaning or disposing of eating utensils. Cleanup must be done immediately, and any spilled food disposed of. Spilled liquid should be doused thoroughly with water. If the camp is kept clean and pleasant smelling, birds and insects will not be attracted to it.

FOOD MUST BE stored in sturdy, tightly closed hampers. If it is possible to suspend the hampers by rope from a tree, so much the better. Animals in campgrounds love to forage.

When you break camp, leave everything cleaner than you found it. Take your tent down, if possible, after the night dampness has evaporated. Brush it to remove loose dirt. Pick up and dispose of litter and garbage as suggested by the camp regulations. Go back systematically over every foot of space to look for lost items.

Allow enough time when you return home to unpack and to get to bed early. Camping with one's family is relaxing and fun — but not always conducive to sleeping.

CHECKLIST FOR THOSE WHO PLAN TO BRAVE OUTDOORS

Better than 12 million American families will hit the road this year as camping continues to be one of this country's fastest growing leisure time activities.

Whether your idea of camping out is tramping through the wilderness with a backpack; or pitching tents and cooking out; or "really roughing it" in a mobile camper complete with color television, there are certain steps you can take to help assure your enjoyment all the more.

If you have a Boy Scout in the family, borrow a note from his manual and "be prepared." Most basic (but surprisingly often overlooked) is the general first aid-camping kit. Use the following alphabetical check list to make sure you're really prepared for the great outdoors this year:

Analgesic ointment.
Antibacterial soap.
Bandaids and bandages.
Burn ointment.
Dysentery medication.
First aid booklet.
Flashlight (check those batteries; take along spares).
Insect spray.
Salt tablets.
Snakebit kit.
Sun tan lotion.
Water purification tablets.

With just a little time and effort (and a sprinkling of commonsense) you can enjoy the greatest summer of camping fun ever.

A Photographer Learns From His Mistakes

By IRVING DESFOR

If my most recent trip were to be retraced now, I'd take more color film; keep a more careful daily diary listing more specific information of pictures when taken; buy more prepaid mailers for sending off exposed film en route; and I wouldn't put a roll of exposed film in my gadget bag and leave the top unzippered.

My wife and I enjoyed a 12-day cruise on the 42-passenger Mount Hope, a boat specially built to sail on the inland rivers, canals and lakes that connect the U.S. and Canada in the Northeast.

WE STARTED FROM the ship's home port, Warren, R.I., and reached Montreal via the Hudson River, Erie Canal, Lake Ontario, the Thousand Islands and St. Lawrence Seaway. From Montreal, we turned south at Sorel, Quebec, into the Richelieu River, squeezed through the Chambly Canal to Lake Champlain and reached Whitehall, N.Y.

Our voyage ended there because heavy rains closed some of the remaining locks temporarily. We bused back to our starting point.

It was a unique experience which makes a good picture story, offbeat enough to share with others and to recall with pleasure in the future. There were about a dozen camera toters aboard but only three others kept their cameras consistently handy. Therefore, when a situation or scene of interest suddenly appeared, most of them were in no position to record it.

HAVING A CAMERA along on a trip does little good if it's resting comfortably in a cabin. It doesn't have to dangle constantly from the neck-it can remain within reach in a gadget bag. But I learned the bag should be closed.

After changing film, I opened the gadget bag to put in the exposed roll. On our return to the dock, I lifted the bag by the shoulder strap. The bag tipped forward and spilled its contents from the still-open top. I retrieved the items, put them back in the bag and closed it.

Later, however, I discovered the exposed roll of film was missing. It must have rolled out of sight. My suggestion now: put exposed film in your pocket or in a closed compartment of the gadget bag.

I MADE ANOTHER mistake on this trip; not enough color film! Fortunately, I was able to get film, during the last few days, from other fans who didn't run short. That's what happens when I don't listen to my own advice.

I've preached often and loudly that one should be more than generous in figuring film needed for a trip. Each photographer shoots differently but he should know whether he can shoot one, two or three rolls or cartridges of film on a good day. Figure the maximum for each day of the trip and he shouldn't have to scrimp or scrounge by the trip's end.

Some of the film I shot had pre-paid processing mailers. While we were at the Oswego, N.Y., marina, I mailed some Kodachrome film to Rochester and some GAF film to its plant in Binghamton. By the time we returned home, the finished slides in both cases awaited us. The effect was like having Polaroid instant color film-wonderful!

DURING OUR CRUISE, the Mount Hope went through more than 50 canal locks. They ranged from the historic Erie Barge Canal and the double towpaths of Quebec's Chambly Canal to the powerful new giants of the St. Lawrence Seaway. All along the route, children, adults and pets greeted our boat as it went by.

With so many specific places-like churches and museums on a travel tour — it is necessary to make accurate identifications as pictures are being taken to prevent utter confusion when pictures are assembled later.

And the best way to keep such information intact is to have a small pocket notebook that you keep on your person at all times. Use it as a daily diary, make complete notes of places and people and add descriptions of details that pinpoint a particular picture as you shoot.

At the same time, collect brochures, travel guides and maps of the areas for correct names, spellings and locations for later reference.

I NOTICED THAT most of our picture-takers stood at the rail of our vessel when shooting scenes of passing interest — fishermen, a schrooner, tankers and locks, etc. Their pictures then would have a lot of water in the foreground and a lot of sky.

When I took the same pictures, I sought a vantage point on our boat so as to show the passengers at the rail looking or waving to the fishermen, the schooner, etc. Not only did it make a strong foreground and fill the picture area to better advantage, but it told a better story of our voyage. . . scenes seen from our mini-cruise liner.

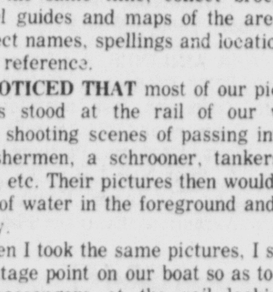

Non-Smokers Get A Break

Five quality hotels have set aside non-smoking areas for diners who object to smoking.

The program was started by the Palm Springs Convention and Visitors Bureau. In addition to the hotels, 15 restaurants have established non-smoking sections.

Canada's Hub City Offers Many Sights

For years, Moncton, New Brunswick, Canada was called "The Hub of the Maritimes."

The reason is that it's close to the geographical centre of Canada's Maritime Provinces, and is within easy reach of a host of representative tourist attractions in the Atlantic provinces.

Perhaps the best known is Magnetic Hill, where cars appear to coast uphill and a small stream alongside the road also looks as if it's running the wrong way. It must be seen to be believed.

If You Would Like To Direct Your Own Movie

SPOKANE — Want to direct a movie?

You'll be able to indulge your desires along those lines during the Expo '74 World's fair here, May 4 to Nov. 3, in a show called KinoAutomat, from Czechoslovakia.

Here's what happens: a movie feature starts out, proceeds to a crisis point and then —stops. Out pops the star of the film — in person —and he asks the audience how the plot should turn.

They vote. And the film proceeds to another crisis point. Then out pops the actor. In go the votes. And on goes the show — several times.

How the story ends depends on the wishes of the audience, and the Czechs have wound up with a wide variety of endings — depending on the moods of the audiences.

KinoAutomat is a special updating of the format first presented in the Brussels world's fair in 1958. Similar shows were presented at fairs in Osaka and Montreal.

WASHINGTON COUNTS PRESIDENTS' CHURCHES

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Fifteen local churches of diverse denominations have at least one thing in common: they have been known as "the President's church."

And just across the Potomac River is the 16th "President's church," the Alexandria, Va., sanctuary of George Washington. The first President, who lived at Mount Vernon, was the only chief executive who didn't occupy the White House.

Christ Church, an Episcopal church on North Washington Street, was thus the first such church, and George Washington's name is still enscribed on the pew in which he worshipped. Centuries-old tombstones surround the church, once known as "the Church in the Woods."

St. John's Episcopal Church has served as a place of worship for more Presidents than any other Washington area church, at least partially because of its location.

St. John's is a pleasant yellow and white ediface just a block from the White House. It's clearly visible, across Lafayette Park, from any front window of the executive mansion, perhaps serving as an ever-present reminder for our Presidents.

Every chief executive from James Madison (No. 4) to Richard Nixon has stepped across the park to worship at St. John's. Several of its stained glass windows came from Chartres, France.

Abraham Lincoln often went a little further from home on Sundays, journeying in his carrige to New York Avenue and H Street NW where he worshipped in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. The old building no longer stands, but the new one in its place still uses Lincoln's pew. It also has a Lincoln Sitting Room with a copy of a draft of the Emancipation Proclamation.

The first Catholic President, John F. Kennedy, worshipped at Holy Trinity Church on 36th Street between N and O Sts. in Georgetown. The church is styled after Roman basilicas and has a marble alter. Its organ once was in the Library of Congress. The church also has a photograph of PT 109.

Franklin D. Roosevelt's church, St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, burned down in 1970. Its congreagation is planning a new building and now meets in the parish hall. The property is at 18th and Church Streets N.W.

Harry S Truman once lectured children at the First Baptist Church at 17th and O Streets, N.W. The new sanctuary is Gothic and its stained glass windows depict well-known Americans.

John Quincy Adams, Millard Fillmore and William Howard Taft worshipped at All Soul's Church, a Unitarian Church at 16th and Harvard Streets. N.W. The son of Paul Revere manufactured the steeple bell.

Metropolitan Memorial Methodist Church at Nebraska and New Mexico Aves. N.W. was the Sunday morning home of Ulysses S. Grant and William McKinley. The pulpit contains wood from the Garden of Gethsemane and chancel marble is from the tomb of King Solomon.

Woodrow Wilson worshipped in the Central Presbyterian Church at 15th and Irving Streets, N.W., a simple brick structure. The congregation has dissolved and the building is now used as a mission.

The church where Warren G. Harding worshipped was struck by lightning and hence has no spire or tower. The Calvary Baptist Church, at 8th and H Streets, is well over a century old.

The First Congregational Church (United Church of Christ) has a new sanctuary at 10th and G Streets, N.W. The congregation, which once included Calvin Coolidge, dates back to an Abolitionist group. The modern church building is sleek and modern, boasting faceted stained glass and a huge Puritan pulpit.

Henry Foxall owned a foundry in northwest Washington when the British invaded in 1814. After his property escaped damage, Foxall donated part of his land to a church. The subsequent Foundry Methodist Church at 16th and Church Streets, N.W. was to become the church of Rutherford B. Hayes. The congregation now has a new structure, a huge Gothic ediface with a Victorian flavor.

Herbert Hoover's pew remains at Friends Meeting House, 2111 Florida Avenue, N.W., but, in Quaker tradition, is unmarked. The austere interior contains no decoration, but holly trees, flowers and a sundial adorn the garden.

Grace Reformed Church parishioners watched for Teddy Roosevelt Sunday mornings. The church at 15th and O Streets, N.W. contains 19th century pews and beautiful windows.

Andrew Jackson, Grover Cleveland, Benjamin Harrison, James Buchanan and Dwight Eisenhower attended the National Presbyterian Church. The church building is new, the location is new, but the presidential pews remain. Stained glass windows depict presidents in this huge neo-Gothic structure at 4101 Nebraska Avenue, N.W.

James Garfield and Lyndon Johnson worshipped at National City Christian Church at Thomas Circle, several blocks from the White House. The architecture is "Greek revival" and features a towering columned portico.

VIENNA CLAIMS TITLE OF SAFEST CITY IN WORLD

You can safely walk the many parks of Vienna or the city's streets during any hour of day or night without fear of getting mugged, robbed or molested. The Austrian capital is the world's safest city, a record of which its police department is justly proud.

Nevertheless, it has now started a campaign to teach the more than 400,000 senior citizens of the Austrian capital to be cautious about people who knock on their doors under such pretexts as selling magazine subscriptions or new projects. Even in Vienna, phony door-to-door salesmen will try to take advantage of the old.

The Package Tour: What To Look For

By VERONICA A. RAGATZ

Money-saving package-tour vacation? "Sounds great. But how do I know I won't be disappointed?" you may ask.

The abundance of tours promoted today will seem much less awesome if you have at least a few guidelines as to what you prefer and what is available.

HERE, TOO, ARE a few other considerations when looking for the package plan that is right for you:

1. Advance booking generally is the rule. The minimum time limit is 30 days before the scheduled flight leaves (if this is part of your tour) to qualify for special GIT (group inclusive tour) fares. A deposit is required, and special stipulations are made for final payment as well as for cancellations and possible refunds. It is best to read the clauses carefully for each sponsoring agency, before rushing into any tour.

2. Reductions are made for children on both air fares and land arrangements. In conformity with IATA (International Air Transport Association) regulations, children under 2 pay 10 per cent of the adult air fare, while children 2 through 11 generally pay only 50 per cent. If traveling with a family, it is good to check the specific arrangements made by each tour operator. There is no international family plan available. At present, young people up to age 24 can qualify for a special youth fare, however, which can reduce travel costs considerably.

3. Hotel accommodations usually are based on double occupancy. In most cases there is a supplementary fee for singles. Rates also vary depending on whether a room is with or without a private bath. On the more independent tours, a traveler has a choice of hotels in which he would like to stay.

4. Breakfast generally is (but not always) included with overnight accommodations. In each case, the breakfast offered accords with the custom of the country one is in: English, Continental, or American-style. It should be noted that some guided tours also include meals other than breakfast. This should be considered when figuring the total cost of one's trip.

5. If a car is included in a package tour, it is good to inquire about the size and model. Generally supplemental charges are made if a larger car or one with automatic transmission is requested. One should note, too, whether the package includes unlimited mileage for a given period or if one must pay by distance. Also, are there any drop-off charges, and can the car be taken into several countries?

GAS IS, WITHOUT exception, extra. Prices will vary from country to country. Some countries (like Yugoslavia and Italy) offer special prepaid tourist coupons, which are a convenient way to save money. More information on this can be obtained by contacting your travel agent, the international department of your local AAA, or various foreign tourist offices, consulates, or embassies.

Generally one also must pay an air fare surcharge for weekend travel on both east- and westbound flights during peak season.

You Needn't Let Herkimer Keep You At Home

Many's the vacation to faraway places that's been nipped in the bud by the question, "But what do we do about Herkimer?"

Well, assuming that Herkimer isn't a demented uncle tucked away in the attic, but is instead a faithful animal companion, you can bring him along on the airplane.

Many people don't know it but airlines are more than cooperative in helping out with the problem. Here are some tips from Continental's passenger service experts:

You'll need a rabies vaccination certificate (depending on Herkimer's species) showing that he has been innoculated at least 30 (but no more than 60) days before departure. A health certificate (see your vet) also is required.

Tranquilizers aren't necessary, but if you plan to give Herkimer some, be careful of the dosage or he'll sleep halfway through the vacation.

Reservations aren't required, but it's a good idea since there is only room for a few pets per flight.

Herkimer must ride with the baggage, but the compartment is heated and pressurized. Sorry, no meal service.

A container is a must. It has to be strong enough to keep him from romping around the baggage area and must have a waterproof bottom.

Pets go as excess baggage when traveling with you. They also can travel alone, in which case, they are shipped at regular freight rates.

Grand Teton Awes With Wildlife, Wonders

Visitors to Grand Teton National Park in northwestern Wyoming can experience the wonders of nature in a land once inhabited only by Crow Indians.

In the Jackson Hole country the wildlife and scenery are as unchanged as they were more than a hundred years ago when the first pioneer, David Jackson, wintered there.

Jackson, it is said, hunted elk and deer to survive. Today these graceful animals are protected. In fact, one of the largest elk herds in the nation, more than 10,000, winter on the sage-covered plains in the Jackson Hole area.

In Willow Flats near Jackson Lake Lodge elk and moose graze undisturbed.

MOOSE FREQUENT the beaver ponds near Jackson Lake Lodge or along the Snake River. Visitors may see them in the early morning or at dusk, when the shadows are long. These massive animals, sometimes weighing 1,000 pounds, are often seen grazing in the meadows and ponds throughout the park.

Moose, the largest of the deer family, are easily photographed as they are nearsighted and only a minimum of quiet is needed to get within close range of them.

Coyotes are one of the more numerous animals in the park, but their natural instinct of keeping away from humans makes them more difficult to see. One is well aware of their presence by their howling at night.

SMALLER ANIMALS can also be seen scampering around Jenny Lake Lodge and Colter Bay Village and across the grassy meadows. The chipmunk and golden-mantled ground squirrel are numerous. The marmot and pika usually live among the barren rocks; the marmot's piercing whistle and pika's staccato squeaks have surprised many a visitor.

Bird fanciers call the Tetons a "paradise," for the park abounds in more than 100 species of birds. In the mixed forests of evergreens and aspens along the Snake River dwell bald eagles, ospreys, Canada geese, and great blue herons.

Among the smaller birds, the dipper, magpie, mountain bluebird and western tanager are seen in the valley and on the lower slopes. The black rosey finch is common in the high country.

Of course, the greatest thrill is sighting the rare trumpeter swan, the shyest and most beautiful denizen of the Teton forests. They usually nest in inaccessible places near laks and ponds.

THE MASSIVE snow-capped Tetons dominate the view and form a spectacular backdrop for other western scenery. The South, Grand and Middle Tetons are the product of en early glacial age and their jagged peaks reveal their history of erosion by ice and water.

Mount Moran, which also rises dramatically from the valley floor, boasts a long streak of jet black rock exposed on its face. This is a volcanic "dike" which was formed when hot lava from below forced its way into cracks in the overlying cold rock, forcing it apart and then solidifying.

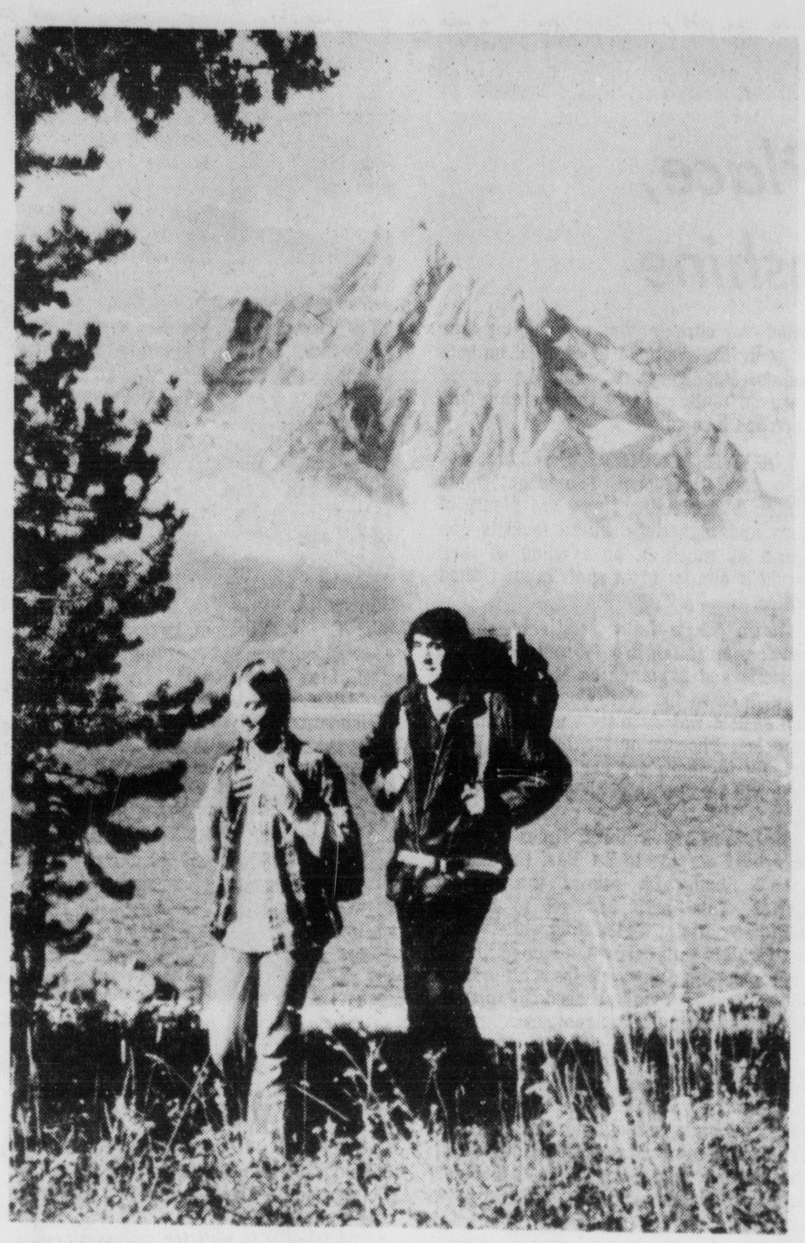

The floor of the Jackson Hole also tells the story of glacial outwash — the glacial sand and boulders carried out of the mountains by streams. Unusual saucer-like depressions, called potholes, dot the outwash plain. These, say geologists, were formed when huge chunks of ice melted after lying buried for many years.

ON ANY DAY, the float trip down the winding Snake River to Moose is a relaxing way to see the park. The floats are steered by boatmen who recount the colorful history of the area along the way.

There are more than 150 miles of trails in the park, some leading to high mountain lakes and passes above the timberline, others through the valley. The most popular get-acquainted hike is the half-day trip to Hidden Falls. A special feature of this hike is a boat trip across Jenny Lake to reach the trail that leads to the falls.

Other exciting hikes are along the Lakes Trail, the Glacier Trail, the Cascade Canyon Trail, and the Indian Paintbrush Trail.

At night visitors can see the park without leaving the comfort of Jenny Lake, Jackson Lade Lodge, or Colter Bay Village where naturalists give illustrated talks and show color films of the area.

THERE ARE MANY interesting trails for hiking and climbing in Grand Teton National Park in Wyoming. The trail this young couple is exploring is less than 10 minutes from Colter Bay Village. Other wooded trails lead across meadows, through wildflowers and past wild animal life.

Hawaii Offers Paradise For Scuba Divers

The fascinating and beautiful underwater world of Hawaii can be enjoyed by nearly all who visit the 50th State from scuba-proficient swimmers to snorkelers — youngsters to senior citizens.

Hawaii offers a year-round temperate climate, warm water that is basically clear and unusual reef formations that team with a fantastic colorful array of marine life, organisms and plants. The underwater photographer has a wide range of subjects from unusual shells to corals to volcanic submarine formations.

Hanauma Bay, on Oahu's east end, is a beautiful spot where snorkelers — youngsters to senior citizens — can paddle over a shallow coral reef and watch colorful fish in almost pond-like calm water. There are even guided snorkeling tours, particularly geared to the neophyte, that take in the underwater sights of the Bay.

Underwater sights that lure Island divers repeatedly into the water include Cowrie and other shells and black coral that grows like wispy trees or shrubs. Other sights might be brightly-colored fish as the parrot fish, scorpion fish, silvery ulua, and the whole range of brilliantly colored East Indian reef fish.

All of Hawaii's main islands — Hawaii, Maui, Molokai, Lanai, Oahu and Kauai — have good skin-diving areas.

Louisiana's Playground

Fishing, swimming, camping and skin diving can come alive for you in Grand Isle, Louisiana's favorite playground.

At the end of Louisiana Highway 1 are warm Gulf waters and sandy beaches which can please the traveler with the pleasures of outdoor recreation in a pleasant and friendly South Louisiana town.

Fishing is the main sport of Grand Isle and amateurs as well as professionals can bring home the big catches such as cobia, red snapper, barracuda, speckled trout and tarpon. The big event of the year is the Grand Isle Tarpon Rodeo which brings more than 3,000 entrants who battle for top honors.

Swimmers enjoy the long sandy beach where shell collectors can find a shore full of exotic specimens to fill out their collections. Skin and scuba divers have discovered the aquarian beauty of the waters that surround Grand Isle and spend many hours diving near the oil rigs which attract many fish.

Whatever your pleasure, Grand Isle has what it takes to please.

MARIN LIVING

Mazatlan Is Mexico's Fun Place, With Bright Lights And Sunshine

If fishing, hunting, sunbathing and girl-watching are your cup of Tequila, we have a suggestion: try Mazatlan, Mexico. All four sports are most popular there.

Once it was a hideaway for pirates who cooled their heels after pulling a job on the high seas. Today, Mazatlan is a port of pleasure where the jet set has replaced the skull-and-crossbones set.

Situated on a rocky, twisted and scenic peninsula, this beautiful old port city extends itself along the ocean on a main crescent-shaped boulevard.

The Malecon, or seawall, the long graceful embankment which separates the city from the beaches and the Pacific, sets the tone for the city. Here are the modern hotels, the chic gift shops, and the delightful seafood restaurants. Sitting in one of the charming sidewalk cafes, you can watch for fishing boats, strolling lovers, and other more or less natural phenomena.

HUTS OF THATCHED palm dot the immaculate sands washed by the frothing waves of rockbound Olas Atlas Bay. The beaches at Mazatlan are long, sandy and free. Food, chairs and umbrellas and a variety of other merchandise are not free but aren't expensive.

During summer vacations, the surfboard-set drives down from the United States with their boards strapped to the top of their cars to try the excellent surfing.

Any given morning will find Mazatlan in a leisurely mood. Founded in 1806, it is a town of rare and quaint gentility. Its old Indian name means "place of the deer." The 75,000 inhabitants are mostly involved in catching and exporting shrimp or in catering to the tourist.

OPEN-AIR BISTROS provide native Mariachi bands for the townspeople and visitors who stroll among the rows of majestic coconut palms. Vendors of mangos, bananas, papayas and coconuts rattle their little carts along Olas Atlas Street. Quaint and colorful aranas, two-wheel horse-drawn surreys, wait patiently for a tourist to pay a few pesos for a scenic city-wide ride.

Infinite hues of flowers surround the pastel Spanish Moor casas and sleek new hilltop villas. From towering lookout points hewn from the red rocks, you can view the twisting harbor, crashing surf and the exuberantly green islands in the turqoise bay: Wolf Island, Pier Island and Bird Island.

The 515-foot high El Faro lighthouse oversees the cluster of shrimp boats, and the native fishermen who scurry about their dorys trying their nets.

MANY OF THE scenic spots have colorful and descriptive names, such as Icebox Hill.

You can drive to the top of this hill and look out over the Pacific and the picturesque peninsula city. At the top are two mammoth tunnels where ice was stored a hundred years ago. It was brought from San Francisco by boat, kept in the tunnels and delivered by horsecart to homes and factories as needed.

Locals also like to point out that Mazatlan is on the same latitude as Hawaii (only 15 miles south of the Tropic of Cancer) as if this guarantees not only beneficial climate, but a swinging time as well. They happen to be right on both counts. But Mazatlan would be a good town no matter where the booming seaport was located.

FOR THE MAJORITY of visitors, this is a good-time town. The bright lights glitter in Mazatlan. There are plenty of bars and nightclubs where tourists can spend as much in an evening as they would in similar night spots in the United States.

Getting here is a relatively simple matter. Mazatlan lies 765 miles south of Arizona and is smack on Mexico's Highway 15 down the West Coast. Of course, the easiest way is to fly via jet from Los Angeles, Phoenix or Mexico City. When you fly in, there are car rental services that will rent you a vehicle to get around in.

Mazatlan has a three times a week ferryboat service to La Paz, the fisherman's Shangri-La across the Sea of Cortez. This ferry has got to be the world's spiffiest; a gleaming white vessel with wall-to-wall carpets, a lounge like on an ocean-going liner, cabins with private showers, and meals served by one of Mexico's leading restauranteurs.

TOURISTS CAN ALSO amuse themselves on a day-long jungle safari. Here you don pith helmets for the jeep-river journey, oohing and aahing at the sight of crocodiles and snakes. Besides this, guides will take tourists on hunts for deer, ocelot and wild pig, turkey, dove and duck.

Shopping in the tin-roof open-air market or bazaar is likely to be more rewarding to the senses than for actual purchases. Succulent smells of fruits, vegetables and meats blend with the banter of clerks in crowded stalls.

However, there are a number of excellent curio shops offering such local handicraft as carved wood and bone, shell necklaces and boxes, hand-carved leather and embroidered fabrics as well as silver, glass, and woven items from other areas of Mexico.

MOTOR-BIKES AND bicycles are a popular mode of transportation usually propelled at speeds which make it an interesting dodging game for the man on foot. Burros and carts share the streets with the frantic downtown traffic.

Most travelers have heard of the Acapulco divers. But there are a couple of boys in Mazatlan who are rapidly gaining a reputation as daredevils. They gather at a point along the Malecon called El Mirador in late afternoon and for a few dollars, jump about 40 feet into a narrow and shallow inlet.

The trick is to wait for a wave to come in, time it perfectly, and then dive.

Although Mazatlan is in the tropics, it is seldom oppressively hot. Temperatures range from a low 50 degrees at night in the middle of winter to a high of 94 at noon in the heat of summer. But even in the summer it is never a problem to the visitors with all of the first-class hotels air conditioned and the weather is pleasant on the beach, by the pool or out boating.

MAZATLAN PRIDES itself rightly on seafoods. Some of the best eating places are the Copa de Leche and the Shrimp Bucket, which cater to tourists, and Mamucur's Seafoods, which doesn't. Try some squid or octopus when you are in an adventurous mood.

Some of the more popular hotels are the Playa, the Playa del Rey, the De Cima and the Belmar. These all have air conditioned rooms, filtered swimming pools and good service.

The new Camino Real will open up early this summer and promises to be as plush and picturesque as the other properties in the Western International chain.

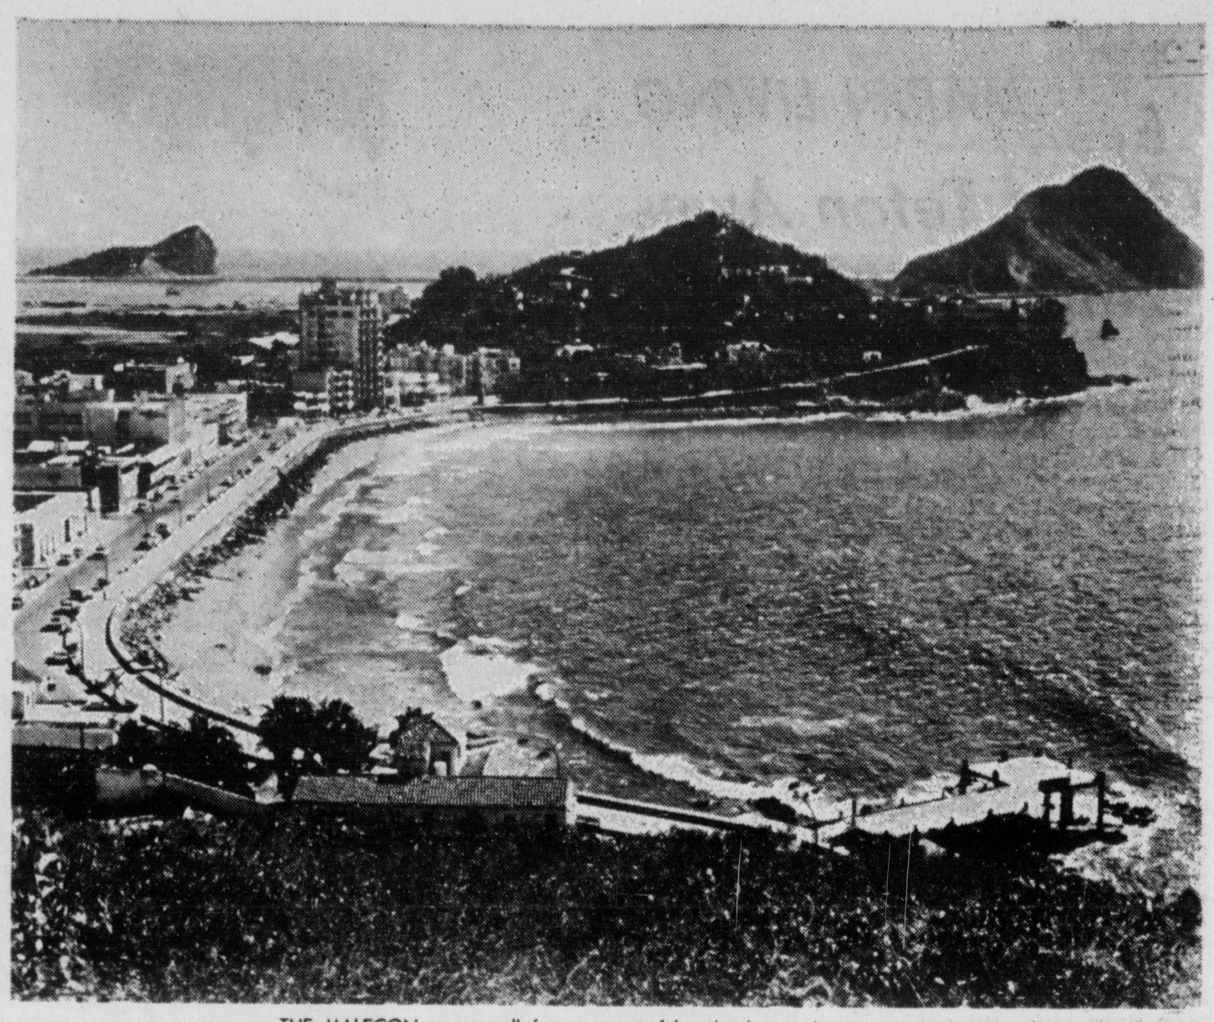

Often called the Fishing Capital of Mexico, marlin is especially abundant in Mazatlan waters. As many as a hundred of the giant billfish have been seen during a regular six-hour fishing day, many within an hour offshore.

DURING THE BEST season, which is considered to run from May to September, each boat will average four billfish a day. While marlin and sailfish dominate the interest, the gulf offers a wide variety of other species including yellowfin, tuna, snook, grouper, wahoo, amberjack and roosterfish. For a special sporting thrill, it is possible to harpoon or gaff a giant sea turtle.

The boats have a comfortable capacity of six, three chairs plus crew, and costs $65 with cervesa and bait thrown in.

Skindiving and spear fishing are increasingly popular in the warm waters of Mazatlan. Everyone swims and sunbathes and many waterski.

Music in Mazatlan starts at the drop of a peso. Guitars of every description, voices of every range, and trumpets of every tone overcome seemingly insurmountable obstacles to create a delightful music like no other in the world. Mazatlan music is good to dance to and you can depend on the Mariachis to play enthusiastically until 2 a.m. This, even though everyone may have gone to bed at 11.

THE MALECON or seawall forms a graceful embankment that separates the city of Mazatlan from its beaches and the Pacific Ocean. And along it are the hotels, the shops, the seafood restaurants and the sidewalk cafes that make Mazatlan one of the most delightful of Mexico's cities for visitors from north of the border.

Museum Visit In Montreal Is Trip Into Past

Stepping through its front door is like turning back the clock of history to the days of pioneer Canada.

In the hall, the visitor encounters animals and birds that must have been first seen by the great LaSalle as he studied the grant made to him by the Gentlemen of St. Sulpice in 1666.

There is also an exhibit of Eskimo work and modern carvings, as well as silver and old china. There is also a replica of the first chapel of the Holy Angels erected in 1676.

The Family Room is furnished with chairs which came from the first chapel of the Holy Angels. It also contains a grandfather clock with wooden works, an ancient salt box, a butter churn, a rocking chair, and a cradle.

Opera's Birthplace

Grand opera was first sung in America in a theater in New Orleans, reports Continental Airlines. The building, located at 718 St. Peter Street, is in the city's French Quarter.

Dear Mr. and Mrs. G. Trotter

RE: 1974 VACATIONS

Contrary to impressions created by the various media regarding prices, schedules, and the entire energy crunch, the world has not stopped. The airlines are still flying, ships are still sailing, and the hotels are still open. Yes, there are fewer flights, one port less on the cruises, and only one-half of the marquee lights on at the hotel, but there is still enough room for those who book early.

As more and more people realize that conserving gas does not mean the end of their vacations, we predict that more and more people will be flying in those airplane seats that were empty last year. Reserve ahead and you can go where you want at a convenient time.

Bargains still abound abroad. Mexico and Hawaii offer many group air fares at low prices, and the American dollar is stronger in Europe and Japan than at any time since we devalued. This is a good time to explore those countries you always wanted to see. It takes less fuel to walk down to the beach at Waikiki, or ride a bus in Athens than it does to drive to Lake Tahoe.

So make your plans early. Call us at 461-9400 and we will make all your arrangements. If it turns out you can't go, let us know and we'll cancel for you in plenty of time. But plan now.

Bon Voyage!

COLORFUL LA BOCA

Buenos Aires Has Its North Beach, Complete To Soccer And Spaghetti

By JOHN F. LOCKE

MARIN LIVING

Buenos Aires is a metropolis of more than six million people. It is also Argentina's capital city, with its Presidential Palace, of stone painted pink and known as the Casa Rosada.

And it is also a real melting pot — a sort of New York City or San Francisco to the south.

The population falls into four principal groups — about one-quarter Spanish-speaking, about one-quarter English-speaking, about one-quarter German-speaking and about one-quarter Italian-speaking.

The Italian speaking section of the city is down near the mouth of the La Plata River, so it deserves the name of 'La Boca' (which means the mouth).

LIKE ALL SOUTH Americans, the Argentinians are great soccer fans. In fact, there is a team which represents the La Boca District which is called the Boca Juniors. They play in a very modern stadium built about 10 years ago. It holds about as many fans as Shea Stadium in New York City.

So fanatic are the fans that they have been known to kill an umpire whose decision displeased them.

The streets of La Boca are narrow, something like those of Boston or lower Manhattan. Perhaps the most famous is Caminito, which means little path. It is even shorter than the well-known Wall Street.

THE WALLS OF the houses have been painted in very bright colors with murals representing people famous in the country's history. There are poems dedicated to the Gaucho, the Argentine cowboy who has had almost as many legends grow up around him as our American variety. An epic poem was written over a century ago about Martin Fierro, and parts of this poem have been written on the walls of the street. Several movies have been made about Martin Fierro, some recently.

A few short blocks away is a street which is especially lively on Friday and Saturday nights.

It is lined with several inexpensive nightclubs to which buses bring tourists of all stripes, not just Americans.

ONE PARTICULAR bus takes them to Spadavecchia (the Old Sword), a place whose walls are painted in psychedelic colors of the brightest hues. Long wooden tables like picnic affairs with wooden benches to match are crowded into as many spaces as possible. The menu is not a gourmet one but consists of large platters of fried smelts, oodles of spaghetti, almost unlimited quantities of cheap red wine, with spumoni to top it all off.

The waiters wear German spiked helmets, caps reminiscent of the Al Capone era in Chicago, and rattle huge piles of dishes in time to the music. The latter is provided by a three piece orchestra consisting of piano, trumpet and accordion played through a public address system loud enough to bounce off the Andes.

Every customer as he enters is asked what country he comes from. Then the orchestra plays the song or songs typical of that country, and the guests of that nationality are expected to get up and dance. One particular night Uruguay, Chile, Peru, Brazil and the United States were represented.

THE USA WAS saluted by the jazz tune "When the Saints Come Marching In."

The evening ended with some customers dancing on the tables, others on the floor to music from the Carnivale of Rio de Janeiro. This lasted about 20 minutes and wore everybody out.

If this is typical of the frenzied dancing of Carnivale time, no wonder people drop in the streets from sheer exhaustion.

Spadavecchia advertises itself as "Mundiamente Famoso" or world famous, but few tourists hear of it until they visit Buenos Aires. It is but one of a series of clubs on this street, the programs of which are much alike.

A YUGOSLAV woman who works for a well known travel bureau in the city, asked if she had ever been there, replied: "Yes, once, for the first and last time."

Along the La Plata River itself are docks at which are anchored barges, tugs in various states of decrepitude, and tramp steamers which look too exhausted for any more tramping here or elsewhere.

Caminito has been immortalized in a tango of the same name, a tango which starts "Caminito, Caminito de mi vida. . ." These words mean "Little path, little path of my life."

This popular song was first published in 1926 or thereabouts.

Rio Isn't The Only Resort City In Brazil

Although Rio de Janeiro still ranks as Brazil's most popular resort city, other areas of the country are being discovered.

The picturesque city of Salvador, Bahia, is fast becoming one of the favorite attractions of Brazil. Located 500 miles north of Rio, Salvador is rich in colonial architecture and history, for it was the first capital of the country. Noted for its fine cuisine, music and dancing, it reflects the area's Afro-Brazilian heritage.

Hotel construction in Salvador is keeping pace with the growing number of tourists. The Othon hotel chain soon will open a 350- room beach resort; a large Hilton Hotel is under construction; and the Hotel Plaza group is building next to the Bahia Othon Palace Hotel.

Iguassu Falls, located at the borders of Brazil, Argentina and Paraguay, also is attracting more visitors. The ideal time to visit the falls is during the Brazilian summer months of January and February and again in July and August. A number of hotels are located on the Brazilian side including Hotel Das Cataratas, Hotel Carima, San Martin and Salvatti.

Toronto's Marine Museum Tells Story Of Great Lakes

The Marine Museum of Upper Canada in Toronto, Canada, contains an extraordinarily realistic exhibition of the development of shipping on the inland waterways of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence system.

Each room is a veritable ticket to the past, with a multitude of colorful displays and marine artifacts depicting the fascinating history of ships on fresh water from the earliest times to the present day.

The Cayuga Room houses the reconstructed navigation bridge of Toronto's most famous excursion steamer, the Cayuga. The bridge is complete with all original equipment, wheel, binnacle, telegraph and searchlight.

The Toronto Room traces the growth and development of Toronto Harbor by means of pictorial displays and exhibits. The room also houses many scale models of ships that once travelled the trade routes of the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence River.

The steam-tug Ned Hanlan, the museum's finest exhibit, is fully restored and open to visitors. She was among the last steam-tugs to operate in North America.

After inspecting the museum's historic treasures, visitors can enjoy a relaxed luncheon on weekdays at the Ship Inn, a fully licensed restaurant within the Museum, in the style of a waterside tavern of 1850. Tea is served on Sundays.

The museum is open all year.

THERE IS NO mystery as to why Suva on the Fijis is sometimes referred to as "the Venice of the South Seas," as this photograph demonstrates. The scene was taken from a small, hump-backed bridge at the top of Cummings Street in the Fijian capital. Some Marin travel agents report that an increased interest in two areas — the South Pacific and South America — is particularly noticeable in the early planning for 1974 vacations. And they predict a heavy traffic of travelers west and south from the San Francisco area this year.

One Man's Love Affair With The City Of Seattle

By DAVID L. BOND
Travel Editor, Seattle Post-Intelligencer

Cities are like women!

I've always believed that every woman in the world has something beautiful about her... granted, you sometimes have to look harder at some than others.

Take London, for instance. I was born in London Town, and she has been and always will be my mother: Elderly, kind and yet somehow she keeps abreast of the changing times while always making me welcome.

Yes, I've had affairs... There was Singapore: she was exotic and warm. Amsterdam — ah, how I remember her excitement, fun and oh, how she loved art. Then, there was Torremolinos, fiery smouldering Torremolinos who loved to dance til the early hours.

I ALMOST MARRIED an American girl I came to know and love — San Francisco; but although we dined out a great deal, somehow our romance always seemed an up-and-down affair.

Then it happened. I feel completely in love: not immediately, mind you, but gradually. I suppose you could amost say it crept up on me really. And what makes it more exciting, she's a Queen.

Remember, now, I'm not a child anymore; in fact, I've been around a little, so I think you'll agree that my Queen must have something going for her.

She was born in 1851. I know she's young, but it's really quite surprising just how sophisticated she's become in the few years I've lived with her.

NATURAL BEAUTY is just one of her assets for she loves skiing, the opera, sailing, water skiing — well, I suppose it all boils down to the fact that she loves life and people.

I can hear you all saying to yourselves, "he's infatuated." That's natural, so you will just have to meet my Queen to appreciate her for yourselves.

Vital statistics? How does 75-22-36 grab you? No wonder they wrote a song about my girl. You may have heard it — it was entitled, "The Bluest Skies You've Ever Seen Are In Seattle."

I'm sorry. I just realized I've been carrying on about the virtues of my wife and I hadn't even mentioned her name. Isn't that a pretty name? Seattle... she was named after Chief Sealth, a friendly Indian chief who once lived hereabouts in Washington State.

NOW YOU'RE ASKING yourselves, "Just what has this 'Seattle' got that any other girl hasn't got?"

Back to statistics. Seventy-Five: Now you've got to admit that's looking ahead, as it were, and probably will take a lot of supporting! To put the record straight, Seattle's King County Domed Stadium — that's what we call it — opens in 1975 and will be the only site like it west of the Rockies.

Just imagine the fun and sports that will go on then. Conventions and tourists: they'll be here just to see the Queen's Dome, let alone to dine in the 22 international and continental restaurants that are available.

OF COURSE, HER favorite is seafood, which I suppose is only natural when you consider that she has spent all her life next to the water.

To give you some idea of just how much water there is in Seattle's pool, suffice it to say there are more boats per capita than in any other city in the United States. Over 100,000 boats in a city of 600,000 people.

If you're thinking, "My, that's a lot of water" — you should see Seattle's rockery! To the west over on the spectacular Olympic Peninsula sit the rugged Olympic Mountains; while between the Queen's City and Eastern Washington, a mere 50 miles away, the Cascade Mountain Range beckons to hunters and skiers.

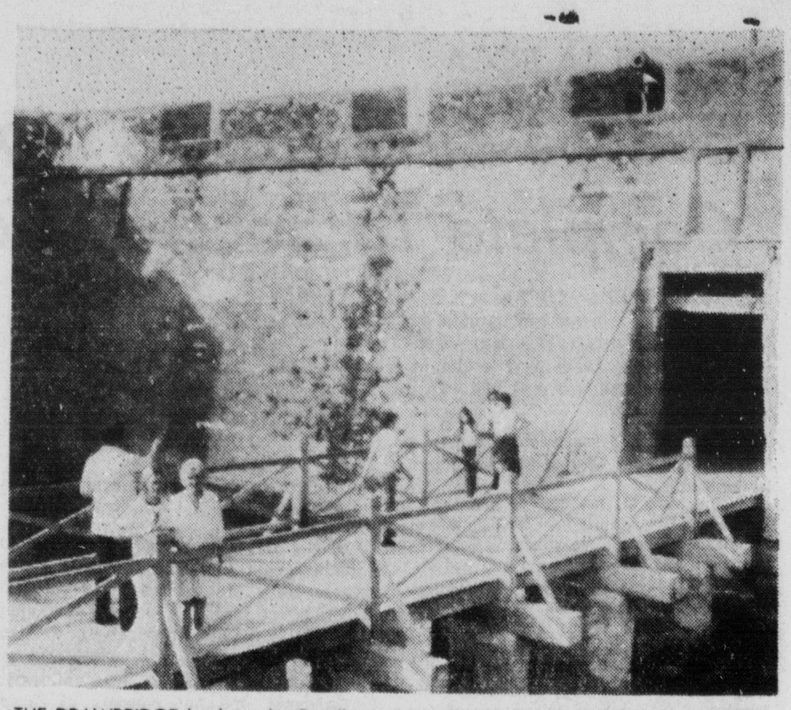

Every garden needs a focal point, and snow-covered Mount Rainier rising 14,410 feet towards the sky also serves as a backdrop to the 40 and 50-storied buildings and hotels fit for royalty that sit amid their spectacular surroundings.

WHOEVER HEARD of a really beautiful garden without a fountain and a statue or two? Well, before she met me, Seattle had quite an affair in 1962. Indeed, it was a World's Fair, the results of which were significant. The graceful Seattle Space Needle rises 600 feet and is set amid a 70-acre garden of fountains and fun, while from the revolving restaurant Mother Nature's grandeur unfolds before you.

Seattle is a fun girl whose temperature averages 70 in the summer and 40 in the winter... she just isn't given to extremes.

I'm sorry I got carried away, but you know how love is. Not that I've found every city in the world to be like a woman, mind you. (I just couldn't find it in me to look upon Sydney that way.) But Seattle, the Queen City — now there is a woman!

(Editor's Note: London-born, much-traveled Bond, a former professional soccer player, arrived in Seattle four years ago, put down roots, and went to work as travel editor of that city's Post-Intelligencer.)

THE DRAWBRIDGE leads to the Castillo de San Marcos in St. Augustine, Fla., and from its ramparts you can relive some of the history of the oldest city in the United States. Construction of the fortress began in 1672 and continued into 1695.

A Castle In The USA? Yes, And A Mighty One

By URSULA McCARTHY

As you cross the drawbridge over the moat and climb the stone steps to the ramparts of St. Augustine's Castillo de San Marcos, you gain a commanding view over the mouth of the Matanzas River as it flows through the narrow straits leading to the Atlantic Ocean. And early American history vividly comes alive!

You understand immediately why these command positions were so important in history to win and to keep.

Anyone who has ever experienced a sense of power atop the ramparts of a Spanish castle on the Castilian plains or the sense of awe that comes from looking up to the heights of the abbey on Monte Casino renews those experiences across an ocean in Florida.

LEGENDS AND EPICS have prepared us for the dramatic Spanish castles of Castile; but even our American history books that have told us St. Augustine is the oldest city in the United States had not prepared us for the dramatic surprise of the awesome view from the Castillo de San Marcos. In a land that is notoriously flat, the castle is a Herculean feat performed by men of another time.

The visit to the castle was part of a brief two-hour visit to St. Augustine.

At first glimpse the restored St. Augustine is a quiet, charming, narrow-laned section of the city, marked by early Spanish and French architecture, intimate gardens and quaint craft shops.

ORIGINALLY THERE were plans for a restoration of St. Augustine that would have rivaled the project in Williamsburg. But funds were lacking for such an extensive restoration, and plans were trimmed. The result is a small village of yesteryear, equal to about three city blocks.

Its sloping lawns lead up to the drawbridge, adding a gentle touch to the approach. But this makes all the greater the impact of the view from the ramparts of the contrasting surroundings.

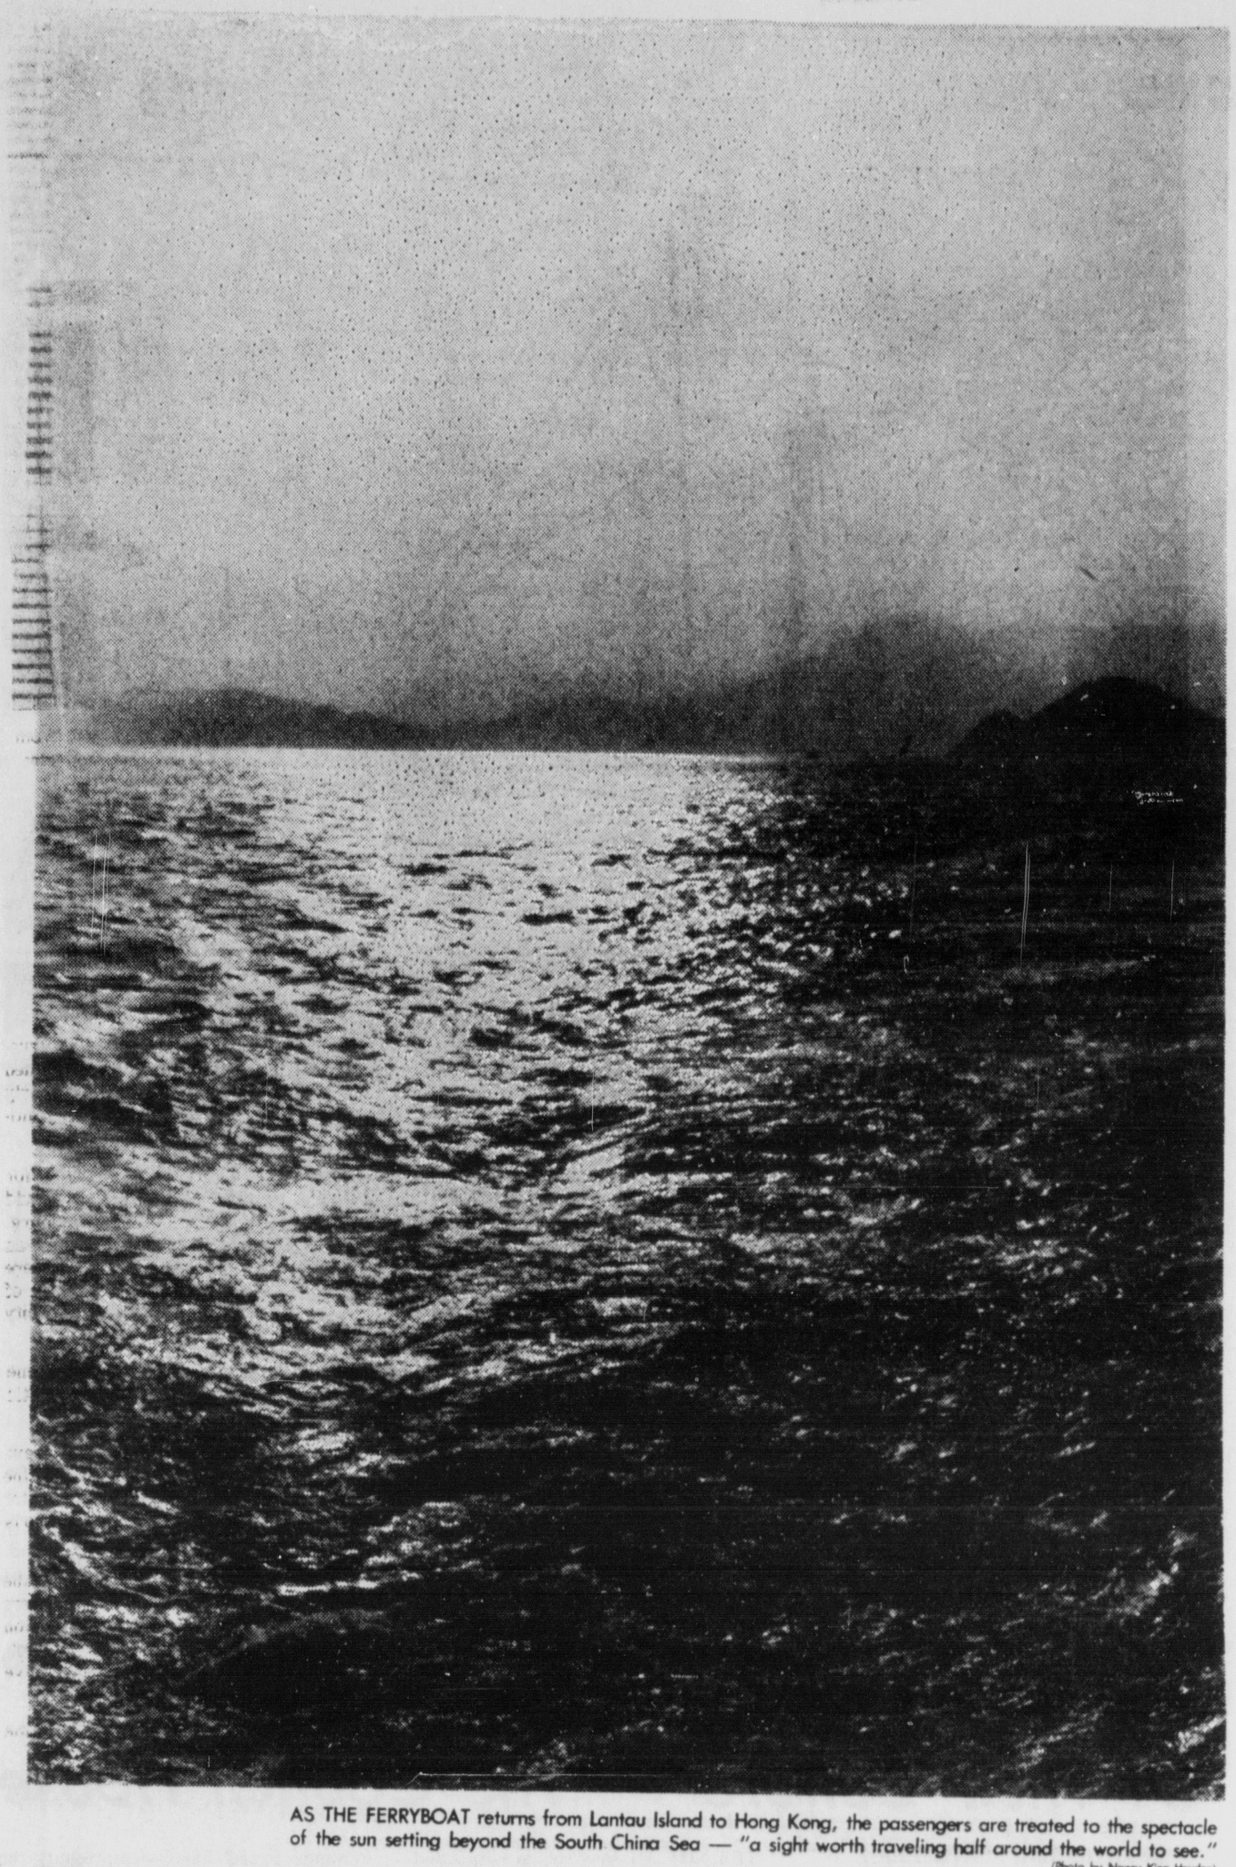

Castillo de San Marcos was vital to the survival of St. Augustine's first settlers — an impregnable fortress. This you understand when you experience it firsthand. Yes, history suddenly comes alive in St. Augustine.

And two hours is much too short a time in which to relive it.

THE SKIER'S KIND OF VACATION

THERE'S ONE KIND of vacationer who doesn't wait for spring or summer to enjoy his recreational respite from the cares of the work-a-day world. And who often travels no farther than a short drive into his own California mountains for his relaxation. He's the skier. And indications are that the energy crisis isn't keeping him from managing to get to the Sierra and the snow country. Sometimes it is only for a weekend. But more than a few winter sports enthusiasts take their vacations during the cool weather months, and spend their weeks in the high country.

AS THE FERRYBOAT returns from Lantau Island to Hong Kong, the passengers are treated to the spectacle of the sun setting beyond the South China Sea — "a sight worth traveling half around the world to see."

HONG KONG'S NEIGHBOR

Too Few Travelers In Far East See Monastery On Lantau Isle

By NANCY KING HAYDEN

Hong Kong is undeniably one of the world's most exciting cities! However, the wall to wall crush of humanity and the frantic, noisy, around the clock activity of the British Colony have a way of closing in on one.

When this happens, it's time to refresh the senses and the spirit with a day trip to the Po Lin Monastery on nearby Lantau Island. The lovely Buddhist temple is the largest in the Colony.

Lantau, which means "broken head," is eight miles west of Hong Kong, and easily reached by ferry. While five times larger than the Crown Colony island, it is sparsely populated. As there are no organized tours to the island and not too many tourists have discovered Lantau.

THE GROUP WAITING at the Outlying District Ferry terminal for the Silvermine Bay express, is composed mainly of islanders returning from a shopping expedition to Hong Kong. They carry a variety of purchases which range from common place fruits and vegetables to a bagful of live pigeons.

You'll pass the charred hulk of the first Queen Elizabeth. Purchased by wealthy Tung Ho Wan for use as a floating university, the Queen Elizabeth I burned on Jan. 9, 1972. The formerly gracious lady now lies on her side in the mud of the harbor, her stacks pointing at a crazy angle.

SOON THE SCENIC views of Victoria Harbor give way to a parade of small islands which dot the costal waters of the South China Sea.

When you reach the single street town of Silvermine Bay on Lantau Island, head for the smaller of the minibuses parked at the ferry terminal. They are the ones which go to the temple.

Elbow your way aboard, just like everyone else. If you stand on ceremony you are apt to find yourself elbowed to the end of the line, standing outside of a full bus.

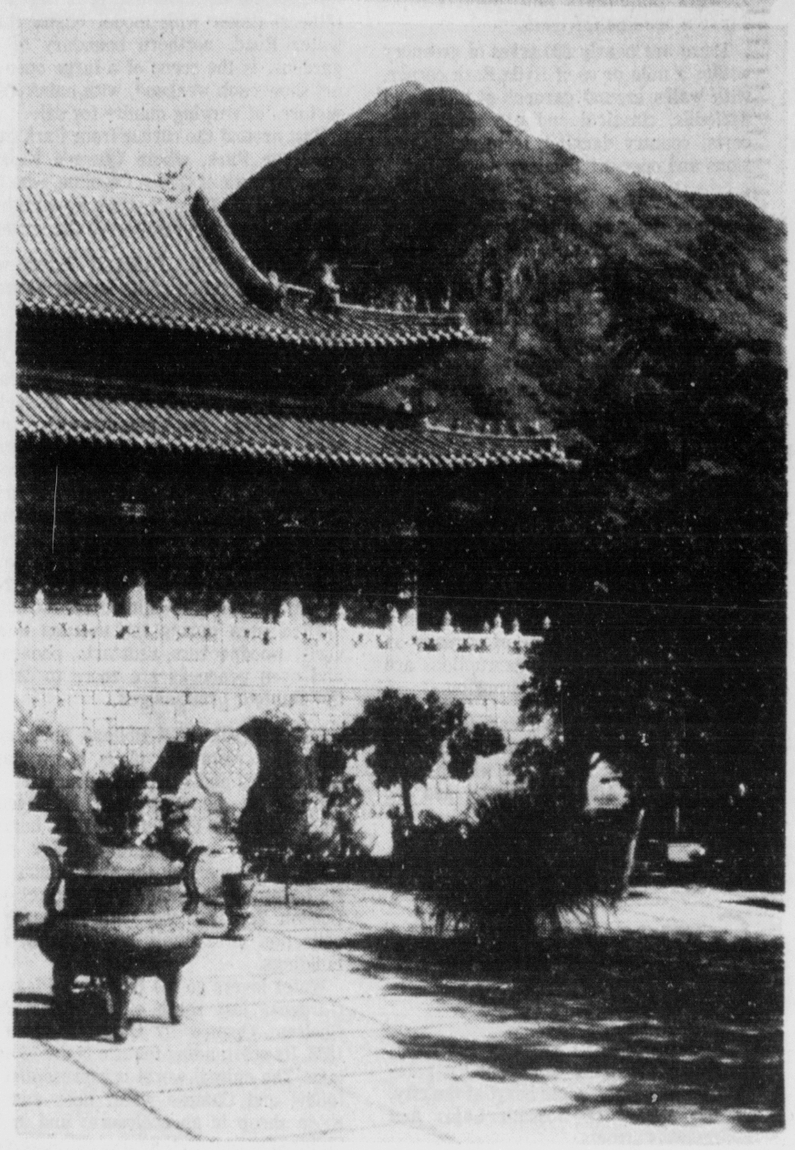

Because a government permit is required to drive on Lantau, one encounters few vehicles as the wheezing minibus climbs the increasingly narrow road past the Shek Pik reservoir.

WATER GATHERED here is transferred by undersea pipeline to Pok Fu Lam Reservoir on Hong Kong in an effort to reduce the price paid by the British Colony for water from Mainland China. Until the development of a reservoir system, Hong Kong depended solely on Mainland China for its water supply.

During the drought of 1963-64 Hong Kong had only enough reserve water to supply residents with four hours of tap water every fourth day. Cost of water for the Crown Colony from Mainland China still runs around 16 million dollars a year. Hong Kong also relies on this source for 60 per cent of its food.

Higher in the mountains, past the reservoir, the single lane road becomes two cement wheel tracks. There are no guard rails and a glance into the valley on a sharp turn becomes quite an experience. The drivers are expert, however, and the bus completes its 3,000 foot climb without incident.

MARIN LIVING

WITH A MOUNTAIN in the background, the Po Lin Monastery on Lantau Island offers a charming and peaceful contrast to its neighbor, bustling, teeming Hong Kong. A 45-minute ferryboat ride separates the two places that seem a world apart.

THE ENTRANCE TO the monastery grounds is marked by a graceful, ornately carved white gate. The two main temples of the monestary are filled with golden buddhas and the air is pugent odor of burning joss sticks. Visitors are welcome to wander at leisure through the treasure filled rooms while the priests go quietly about their business.

The temples are flanked with peaceful pavillions where one may sit and enjoy the view and listen to the cooing of the doves. The sight of the temples sparkling against the sheer peaks of Lantau's mountains seems as close to Shangri-La as one can hope to come in a lifetime.

Reluctantly one boards the bus for the ride down the mountain to connect with the last ferry to Hong Kong. This is a "milk run" ferry, quite in contrast to the deluxe ride over, but of even greater interest. The seats are wooden benches, and in lieu of windows, canvas panels can be lowered against the ocean spray.

Sampan fishermen require two licenses to carry on their trade. One is issued by the British Hong Kong officials, and the other by Mainland China. To fish the South China Sea, the sampan fisherman must pay Mainland China with 20 per cent of his catch and attend two political meetings a month.

As the ferry heads from Peng Chau to Hong Kong, one is treated to the spectacular of the sun setting beyond the South China Sea — a sight worth traveling half around the world to see.

For The Real Flavor Of Japan, Stay In A Ryokan, Off The Beaten Track

By MURRAY J. BROWN

KANAWAZA, Japan (UPI) — Many American tourists visiting Japan for the first time take tours which usually include lively Tokyo, busy Osaka and the peaceful ancient capitals of Nara and Kyoto.

And chances are they will stay at western-style hotels.

Tokyo and Osaka, with their blending of the old and the new of East and West, can offer much of interest for the swinger, shipper and sightseer. And Nara and Kyoto are treasure troves of castles, Buddhist temples, Shinto shrines and other historical mementos of the Old Japan of the Shoguns and Samurai.

HOTELS SUCH AS the Imperial and New Otani in Tokyo, Plaza and Toyo in Osaka and International in Kyoto rate top marks among veteran travelers for their accommodations, facilities and services.

But for Americans with a spirit of adventure there are off the beaten tourist track resorts with delightful Japanese ryokans (inns where about the only concession to the occasional foreign guest is a western-style lavatory).

I made my first overnight visit to a ryokan on a tour arranged by Japan Air Lines for guests on its press inaugural flight from New York to Tokyo via Anchorage. Flying time is about 16 hours.

From Tokyo, it took about three and a half hours by plane and bus to reach the Hakuunro Hotel in the hot spring spa of Yuwaku near Kanawaza on the Sea of Japan across Honshu island. We flew to Komatsu aboard an All-Nippon F27 turboprop, skirting Mt. Fuji and the snow-covered mountains of the Japanese Alps in the central region.

THE 90-MINUTE bus ride from Komatsu took us past flat farmlands, mirror-like flooded rice paddies, and villages of traditional Japanese homes of wood crowned with roofs of tile.

The Hakuunro Hotel is on the outskirts of Kanazawa, about 1,000 feet up in the hills overlooking a lake. It was built in 1952 but has been modernized and expanded and now offers about 100 rooms, including 30-odd in an air-conditioned wing built down one side of the hill.

We were bowed into the lobby where a middle-aged maid assigned to our room took our shoes (you get them back when you leave) and then led us to our quarters.

ACTUALLY, IT WAS a suite, consisting of a large dining-sleeping area with a low table and cushions, separated by sliding screen panels from a small living room with a Western-type sofa and two chairs, a tiny kitchenette, dressing room, private bath with sunken tub and a separate western-style toilet. There also were a chest of drawers, a clothes closet and a color television set.

The maid motioned us to remove our clothes and handed my room mate and me a light cotton robe called a yukata, a cloth belt, a heavy outer kimono, and a pair of clogs which was all we wore during our stay. Also a towel, about the size of a handkerchief, for washing, bathing and drying.

Hakuunro has several indoor bathing facilities in addition to an outdoor pool. Indoor baths include private "family" tubs and a communal bath house with three big pools, all fed by hot spring waters. We enjoyed the pools although all the other bathers — Japanese and American — were also male.

IN JAPAN, BATHERS soap and rinse outside the tub before submerging in the steaming hot water. A cold dousing or shower usually completes the bath.

We slept on thick quilt-like rugs called futons spread on the soft tatmi reed mat floor and found it quite comfortable. Less comfortable for me, however, was sitting or kneeling on the floor or cushions during meals.

But all in all it was a memorable experience.

Rates at the Hakuunro during our visit ranged from $25 to $35 per day with two Japanese-style meals served in the room by the maid. But prices could change in view of the revaluation of the yen and the dollar.

Things To See In Iran's Capital

Of all the noteworthy attractions in Tehran, the present capital of Iran, two of the most popular are the fabulous collection of royal jewels and the palace that has been set aside as a museum.

Americans abroad can vouch for that if their travels lead them to fascinating Tehran and the basement vault of Bank Markazi Iran. It's none other than the royal treasury and contains the fantastic array of royal jewels that nobody could conjure up even in his wildest dreams.

Said to be the basis for Iran's monetary system, this dazzling collection has diamonds, emeralds and every precious stone to captivate the beholder.

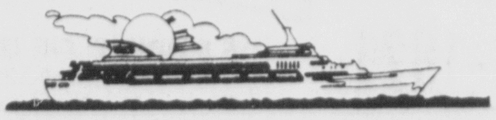

As for the palace that is now a museum, it can't help but please with its valuable Oriental and Occidental works of art. Tourists express great interest in its paintings, spectacular porcelains, mirrored walls, crystal chandeliers, and other treasures.

London's Lovely Parks Serve As The Lungs Of Great City

By PADDY BRERETON

The Earl of Chatham, 150 years ago, described the parks of London as the "city's lungs," and for sunshine and flowers Londoners and tourists alike make a bee-line for them.

There are nearly 800 acres of greenery within a mile or so of Hyde Park corner, with walks around gardens of tulips and daffodils, classical and pop music concerts, country dancing, lectures, discussions and open-air theater.

HYDE PARK, right in the center of London, has an interesting history. Around four centuries ago, in Henry VIII's time, it was one of the king's favorite hunting parks, and it was not until Charles I's reign that the public was allowed into the area.

Charles II helped to make Hyde Park fashionable. George II's wife Queen Caroline had the foresight to order the construction of the Serpentine, a long artificial lake where you can row or sail or dine in one of two very attractive restaurants on its shores.

Speaker's Corner at the northern end of the park, near Marble Arch, is at its liveliest on weekends, with all kinds of people speaking on a variety of subjects — especially the touchy areas of politics and religion. There are often as many as 20 speakers at a time. Interruptions are frequent and often highly amusing.

THE PARK'S western end forms the boundary with another Royal Park, Kensington Gardens, where you will find the extraordinary Albert Memorial and the London Museum, which are favorites of adults and children alike.

Here too is the Round Pond — actually not round at all — where visitors can feed the ducks, and small boys (and their fathers) tinker with model boats. Bayswater Road, northern boundary of the gardens, is the scene of a large open-air art show each weekend, with hundreds of pictures of varying quality for sale.

Just around the corner from Park Lane is Green Park, whose Queen's Walk is also the work of Queen Caroline, who had it created in 1730 so that the Royal family might "divert themselves in the spring."

NEARBY ST. JAMES' Park was cleared and tidied of its former swamps and ponds and landscaped into one stretch of water by Charles II. The park has a remarkable range of bird life, including wild ducks, geese and pelicans.

The 54-acre Holland Park is tucked away behind the Commonwealth Institute in Kensington. Among its most celebrated features is the Dutch Garden, laid out in 1912 by Buonaiuti, and originally known as the Portuguese Garden.

It consists of a formal and geometrical arrangement of flower beds, bordered with box and separated by straight gravel paths. Floodlights illuminate the entire garden area during the evening hours. Owls, woodpeckers, redstarts, pheasants and even peacocks are there to delight the amateur ornithologist.

North of the West End is Regent's Park, another of Henry VIII's hunting forests, now a 482-acre circular park housing an open-air theatre, famous for its summer Shakespeare productions. London Zoo is there, with its immense collection of animals and striking new buildings.

Water lovers go the Battersea Pleasure Gardens, just south of the river from Chelsea. Opened by Queen Victoria in 1858, its outstanding feature is the 16-acre lake. The animal world is represented by fallow and Chinese water deer and St. Kilda sheep in an enclosure; and in the Children's Zoo, by lemurs, chimpanzees, Malabar squirrels, gibbons and pgymy donkeys.

HAMPSTEAD HEATH is 825 hilly acres in northwest London. Parliament Hill Fields provide the course of international cross-country races. Kenwood, an 18th-century house open to the public on the northern edge, has an outstanding collection of paintings, including works by Gainsborough, Rembrandt, Reynolds, Van Dyck and Vermeer.

Two other great suburban parks are Trent Park to the north, and Hainault Forest to the east. At Trent Park four hundred acres are being developed as a country park. There are many delightful walks, including fenced farm trails, a horse-riding school, and an intensive nature trail.

Hainault Forest is one of the few surviving fragments of the Great Forest of Essex. It has a four-and-a-half mile riding circuit, an eight-acre fishing lake and two 18-hole golf courses.

London parks are part of the reason why visitors agree that England is a "green and pleasant land."

English Pub Comes To Old Budapest

The first English tavern of Budapest, the Pepita Oroszlan has opened it gates to the public right in the heart of the city, on the corner of Kossuth Lajos and Semmelweis streets.

Both the inner and outer appearances of the Pepita Oroszlan remind the guest of the atmosphere of old London pubs and English country taverns. The outer walls are covered with red bricks and oak timbers, and a sign with a lion is hanging above the entrance. The window panes of the place are dark outside and they have red, blue and yellow colors inside. The inner walls are covered with wooden panels. In the foreground, near the entrance stands the counter with high seats in front of it. Near the counter different types of sandwishes and salads can be seen in a glass case.

The expresso part of the place looks also very much like a pub, with its small round tables and chairs with red upholstery. If you enter the inner part of the place then you will see a flight of a typical English wooden stairs connecting the restaurant with the gallery.

Oxygen In Every Room —

By LEON DANIEL

SHYANGBOCHE, Nepal (UPI) — The French pilot worried the sturdy little plane through jagged, snow-covered Himalayan passes, then abruptly set it down 14 miles from the world's highest peak.

Six passengers, no longer nervous, stepped from the plane and breathed sighs of relief with difficulty because the icy air that whipped the 1,300-foot freeze-hardened dirt airstrip at an elevation of 12,700 feet lacked oxygen.

MOUNT EVEREST, that awesome mass of dirt, rock and ice that towers 29,028 feet between Nepal and Tibet, looked very close with the wind blowing clouds of snow off its crest.

But, close as we were, we still were a world away, dilettantes on the turf of sturdier men, those who challenge the seemingly impossible.

Incredibly, there is a hotel there. Predictably, it claims to be the world's highest.

The Everest View Hotel, owned and operated by mountain-loving Japanese, attracts those who have seen almost everything and have the money to see the rest.

FULL BOARD AT the hotel is $61 a day and the food is nothing to write home about. Oxygen tanks are available in all rooms.

The 45-minute flight from Katmandu to the Shyangboche airstrip, an hour's trek from the hotel, is a bargain of thrills at $35. A round trip from the hotel to the famed Everest base camp by helicopter for a party of four costs $200 each.

Many who come here experience altitude sickness until their bodies adapt to the air's low oxygen content. This causes vomiting and splitting headaches.

Those who find the short trek from the airstrip to the hotel too exhausting because of the thin air can cover the distance on the back of a yak for a modest $2.

THE HOTEL, constructed with local stone, blends nicely with the rugged terrain but it is far from luxurious. The 12 double rooms are said to be centrally heated, but the best place to get warm is in front of a big circular fireplace in the lobby. Hot water is a sometime thing.

The main attraction here is a spectacularly beautiful view of the highest mountain in the world. For most people, that is quite enough.

Around the fire in the hotel guests talk about such things as the exploits of a onetime New Zealand beekeeper named Sir Edmund Hillary who in 1953, along with Sherpa guide Tenzing Norkay, were the first to climb Everest.

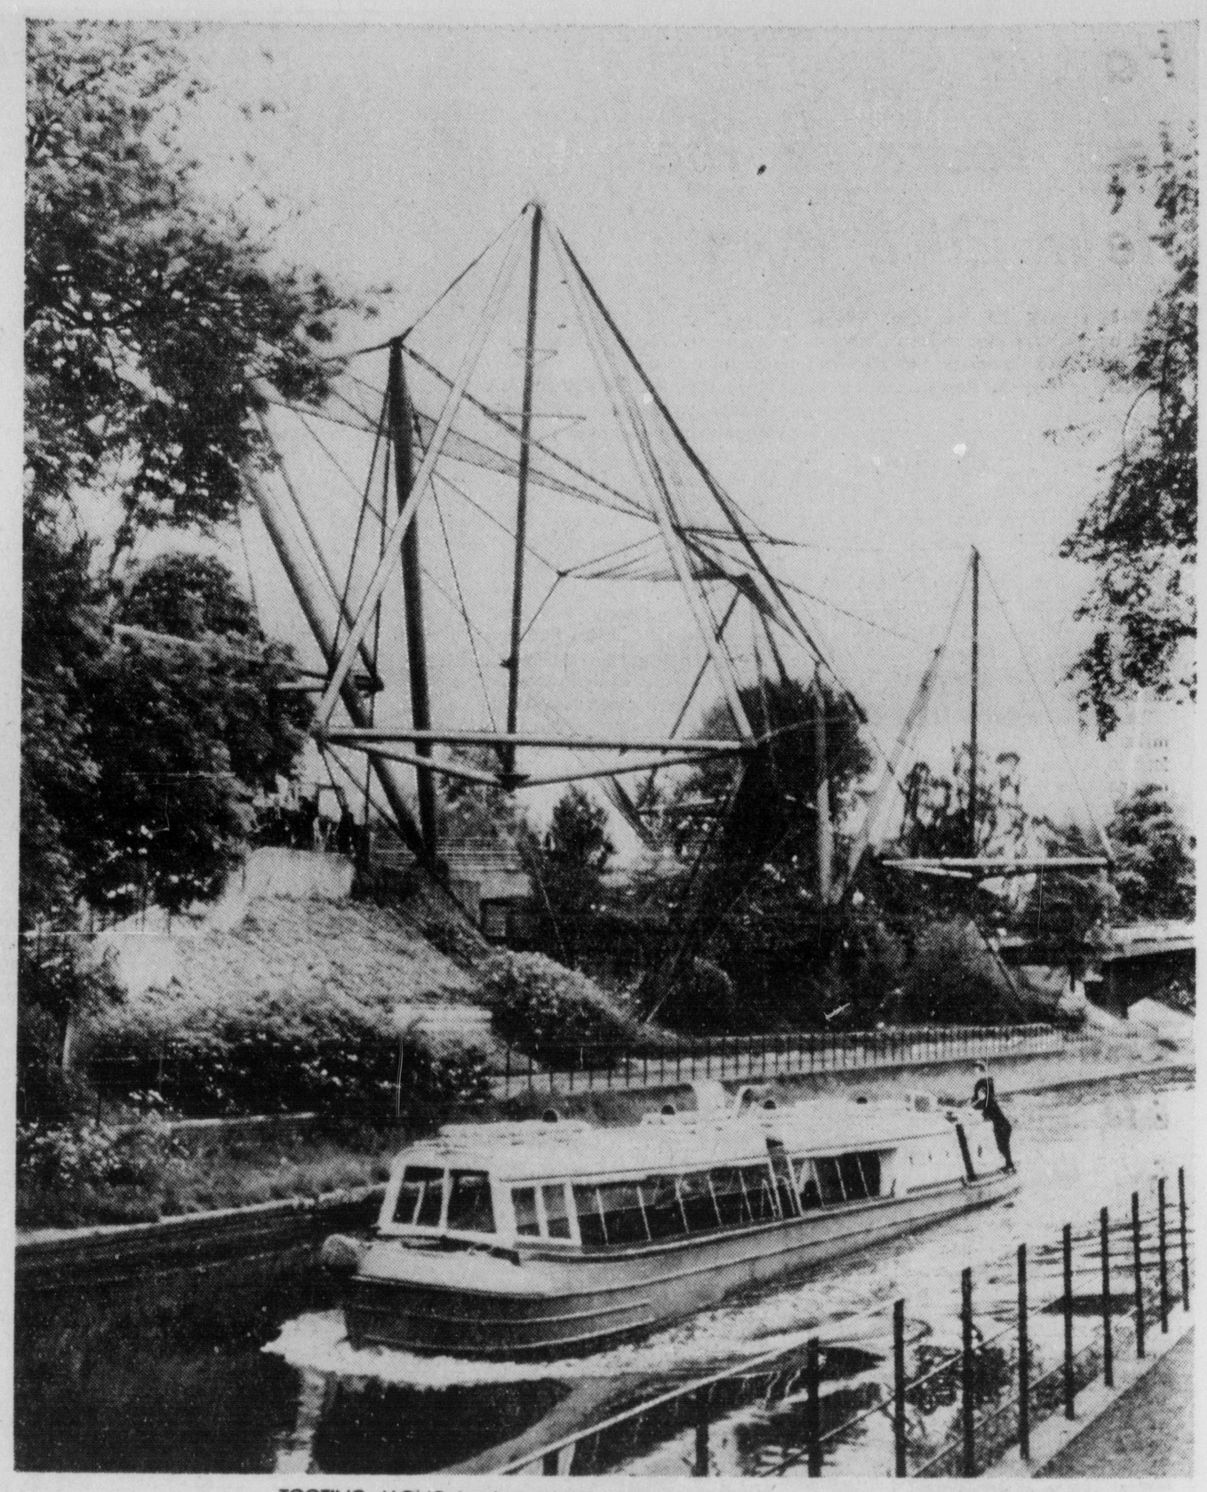

SINCE THEN the mountain has been climbed by men from several countries, including an American team in 1963 led by Norman G. Dyrenfurth.

China, which at one time claimed to own the summit, announced in the mid 1960s that it had sent a team, inspired by the thoughts of Chairman Mao Tse-tung, to the top.

That bust of Mao, say the doubters, will prove as elusive as the Yeti, the strange man-like creature westerners call the abominable snowman that is said to roam the remote crags of the Himalayas.

TOOTING ALONG London's canal system from Little Venice, the tour boat Jason passes the aviary of London Zoo in Regent's Park. The structure was designed by Lord Snowdon, Princess Margaret's husband. London visitors ride from Little Venice to the zoo for about 90 cents, children 50 cents. The trip takes an hour and a half.

The Palau Islanders Preserve A Piece Of Their Culture — The Council House

By KATHERINE NORTHBRIDGE

KOROR, PALAU — Time was when each village in the Palau Island group had a bai (traditional men's council house). Now there are only two left and they are fast deteriorating.

The size and quality of its bai, that peaceful sanctuary of wisdom and reason, where a man could speak his mind, used to be the measure of a village. And it bespoke the talent and artistry of its builders.

In the days before women were liberated and men still held sway over society, it was a worthy lifework to be master-builder of the village bai.

THAT'S WHY ONE stands at present in the Botanical Gardens in the district center of Koror. It serves as a museum exhibit, and was built in 1969 by Palauan master-builders as a monument to their skills.

Koror Museum's bai represents the finest traditional construction, built with adze and chisel in sections. One men's club built the walls, another club the floors. Then the sections were dismantled and each part carefully labeled prior to being transported by boat 15 miles to the dock at Koror, thence by truck to the permanent site. Here the parts were reassembled and the roof added.

The village elders never sat on chairs, but on the dark polished floor of dort hardwood. All the wood for the floor of Koror's bai came from the Rock Islands, which lie clustered off Koror's western shore. Each tree was felled by master logger Temengil of Peleliu.

"IT'S NOT AN easy job to climb that rugged limestone looking for dort," he says. "I cut down the trees with one ax and one saw. But the hardest part was to get the heavy logs to the water. It sometimes took days, even weeks, to drag one big, heavy tree to the water. Then I had to tie it to lighter wood to make it float."

No nails were used in the construction of the museum's bai. Each segment fits neatly into the next, like a Japanese puzzle. The steeply pitched roof —7,000 units of palm thatch woven and tied together — is lashed to massive beams.

And so sound is the building that despite the threat of storms and tropical rot, this bai is expected to stand at least a hundred years.

LEGEND HAS IT that construction of Paulau's first bai did not fare so well. A rooster is supposed to have crowed seven times while the gods were working on it. At the seventh crow the sun burst forth, and the gods, who worked only in darkness, dropped their tools and fled. Hence the first bai was never completed.

The splendid rooster which adorns the corner posts of the new bai — and is common to all bais — represents the legendary cock which brought forth the sun and scared the gods away.

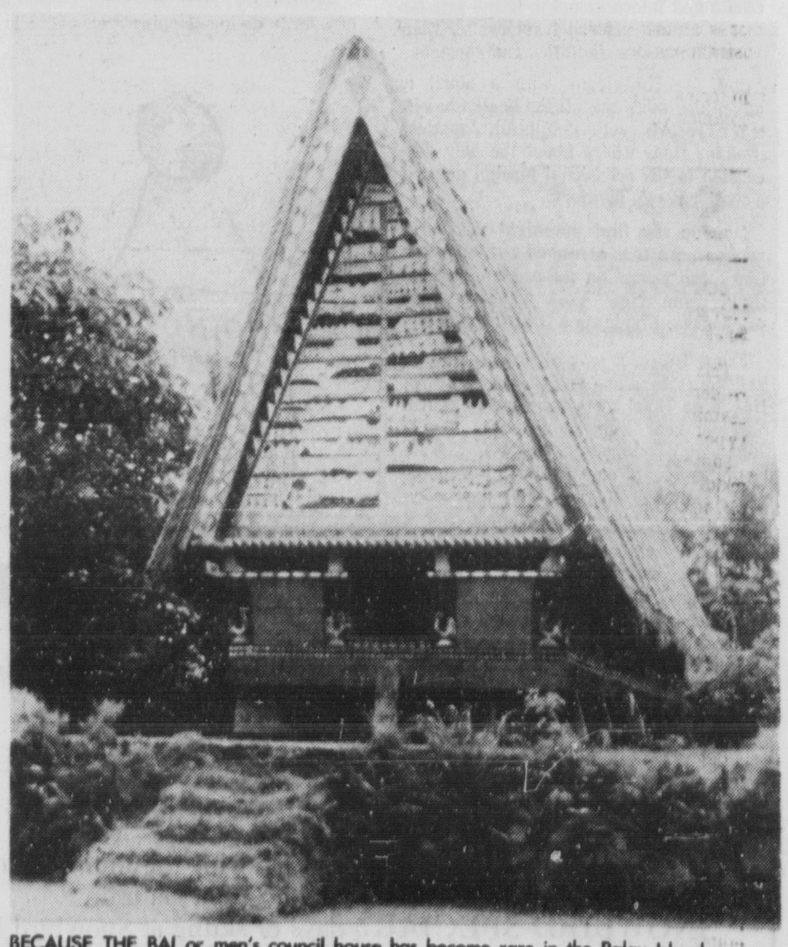

The bai is covered with beautiful carvings of scenes of life in the Palau Islands. One picture, of a sturdy boat full of people in black hats, depicts the arrival of the Germans.

IT ISN'T TOO difficult to imagine the Palauans' studied indifference to this occurrence. The Germans had taken Micronesia —of which Palau is one of six island districts — away from the Spanish after several hundred years of tenute. Subsequently Micronesia fell to the Japanese, and finally to the trusteeship of the Americans. Throughout these upheavals Palauan elders have met in their council houses and gone about the business of ruling their people, regardless of who else claimed to be ruling them too.

But things are different. The master-builders are fast disappearing. Palau's young men work with power tools and metal and have no interest in felling trees and making thatch.

1974 The Christian Science Publishing Society

BECAUSE THE BAI or men's council house has become rare in the Palau Island group, this one was erected in 1969 by master-builders in the Botanical Gardens in the district center of Koror, and stands as a museum exhibit, preserving a facet of South Seas culture that had become endangered. The bai is authentic in every respect.

Austrian Museum Collection One Of World's Finest

The collection of the Austrian National Museum in Vienna includes no less than 1,700 paintings that are valued at between $50,000 and $200,000 apiece. Many are worth even more.

Among the artists represented are Titian, Rubens, Tintoretto and Breughel.

The institution is currently preparing a publication about its collection, which is one of the oldest in the world. Some of these treasures were donated by the Hapsburgs; Rudolf II, one of the first patrons of the arts, contributed paintings by Durer, Breughel, Correggio and Parmigianino.

An Unusual Museum

A unique Museum of Sea Shell Art has opened on the French Caribbean island of Martinique, according to Air France. Highlighting the exhibits is a shell tableau of the coronation of Napoleon. The museum is located at Anse a l'Ane near the Bakoua Hotel.

Canada Takes No Back Seat With Its Castle

You don't have to go to Europe to see a feudal castle.

No longer inhabited, Casa Loma is open year-'round to tourists. Thousands climb its stairs to see secret staircases, passages between the floors, and an underground road connecting the castle with stables and garages across the street.

The castle takes up an entire city block and with the stables and other buildings covers seven acres in the center of a residential area. When it was built 62 years ago the castle was on Toronto's outskirts. Now it is surrounded by the city.

It took two years to complete the huge masonry and concrete edifice.

Harold Macmillan's Last Years At The Helm Of Britain

"AT THE END OF THE DAY 1961-1963 by Harold Macmillan; Harper and Row, 523 pages, $16.50. Reviewed by Patricia Pegg.

The Common Market, employment vs. national bankruptcy, the nuclear challenge, political havoc in rising Eastern nations and security and scandal are among the problems that plague Britain's Harold Macmillan during the closing years of his premiership.

"At The End of The Day 1961-1963", Macmillan's final book in his series of memoirs, illuminates these years and explores from a British point of view these problems of national and international significance.

The people and events of Harold Macmillan's story are not merely spewed forth in dry narrative, but enlivened via personal anecdotes and letters, heretofore unreleased governmental documents, press items and diary excerpts. And woven into, yet extending beyond pure political events, is Mac's own personality — his fears, his happiness, his despair. It is this personal dimension that makes "At The End of The Day" superbly interesting reading.

Although decidedly in the interest of a united Europe, and in a larger vein, the Western world, the effects on the British Commonwealth had to be considered: What about trade, industry, agriculture? What about sovereignity? Long and painful negotiations ensue amid political, economic and emotional tidal waves. The resulting compromises, agreements and high hopes are only to be crushed by the French veto, which Macmillan describes as "bad for the whole Free World," and as a "staggering" personal blow. He could understand exclusion on any precarious economic grounds, but is at a loss to accept DeGaulle's personal ego trip.

With the veto, Macmillan's dream of an interdependent Western community is tabled, at least temporarily.

Wages are up, productivity down. Steel, rail and automotive strikes hit, and taunts from the electrical workers threaten to bring major urban centers to a standstill. Ironically, Macmillan's success in meting out stiff measures which, in fact, stabilize the economic crisis, do little to win him any popularity contests, and hence, the first rumblings of combined Tory-Labor discontent are heard.

Into this framework, Macmillan weaves a most pressing international picture. Rumblings in the East, fostered by a muscle-flexing Nikita Khrushchev, and the ensuing juggling act between Russia and the West lay the groundwork for the nuclear challenge and the Cuban missile crisis.

Though a tiny island, long-fallen from political dominance, England played an interesting, if not integral part in guiding the debacle towards a satisfactory conclusion.

From his own account, Macmillan is the guiding light, a father-but-never-lord-and-master to John F. Kennedy. Their already close personal relationship is further strengthened through daily conversations and communications, reaching a peak with a showdown-support force which turns Khrushchev's Red face more red.

The reader also sees the pair teaming up less than a year later to bring Russia to her knees and to signing the Test Ban Treaty in 1963.

The interesting feature of this storyline is the political maneuverings from Macmillan to Kennedy, from Kennedy-Macmillan to DeGaulle and from Kennedy-Macmillan to Khrushchev. An incredible amount of stage play leads up to the tense "will they or won't they?" situation, until Russia suddenly accedes and the treaty is activated.

At the end of his book, Macmillan fittingly brings the reader back to Great Britain for a look at the forces at work which eventually bring his premiership to an end. The press, ever ready to strike at the public eye, finds cause during the security scandals which beset Mac's party in 1963. By his own admission he handled these too leniently, yet by today's standards, one wonders if they would hold a candle to Watergate. Nevertheless, they bring an already political pot-boiling into the frying pan stage.

This coupled with ill health ends Mac's premiership, but not the spirit of the courageous man who brought England through so many trying times.

These are not the only topics of Macmillan's book. Immigration problems, the African maze and piecing together a virtually new cabinet structure are all seen against the backdrop of economic distress and international disorder.

Macmillan's effort at telling his story is no classic political justification. Clearly, there were times when he was right and times when he was wrong; times when his measures were too little too late, and times when his political savvy was tried successfully. Macmillan remains, almost painfully at times, the realist even when the 10-year event-to-publication gap proves him right by a landslide.

The Strange Story Of One Woman's Life With Madman

"IT GAVE EVERYBODY SOMETHING TO DO" by Louise Thoresen with E. M. Nathanson; M. Evans, 346 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Mary Leydecker.

"Louise Thoresen."

The name is a familiar one out of the recent past, but it takes most of us a few seconds to identify her. Then, it's "Oh, yes, the wife of the gun nut. Didn't she shoot him?"

Yes, indeed, Louise Thorsen, shot William E. Thoresen, and she shot him dead. Furthermore, she was acquitted by a jury in 1970 in Fresno of the murder of her strange, mad husband of 10 years.

Now living a life out of the limelight, Louise Thorsen has dredged up the past in a strange, strange book that is not great literature but is a powerful tale.

In "It Gave Everybody Something To Do," Mrs. Thoresen tells the weird story of her years with Thoresen, which began when she met him on a blind date in Chicago in 1958.

She was a young high school teacher, a college graduate who came from a loving but working class family of immigrant background.

He was one of two sons of the president of Great Western Steel Co., and, at 20, he already had been hospitalized for mental illness.

Despite Louise's realization from the outset, according to her narrative, that Thoresen had a cruel, wild streak, she fell in love with him. Before they married in 1960, Louise had already stolen things, been arrested and jailed in order to "prove her love" for the mad young man.

After their marriage and the subsequent birth of a son, Michael, the Thoresens lived a wild and strange life in various states.

In Arizona, where Mrs. Thoresen supported the family by teaching since her husband had not yet gained his inheritance. Thoresen, as was his custom, refused to work.

"It gave everybody something to do," the book's title, was Mrs. Thoresen's remark at the end of a summer which had been marked by Thoresen and some friends periodically setting off bombs outside a radio station to frighten an announcer, also a "friend."

After he gained his inheritance, by literally stealing bags of securities from his father's safe, Thorensen dreamed of becoming a gun dealer. He bought a mansion in San Francisco and began to fill it with tons of guns and ammunition, some legal and some not. Mrs. Thoresen again helped.

All through the years, Thoresen, according to his wife, cruelly beat her on occasion, enjoyed exploits with other women, many of which he described to his wife, and delved heavily into drugs.

At various times she left him, but she was always drawn back like a moth to the flame, until the violent end of Thoresen's life.

The night before the shooting, Thoresen confided in Louise that he had paid to have a friend murder his only brother, then killed the gunman "to put him out of his misery."

The jury acquitted Mrs. Thoresen, ruling she had shot her husband in self-defense because she believed he was coming out of bed to attack her. In retrospect, however, the widow apparently has come to believe that her husband, as had been his custom throughout their marriage, manipulated her once again, this time into killing him.

Revelation From An Old Plot

NICKEL MOUNTAIN by John Gardner; Alfred A. Knopf, 314 pages $6.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

A skilled novelist occasionally transforms a time-worn plot into a revelation. That is what John Gardner has done in "Nickel Mountain."

The result is a poetically-written story about love, the need for love, the sympathy between the world's losers, the essence of "the fellow feeling of the unsound."

Most of Gardner's characters are unsound to the point of being unbelievable.

The bachelor, a compulsive eater, is too good to be true; the girl who marries him to give her child a name is content with her lot; and the peripheral characters, many of them not only unsound but also loony and downright unstrung, have a peculiar charm.

There's also more than a dash of symbolism here —enough to keep the English Lit professors happy — since the main character tends to get himself confused with Jesus.

Though this book is set in upper New York state, it reads like a "southern novel," Most readers will turn the pages and continue to the end to see what happens to these sad, but in their own way completely happy, people.

One Couple's Life In The Wilderness

Sam and Billie Wright set up housekeeping in a 12-by-12-foot log cabin on the slopes of Alaska's Brooks Range to learn the ways of the natives. They learn that and a great deal more, and the book that comes from the experience deserves a rhapsody rather than a review.

Hunting caribou and moose for meat to survive the winter, gathering wood, melting snow for water — simply meeting the basics of survival — make the Wright's story gripping enough. In addition Mrs. Wright happens to be a woman who can write — good, straightforward stuff that often vibrates better than studied poetry.

A reticence about herself and her Sam, unusual in these days of egomanic authorship, adds charm to the book. Constructed as a journal, the book is ideal for short, pick-up reading. In fact, it is too meaty to read quickly. But do read it.

Cherished Poem Of Vietnamese

THE TALE OF KIEU by Nguyen Du; Random House, 166 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Alice Dalbey.

This narrative poem, c. 1820, is said to be the "best-known and best-loved" poem in Vietnamese literature, "cherished and familiar to almost every Vietnamese, from peasant to scholar."

The heroine is Kieu, beautiful daughter of a prosperous father, who sells herself to save her father from disgrace. Kieu, sometimes through emotional mistakes, sometimes through duplicity of people she trusts (usually men), experiences most of life's evils — prostitution, slavery, physical abuse, poverty — but, in the end, she recovers her youthful lover and, in spirit, her original innocence.

Briefly, this is a tale of faith. No matter how bad things are, they surely will improve and virtue will be rewarded.

The translation is occasionally uneven. Contemporary English idioms are juxtaposed with such elegant phrasing as, "Time fled on moon-hare's feet and sun-crow's wings." But the eloquent Orientalisms triumph.

An introductory essay on the poem's historical background makes it more meaningful to Western readers.

NEW BOOKS FOR THE JUNIORS

Andersen's tales have been savored by boys and girls of many generations and many lands, and by many adults as well.

However, in their translation to English as well as other languages, the original stories have suffered some distortion. The temptation to sentimentalize and to bid for popularity was sometimes irresistible to the translators.

Now Doubleday and Co. has published, in a handsome format and in slipcover, "Hans Christian Andersen: The Complete Fairy Tales and Stories," with translations by Erik Christian Haugaard that are absolutely faithful to the original texts.

This integrity has been maintained, Haugaard writes in his introduction "even when I knew that certain ideas might offend people of my own time, or might — which is far worse — appear ridiculous in their eyes. I have tried to be loyal to only one person, Hans Christian Andersen, and I hope most fervently that I have succeeded."

It is a big book, 1,101 pages, with a big price, $15. But more significantly, it is an important book, of keen interest historically to literary scholars, as well as being a splendid addition to the family bookshelf, available for reading on wintry nights as a substitute for, and improvement upon, television.

"WEASELS, OTTERS, Skunks and Their Family" by Dorothy Hinshaw Patent, a 1958 Tamalpais High School graduate and a former Belvedere resident, is a "first book" and a good one. It takes up one of the world's most fascinating animal families, the Mustelids, describing their life habits, their role in nature's grand scheme and their importance to man. Mrs. Patent, now living in Missoula, Mont., is not only the wife of a professional zoologist, but holds a Ph.D. in zoology herself, from the University of California at Berkeley. Thus she writes as an expert. But she also writes as a good storyteller, able to make her material interesting to the young 12-and-under audience at which it is aimed. Matthew Kalmenoff has contributed to the book's success with some excellent, true-to-life animal sketches. Holiday House of New York is the publisher, and the price is $4.95.

"How to Make Cornhusk Dolls" (Arco, $4.95) by Ruth Wendorff is an unusual craft book that should appeal to all ages, but particularly to young girls. It is perfectly in keeping with the current trend for putting to functional or decorative use materials once discarded. And Mrs. Wendorff soon convinces you that cornhusks are a particuarly versatile and effective material for projects with that "natural look" so popular today. Her book is filled with ideas from Pilgrims to clowns to animals to tools and implements. Illustrating photos clarifiy the step-by-step instructions, and show the completed doll. And the reader learns that the making of cornhusk dolls is a very old American craft, indeed, learned by the early settlers from the Indians. Again, this isn't a "childrens-only" book. But one suspects the upper grade and junior high school age girls will take a special delight in the hobby and in their products. A little parental "kibitzing" may prove helpful.

Puppetry is a favorite diversion of children who so greatly enjoy watching the little dolls. But it goes beyond diversion. It is also a popular means of expression. Youngsters, especially small girls, not only enjoy watching puppets. They enjoy manipulating the puppets as well. Benny E. Andersen helps them to go about their participation in a "semi-professional" way with his "Let's Start a Puppet Theater" (Van Nostrand Reinhold, $4.95).

"HOW TO MAKE Cornhusk Dolls" by Ruth Wendorff is a treasury of craft ideas for the fashioning of dolls and ornaments such as this appealing creation.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

LOCATION SHOTS by J. F. Burke; Harper and Row, 140 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This well-done crime yarn offers the reader a hard and candid look at the seamier side of life in New York City's Upper West Side.

Sam Kelly, ex-cop, Negro, entering middle age, widowed and generally amiable, manages to support the high style of living to which he has become accustomed by working as a private detective and also serving as house detective for the once elegant, now rundown Hotel Castlereagh, haven to pensioners, prostitutes, alcoholics, et al. The hotel job is no great strain for Sam until the night when two of its "guests" are murdered — one of them a hard-drinking writer who is the hotel detective's good friend.

Determined to avenge the brutal killings, Kelly finds himself colliding with the regular police — including the man he hates from his own days on the force. And he finds himself puzzled by the role that his own mistress, Madam Bobbie, the blonde call house proprietress, appears to have played in the sudden eruption of violence.

Unfortunately, Burke seems to find it necessary to shade his detective's character, who begins as a likeable humanist and gradually displays a more and more sadistic streak. In television terms, Sam Kelly starts as a sort of "Tenafly" but develops into a kind of "Shaft."

Still, this lively novel maintains Harper's high standards for its suspense novel, teeming as it does with the rich brew of contemporary urban life, and offering in its detective a personality intriguing enough to merit more exposure in a series of Sam Kelly novels. Let us hope, however, that Burke decides to round off some of Kelly's hard edges.

The Not-So-Savage Raiders From North

VIKING EXPANSION WESTWARDS by Magnus Magnusson; Henry Z. Walck, 148 pages, paperback, $4.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The "Viking raiders" of the British Isles get sympathetic treatment from Magnus Magnusson in "Viking Expansion Westwards." Far from being mere savage marauders, his account demonstrates, they brought much of value to the partially Romanized islands and planted the Anglo-Saxon culture that still influences much that is English. And the Norman invaders who followed, he points out, were themselves descendants of Vikings.

Magnusson's scholarly work also is of American interest, for the Viking westward movements included those of Erik the Red, who settled Greenland, and his son, Leif Eriksson, who made the first known European landing on the North American continent.

Well illustrated, well researched, and well written, Magnusson's "Viking Expansion Westwards" gives a fascinating view of people who have perhaps not received their just deserts from historians heavily influenced by Greek and Roman sources.

Burst Of Bloom To Greet Spring

Nowhere in the spectrum of garden color is it more luxuriant than in that which comes from flowering fruit trees.

Take the Flowering Plums for example:

MORE ARE SOLD each year than any other flowering fruit tree. Flowering Plums will grow in almost any soil. One of the most adaptable and choicest medium-sized flowering trees for your lawn, patio or terrace is P. blireiana. It has reddish purple leaves with fragrant pink to rose semi-double flowers.

By the way, this Flowering Plum does well in planters and large tubs.

Flowering Crabapples have earned friends throughout California. A few of the many varieties offered by your local nurseryman produce excellent fruits for jellies and preserves.

Unless you are the home canning type, however, main enjoyment from Crabapples will be in the massed pink blossoms each spring.

THE FLOWERING Cherries are most prevelant in the northern counties and are choice spring attractions when grown there. Available in both double and single varieties and graceful weeping form, these Japanese Flowering Cherries are really unsurpassed for color. In fall, too, when foilage color is always exciting, their leaves color up magnificently.

The California Association of Nurserymen suggests you check into these garden beauties. Your nurseryman has flowering fruit trees in containers and bareroot form available now and can recommend the best varieties for our area and your needs.

For Treat, It's Grapes Or Berries

In a state where the grape is a major agricultural crop, it is no wonder a great number of Californians grow this delectable treat in their home gardens.

It thrives throughout the Golden State, bearing abundant crops in all, but, perhaps, the coolest gardens of a coastal area. And, even there, it will ripen its fruit if planted against a sunny wall, where the maximum amount of heat can be trapped.

Grapes require little care; they are relatively pest free, and while they require an annual pruning, this is an easily-fulfilled requirement.

FOR THOSE who would like to grow grapes, but feel they lack the space, the California Association of Nurserymen points out that grapes can be trellised against the wall of a house or garage — or on a fence. Or, up and over an arbor.

There are two main grape families grown in California — those of European origin from which is derived the bulk of commercial table and wine grape production; and those which are native to the eastern United States.

Among European varieties are Thompson Seedless, Tokay, Muscat, Black Monukka and Ribier. Concord is probably the best-known of the American varities. In selecting grapes for your home garden, the best approach is to seek the advice of your nurseryman as to the best varieties for the area. This is especially true in our coastal climes, where requirements for a particular variety may, or may not be met.

NURSERIES HAVE grape vines available this month in containers and in bareroot form. They also have various cane berries which also do well in many parts of the state.

The gardener who is confused by the difference between blackberries, youngberries, loganberries and boysenberries can take solace in the fact that they are all blackberries of one sort or another and that he will not be remiss in defining them as such. Culturally, they all have the same needs.

Trailing varieties are widely planted and their culture consists of training them on a two-wire trellis, four or five feet high. New canes of one year's growth produce the berries the following year. The practice, then, is to cut out the old canes after they have produced. Wind the new canes on the trellis — getting them off the ground where they have been allowed to grow until ready for trellising.

Plunge Geraniums

Clay-potted geraniums plunged in a redwood planter will add a colorful touch to patio or porch areas. Since geraniums are sun-lovers, be sure and select a bright spot for the planter, though some protection from the noon and late-day sun will result in more blooms. Pack the area between the clay pots and the planter with peat moss and keep the moss wet. The geraniums will soak up sufficient moisture through the porous walls of their clay pots.

THIS IS ONE OF the 25 trial gardens from which All-American Gladiolus Selections emerge, after undoergoing rigid testing and close observation. The gardens are so located as to represent every possible kind of soil and climate, and are judged by the top experts upon the popular bulb flower.

You Will Be Glad You Planted Glads

There is no other flower in the world that can surpass Gladiolus in brilliance of color and beauty of form.

This along with the fact that Gladiolus are so wonderfully easy to grow is the reason that they are the most popular of all flowering bulbs. Gladiolus will produce their magnificent colorful spikes of flowers and deep green sword-shaped foliage in all parts of the world and in any type of soil with little or no care.

The ideal Gladiolus bulb (actually called a corm) for your garden is one and a half inches or more in diameter (across) and three-quarter inch or more thick. Both of these measurements are important since the diameter measurement indicates the size and number of flower spikes you can expect and the thickness indicates how young and vigourous the bulb is.

THESE YOUNG "high crown" bulbs will assure you of huge exhibition spikes of blooms the first season and for many years to come. If besides being thick, the bulb is also large in diameter, you will quite often get two full-size spikes of flowers from each bulb.

Imagine the pleasure of having all of the Gladiolus you want blooming continuously week after week for four to six months. You can have armfuls of fresh cut flowers in the home and still maintain a magnificent display in your garden. This can easily be accomplished by making several plantings about 15 days apart.

In California and other areas not affected by freezes, you can plant from November through May and you will have wave upon wave of thrilling blooms from February through August.

IN THE COLDER climates they can plant in the Spring after the last freeze up until mid-July and then will have continuous blooms from July until the first frost.

Gladiolus generally bloom in three to four months after planting, depending upon the variety and the time of the season. It would be well to make your later plantings in a semi-shaded area so that the flowers will be somewhat protected from the sun during any extremely hot summer weather.

Gladiolus can be used in a number of ways and they will be the most striking if given a place in the sun.

For display in borders, bold clumps or groups of plants are best, or if you plant in full beds, you can scatter the bulbs for a natural effect.

Of course if you are growing just for cut flowers, the most efficient way is to plant in rows. And if your home has a picture window, remember to plant a group of Gladiolus where these tall graceful blooms can provide you with a live flower arrangement that will be visible indoors and will be set off by the window frame.

GLADIOLUS GROW in any good garden soil.

The bulbs should be planted four to six inches deep and at least three to four inches apart.

Just dig your holes, add a little bulb food if your soil needs it, place your bulbs where you want them, cover them with soil and then water. After this, the bulbs will grow and bloom to perfection and all you need to do is to water regularly giving the plants a light feeding about once a month with any good standard fertilizer you have on hand. If insects are present, spray your plants when you spray the rest of the garden.

You will enjoy watching the miracle of growth and bloom and will be amazed at the spectacular display of colorful blooms you will get with so little effort.

NORMALLY, YOU choose the varieties that are in the colors you want and almost all of the standard varieties offered by your nursery or garden center are excellent. However, you should definitely consider planting the new hybrid varieties that have just been developed in the past year or so.

These superably beautiful varieties are sold under the "Super," "Califlora," and "All America" trade names and are available at most nurseries and garden stores. While they may cost a few pennies more than the regular Gladiolus, these new varieties will reward you with magnificent tall spikes.

The All-Americans Are A Couple Of Beauties

By MILLICENT TAYLOR

The All-America Gladiolus winners this year are really spectaculr. Only two, but what a pair!

One of them gives us a rich, deep violet-blue so rare among garden flowers; and the other is a fiery scarlet-red. Both are very tall and are heavy bloomers.

FIRE CHIEF IS a true fire-engine red. The bulbs are huge, and the plants the most vigorous of any glads I have seen. About 70 days after planting these tall strong giants will start blooming on six-foot spikes, Up to eight flat, saucer-like florets open out at once.

I had them in my garden on a trial basis this past summer and they attracted a lot of attention. Carl Fischer of St. Charles, Minn., famous for his glads and winner of many awards, originated Fire Chief.

NAVY BLUE, THE other 1974 AAGS winner, is one of the most beautiful glads I have ever seen (being partial to blu flowers). It sends up five-foot spikes with 30-inch flower heads on strong, very lush plants.

The modestly waved florets, eight open at a time, are a particularly rich deep violet-blue with contrasting darker throats. It gives them a velvety look. Even one flower spike in a tall bud vase proved a conversation piece.

EACH YEAR'S AAGS winners seem more exciting than the last. I have not got over 1973's Big Daddy. Along my five-foot back fence Big Daddy peered over at my neighbor's garden. I never saw such a tall glad, and it was so sturdy it didn't even use its stakes.

The florets were a refreshing ruffled peach. If you plant Big Daddy this spring, you are in for a treat, and like me you will probably marvel at its vigor and its height.

Charmer of the 1973 winners, though, is Brightside, a fancy little yellow-and-red miniature. It flowered first of the 1973 winners in my garden last summer, in spite of the experts' experience that Mexicali Rose, the third 1973 winner, was earliest in the trial gardens.

IF YOU WERE unable to get bulbs of Mexicali Rose last spring because of the high demand, try again but soon. It is very lovely and most unusual. Perhaps the earliest of all galds.

A lavender-and-creamy-yellow, very full and ruffled, is Mystic Melody. And for somthing different you might like his Green Ice, really a soft lime green that should be interesting in arrangements.

Wayside's Lemon Lime, a tall dependable giant, is also pale green, if you like green flowers.

One of my favorite Waysides, though, is Jester, yellow with splotches of red at the throat, and so gaily ruffled it seems humorous. Royal King is satiny purple — mauve, really — with a silvery halo, and Tri-Tone is all striped and splotched in shades of pink, rose, and white — a peppermint-stick look.

IF YOU GO in for glads, you might like to consider a collection from one of the mail-order catalogs. Wayside's Pan-American Mixture (25 or 100 corms) gives you a variety of different beauties, some possibly new to you. Collections are a good way to discover new favorites.

All-America Gladiolus Selections follow the same pattern as the annual flowers AAS (which was the first) and the rose AARS. There are similar programs now also for other flowers, chrysanthemums among them.

FIRE CHIEF is one of two new Gladiolus honored as All-America Selections for 1974. It's a brilliant red. The plants are unusually vigorous and start blooming from six-foot spikes in about 70 days after planting. Up to eight flat, saucer-like florets open up at once. Thin white lines accent the red lip petals in an unusual and lovely effect.

NAVY BLUE is the other 1974 All-America Gladiolus Selections winner. It sends up five-foot spikes with 30-inch flower heads on strong, lush plants. Eight florets open at a time, and reveal a rich, deep violet-blue coloration that is breathtaking in its beauty. Its velvet texture is yet another added attraction.

THE WEEKLY CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✔Certain tender plants may be burned by frost. Do not prune them back until all danger of frost is over.

✔Strawberries, rhubarb, artichoke and vineberries should be planted now.

✔Make first 1974 planting of Gladiolus bulbs now. Subsequent plantings will provide a succession of blooms.

✔Peaches should be sprayed at least once during the winter rest to prevent leaf curl. The earlier the better.

✔Prune grapes and berries. If you don't know how, ask your nurseryman.

THE LOOK OF LEATHER

THERE'S NO question about it — leather's the rage these days. And if you can sew fabric, you can also sew leather. Steve Ellingson promises you that with the help of his instructions, you can turn out "new look" creations such as those being shown above by motion picture-television star Vera Miles. Send $1.50 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409, and ask for "Leather—The New Look" Pattern 531. The instruction sheet offers step-by-step guidance for such leather lovelies as a fringed vest or shoulder bag, a checkerboard vest and purse (made with scrap pieces), skirts, bracelets, watchbands, belts, plant hangers, candleholders and classic-style purses. There are more than 100 pictures and drawings, some full-size patterns and instruction on how to cut, sew, stamp, tool, braid, color and finish. The big advantage of leather, along with its rich appearance, is that it lasts, and lasts, and lasts.

Chase Those Mid-Winter Decor Blues

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

Your dining room gives you claustrophobia; "It's just too small. The living room is dull, dull, dull. And don't even mention the kitchen!

Chances are you've got the mid-winter blues and things aren't really as bad as they seem. But there are some brightening tricks that could work wonders — things as simple as mirror, lighting, or even some picture frames.

"REFLECTION IS one of the oldest decoration devices we know and can work sublte or dramatic change in a room, enhancing walls, existing furniture, accessories," says Debbie Dinehar, of Hoyne Industries, Los Angeles, manufacturer of mirrors.

"Placing furniture next to a mirror produces expansive results," she notes. "Facing chairs seems to be a group setting; one lamp automatically becomes a pair. In your too small dining room, mirror an end wall and place your table against it. The area that accommodates four, seems a full fledged dining room for eight."

"If you have a corner you would like to hide," she suggests, "try a screen with mirrored panels. The mirrors will reflect part of the room scene and the corner will appear to play an active part in the room."

IF YOU HAVE a crystal chandelier, add to the sparkle of the room by reflecting it in an opposite mirror hugh high enough to catch the reflection, Miss Dinehar said.

In addition to functioning as accessories or borders to mirror scenes, she says patterned mirror squares can enhance home decor in many ways, creating the simple beauty of paneling with the added dimension of mirrors.

Other suggestions:

That narrow strip of wall that always seems to exist dully between a window and a stairway can reflect part of the room scene if you install a collection of different sized framed mirrors.

HOMES PAGE

Add interest to a dull wall by hanging a big mirror to reflect a window wall opposite.

One of the best ways to accent a room without architectural feature is a picture wall. Valuable paintings and other works of art, a collection of reproductions, photographs, memorabilia or what have you, can be effective.

THE IMPORTANT thing is how the material is handled. Imaginative framing and arrangement are the keys to success.

Today, it's a job you can do yourself, says Stanley Hirsch, who heads Structural Industries, a leading maker of do-it-yourself picture framing materials.

Whether it's a collection of the children's handwork in the playroom, momentos in the bedroom, a hall gallery of photographs, an array of diplomas, commendations, certificates, medals in the den, an arrangement of small collectibles almost anywhere in the house, reproductions or fine originals in the living room, you can frame it to enhance your decor, add the warmth that can come only with individuality.

BEFORE YOU choose a frame, Hirsch recommends, think ahead to its place among the related furnishings, the colors that have been used in draperies, lamp shades, carpeting, and other accessories.

He advises the use of wood for framing traditional subject matter; metal or acrylics for contemporary materials, including lithographs, water colors, oils and the like.

Kitchens in most homes are a family gathering place, a study of craft area for school children, even a place to entertain, as well as a cooking center.

The atmosphere of a kitchen can be as warming as a hearth fire, or coolly impersonal as a laboratory. Lighting and color make the difference, says the American Home Lighting Institute (AHLI).

In a kitchen with pine cabinets, tile with the look of handgrooved planks, a maple table and captain's chairs, light with a burnished copper "oil lamp" fixture, add hooked rugs and, enjoy!

A corner of Spain with darkly varnished cabinets and poppy red appliances calls for Mediterranean-inspired wrought iron wall lanterns and matching chandelier. Accent with bright flowers and see if even your cuisine doesn't seem spicier.

Plywood Is Simple To Work

By GEORGE MONTGOMERY

Plywood is strong and durable. But the big advantage for the do-it-yourselfer is that it provides a large surface without attaching together small pieces of wood.

Plywood can be cut with a fine-toothed crosscut hand saw, but the task is a lot easier when you use a power saw, a circular table saw, a radial saw or a jigsaw. When using a portable power saw, however, the good side should be face down.

NAILS AND SCREWS hold exceptionally well in the face or underside of plywood, not so well in the edges. Regular wood glue is fine, but be sure to use a waterproof adhesive on exterior plywood that is to be placed outdoors or at a damp indoor location.

Plywood takes stain and paint very well.

But with fir plywood, which is the least expensive and the kind used for most projects, you must first apply a primer made for this type of wood. Use a clear primer when the finish is to be varnish, lacquer or any clear material. Use a white primer when the finish is to be paint.

Some persons consider the edges of plywood objectionable. They can be covered in a number of ways if they are not to be painted. The easiest is with a strip of solid wood, either plain, half-round or one of the fancy mouldings.

For a more professional appearance, the edges can be covered with a wooden tape that comes in rolls.

THE TAPE, ACTUALLY a very thin veneer, is applied with regular wood glue or contact cement. If the latter is used, it must be positioned carefully the first time, since it grips instantly. Any overhang is trimmed with a single-edged razor blade or something similar, then sanded smooth.

These rolls of veneer come in different kinds of wood to match the face of the plywood you are using. They can be stained and finished.

Plywood faces also come in different kinds of wood, some soft, some hard. Thus, in addition to the fir facing, you can buy birch, pine and many others. You can also choose between various grades, depending on where the plywood is to be used and whether one or both sides will be visible.

Taking Squeak Out Of A Stairstep

By ANDY LANG

Carpeting can partially deaden the sound of a squeaky staircase, but not eliminate it.

The application of a dry lubricant, such as powdered graphite, may eliminate the noise, but it will be just a question of time before it returns.

The only permanent solution to most squeaky stair problems is to bring the riser and the tread close together, since it is the separation of the joint between these two parts that is causing the noise.

The riser is the vertical portion of the step, the tread the horizontal part that is stepped on.

ON STAIRWAYS where the underside is open, you need only have someone walk up and down the steps and you will be able to hear the noise and see where it is coming from. The repair is then relatively easy and just a matter of common sense, as you can see what is loose and how it can be tightened.

Most troubles occur on stairs that are not open, such as those going from the first to the second floor. Or from the main floor to a basement. It is those with which we are concerned here.

The initial move in the repair job is to determine whether the riser and tread are joined simply by having the tread rest on the riser or are held together in a rabbeted joint. Look under the stair nosing, the outside edge of the tread that extends past the riser. If the joint is exposed, you sometimes can see immediately how the riser and tread are joined. If it is not exposed, remove the piece of cove moulding that is covering it.

SHOULD YOU find it impossible to determine the type of joint, see whether you can push a knife blade upward along the riser a little way into the tread. If you can, it's a rabbeted joint. If you can't, it's a butt joint.

The purpose of finding out the type of joint is that each requires a different method of repair.

If it is a butt joint, you will have to drive finishing nails through the tread and into the riser. Have someone stand on the tread to push it close to the riser. Drive two finishing nails through the tread at angles so that the points of the nails come together or nearly together when they enter the riser.

WHEN DRIVEN all the way, the nails thus would form a V inside the wood. Whether you need one pair of nails or more depends on whether the first set corrects the problem. This will have to be done on each tread where there is a squeak.

If the joint is rabbeted, the solution is to drive small wood wedges upward into the joint after first coating them with wood glue. It may be necessary, especially if carpeting won't cover the repair, to use a sharp knife to slice off any part of each wedge that is still visible.

(Squeaky floors, sweating walls and windows, plaster patching and balky doors are among the 35 subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," available by sending $1 to Andy Lang at Box 5, Teaneck, N.J., 07666.)

The Rule Of Thumb In Selecting Moldings

Select ceiling or base moldings that are wide enough. As a rule of thumb, a traditional cornice should be one-fourteenth the distance from ceiling to floor. An eight-foot ceiling calls for a three to four-inch base; a nine-foot ceiling, a base of four to five inches.

HERE'S YOUR ANSWER

By ANDY LANG

Q. — The concrete foundation of our house extends about two feet above the ground before it meets the wood siding. Recently a truck backing into our driveway struck one of the foundation corners and knocked some of the concrete out of place. I have used concrete patching material in the past, but always on a flat surface. How do I apply the concrete on a vertical surface so that it will stay in place to form a neat corner?

A. — You will need four pieces of two-by-four, each about two feet in length. Place one vertically against the foundation on one side of the corner, a second one against the other side so that the edges meet. Take the two other pieces and put them diagonally in place so that they act as props to hold the vertical pieces firmly. If necessary, use two heavy objects or several bricks at the bottoms of the diagonal pieces of wood to prevent them from slipping.

Now carefully fill the broken area of the foundation with the patching material and smooth it out. The two-by-fours should be kept in place for several hours, then removed. If the patched area has any sunken or unfilled places in it, use a little more patching cement. The repaired area should be wet down a couple of times a day for five or six days. In this or any other concrete project, the work should not be done in freezing weather or when there is any prospect of it within 48 hours or so.

THE CLOTHES CLOSET at left, with its limited storage and protection, has been transformed on the right, with extra shelving to increase its capacity, and with a cedar lining that will repell moths and keep them from your clothing. It's a simple project for the home handyman.

Cedar Makes A Difference In Closet

Organize your closets this year by creating a permanent, moth-free storage space for your clothes.

By lining a closet in your home with aromatic red cedar, you not only get an attractive year-round place for storage of out-of-season items, but also a safe location to store your woolens.

Construction of a cedar closet is easy and inexpensive. In fact, dad can do the job himself over a weekend.

Red cedar for lining closets comes in strip form. The boards are three-eighths inch thick, two to four inches wide and two-to-eight feet long. For interlocking construction, strips are tongue-and-grooved along the edges and ends. They can be nailed directly to the wall.

For maximum protection, floor, ceiling, shelves, cabinets and even the inside of doors should be lined with cedar wood. The more cedar coverage, the greater the aroma and the better the moth-repellency.

Fragrance of aromatic red cedar is pleasant to humans, but is extremely unpleasant to moths; it paralyzes their larvae.

Maintenance of a cedar closet is simple:

The cedar needs only to be wiped occasionally with a dry cloth to remove dust which may clog the pores. If the aroma should fade slightly with the years, a gentle rubbing with fine sandpaper or steel wool will open the pores of the wood and renew the closet's fragrance.

By creating imaginative shelving arrangements, nearly twice the amount of clothing can be stored in approximatley the same closet space. Order can come out of chaos.

ON THE STEREO SCENE —

Winning Team: Charlie Rich, Hank Williams

By WILLIAM D. LAFFLER

Charlie Rich has been honored by his Nashville peers as the top male country singer of the year for 1973.

He should receive another award for patience.

Charlie has been around for years, singing both country and pop music. Not so many years ago, Rich often would break into a song that had the Presley sound but he never lost his own identity. Now he is on top as himself.

To really appreciate Rich's artistry, you have to associate him with a composer who wrote country music for posterity. And that would be Hank Williams.

In 1967 Charlie recorded an album of Williams' hit tunes. It has been made available in a new pressing, "Charlie Rich Sings Country and Western" (Hi Shl 3203).

At that time Rich's voice had a popular music flavor which mixed nicely with Hank Williams' ballads such as "Your Cheating Heart."

WHEN WILLIAMS introduced "Your Cheating Heart" early in the 1950s, Hank sang it in a fast tempo with a fine nasal twang. But the musical strategists saw commercial possibilities in the country tune and in a short time a young, unknown singer named Joni James put it at the top of the pop charts with a slow-moving, sexy-sounding version.

Rich, in this session, chose to follow a slow arrangement — more as a blues tune than a country composition. In doing so, he gave the song an even broader dimension.

An up-tempo is required for another Williams' country hit, "Hey Good Lookin'." It is quite possible that Rich foresaw the likelihood of country music moving toward the rock beat because his version of "Hey Good Lookin' " is closer to 1973 than 1967.

Among the songs in this selection are "Half as Much," "Cold Cold Heart," "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry" and "Wedding Bells." Rich gives each one his personal touch but preserves the original Williams idea.

ELVIS PRESLEY'S latest album, "Raised on Rock, for Ol' Times Sake" (RCA APL 1-0388) is far removed from his pristine efforts that made him the "King of the 1950s." Yet it is still Elvis and it should appeal to the hausfraus who were the bobby soxers of his heyday.

When Presley returned to live performing in 1969 after a nine-year hitch before the movie cameras, he had lost none of the masculine drive that made him a sex symbol. But he was ready to accept new ideas and he kept his music moving forward.

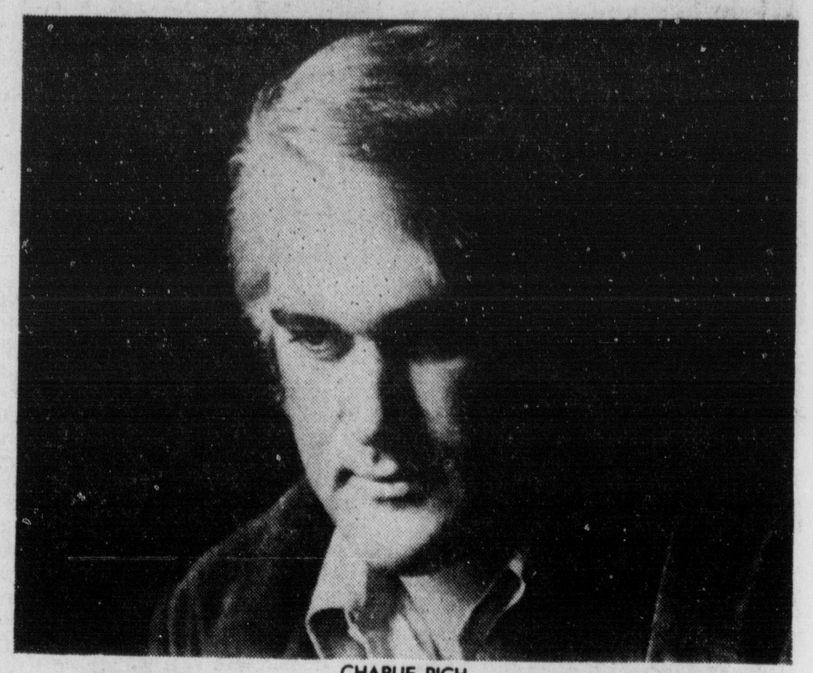

That is the essence of his latest Presley performance.

It has vitality from the beginning and Presley, with the help of amplified instruments, never really lets the pace slacken. That is why his records continue to enjoy popularity even though he has been rejected by the bubble-gummers as an old man.

"Raised on Rock" and "For Ol' Times Sake" are the prime movers in this grouping of Elvis songs but there are others that give the program good impetus, among them "Three Corn Patches," "Are You Sincere" and "Just A Little Bit."

MOST COUNTRY singers are Southerners who have a strong religious background. Therefore, they are able to lend realism and sincerity to music with a religious theme. "God Is Abundant" by Connie Smith (Columbia KC 32492) is a good example.

Connie is a beautiful country singer who has produced a library of excellent albums but this one is special, because perhaps it is personal. Selections include "He Did It All for Me," "At the Foot of the Cross," "You Can Move That Mountain" and "When I Sing For Him."

CICELY TYSON stars as a fictional 110-year-old former slave in the title role of "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," a two-hour drama special Thursday at 9 p.m. on the CBS Television Network. Make-up for her at age 110 took almost six hours to complete, with individual foam rubber pieces being applied to Miss Tyson's face and neck, then tinted. Eyebrow and facial hairs were applied one at a time. A "bald cap" that created a receding hairline and a gray wig completed the transformation.

Teen To Old-Age In Six Hours

Well before dawn, a young woman approaches a huge mobile structure, climbs the steps and disappears into a small room, followed by two solemn young men.

Later, with the sun, arrives a caravan of cars and trucks, and a small army of people with a job to do.

It's near mid-day when the word is out that she's ready, and from the room emerges a wizened old woman who makes her way carefully toward the crowd, as those with traditional Boy Scout instincts rush to help her.

THIS IS NOT the border of Shangri-La but Louisiana — and location filming of "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," two-hour drama special to be presented Thursday at 9 p.m. on the CBS Television Network.

John Korty directed the drama, produced by Bob Christiansen and Rick Rosenberg for Tomorrow Entertainment Inc. Tracy Keenan Wynn wrote the script from the Ernest J. Gaines novel of the same title.

The deceptively old woman is Cicely Tyson, who stars in the title role of a fictional 110-year-old former slave who recounts her lifetime from the Civil War to the early 1960s and the beginning of the civil rights movement. For this role, in which Miss Tyson is seen at different ages, ranging from 19 to 110, a technically and physically demanding make-up process matured the actress each morining to the age called for that day in the filming schedule.

MAKE-UP ARTISTS Stan Winston and Rick Baker spent two months developing three different faces for Miss Tyson, beginning with a plaster cast of her own face and casts of the aged faces they had designed. From the difference in the actual face and the creased appearance of age that was their goal, Winston and Baker built thin foam-rubber-like overlays for each part of the face, as well as the hands and wrists.

In a six-hour make-up session each morining, the foam pieces were glued to Miss Tyson's own skin and the paper-thin edges blended into creases. This entire face was made up and toned, and eyebrow and facial hairs were glued on individually.

"THE MOST important thing about age make-up is the actor under it," said Winston, who won an Emmy Award for his work on the television film "Gargoyles," seen in the CBS Network.

"If the actor doesn't 'play' the make-up, it won't be believable, no matter how well we do our job. And Cicely Tyson definitely makes it work," Winston added, gesturing toward the frail "old" woman hobbling away gratefully on the protective arm of an electrician, in reality several years her senior.

For Archie's New Neighbor, Hollywood Is Foreign Soil

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Vincent Gardenia is Archie Bunker's new neighbor and nemesis on the "All In The Family" series, and Archie would certainly move to a new neighborhood if he suspected in real life that Vince was born in Italy.

Gardenia is a warm, friendly man who left his native Naples at the age of 2 when his parents migrated to New York.

At age 50 Vince — whose real name is Vincenzio Scognamiglio — is still a bachelor. He's never been married. He never intends to be.

ROBERT MITCHUM has the leading role in the World War II movie, "Anzio," as an American soldier fighting the Nazis in Italy. Also appearing on the film, to be shown tonight and Sunday at 6 p.m. on Channel 2, are Peter Falk, Robert Ryan and Earl Holliman.

His home is a two-family dwelling in Bensonhurst, an Italian-Jewish section of Brooklyn, where he has lived all his life. He owns the house and rents out the upstairs apartment to another family.

HIS SISTER, Conchetta, and brother-in-law and their three sons, Vincent, Jerry, and Michael, all live in the three-bedroom lower apartment.

There is a backyard, patio and front yard, filled with flowers and tended by Vince when he is home, which isn't often. Work in movies, the theater and television keep him on the road 10 months a year.

He is pampered by Conchetta, however, whenever he gets home. She is an accomplished cook, specializing in all the fine Italian dishes. And the pasta adds pounds to Vince, who must diet when he is on the road.

He drives a rented car — he doesn't own one — to CBS every morning about 9:30 to report for work. During the noon rehearsal break he eats a meager lunch and is usually home by 6 o'clock.

Just as Vince has no desire to marry, neither does he foresee the day he will make his permanent home in Hollywood.

MANY OF his old New York cronies from show business now live in Southern California but he doesn't share their enthusiasm of the land of the fruit and the nut.

Several evenings a week Vince takes a date to the movies or the theater and out to dinner. But it is rarely the same girl two nights in succession. Concentration on one girl, he believes, is flirting dangerously with the possibility of a trip to the altar.

He has a small wardrobe, no pets and as few possessions as possible.

"I LIKE TO be as free and unencumbered as possible," he says. "That way I can take any picture offer in Europe or television assignment that comes my way."

He says acting absorbs all his time and most of his thoughts. He signed to appear in only 10 of "All In The Family's" annual 13 new episodes. He spends the rest of his time working in guest appearances on other television shows.

WHEN HE travels to Europe for a motion picture role he makes it a point to stop by Naples to visit with his aunts and nephews who still live in Italy. He had the opportunity earlier this year with a major role in "Luciano."

"They are always pleased to see me," says Vince. "Especially my dozens of cousins. They are very proud to have an American actor in the family."

Among his friends in Hollywood are Carroll O'Connor and Jean Stapleton, who star in the CBS series. He has been to their homes frequently for dinner and talk about the good old days when they all worked in New York.

"But they're Californians now," Vince concludes, as if to say they live in a different world.

Nancy Kulp Eyes Politics

Miss Kulp, who stars in NBC Television Network's "The Brian Keith Show" discussed her ambitions recently on the set in Hawaii, where the show is filmed.

"Don't get me wrong, I'm not one of those women libbers who feels she can straighten out the world, but politics is interesting, exciting and very important," Miss Kulp says.

Cut-Up Roy Clark Has Made Music, Comedy Pay Off

"Roy will never amount to anything because he doesn't take anything seriously," a school teacher once said of her young pupil, Roy Clark.

Well, if she's watching "The entertainer of the Year Awards" tonight, (Saturday) Jan. 26 at 10 o'clock on the CBS Television Network, she can discover just how wrong she was.

Roy Clark has parlayed his classroom cut-ups and his passion for music into the Country and Western Star of the Year Award, which he will receive from the American Guild of Variety Artists on the broadcast.

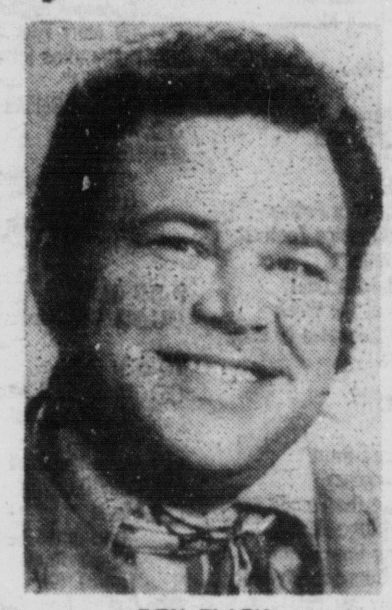

THE PERFORMER'S comedic gifts have not gone unrecognized, either.

In 1970, Clark was voted country music's top comedian by both the Country Music Association and the Academy of Country and Western Music, two prestigious organizations in the entertainment world. No other comedian has captured these two prizes in a single year. In addition he again won the Academy honor in 1971 and 1972.

Musically, Clark displays an awesome versatility. He has mastered the banjo and all guitars — classic, steel and 12-string — and has developed his skills on the fiddle, piano, trombone and drums.

At age 14, the Meherrin, Va., youngster won the National Country Music Banjo championship. He won it again the next year, earning a trip to Nashville and a coveted appearance at the Grand Ol'Opry, country music' "Metropolitan Opera House."

FANS IN THE millions tuned in weekly for two years to the Network's "Hee Haw," series, on which Clark starred. He's still seen by a vast audience now that the program is being syndicated.

ROY CLARK
A harvest of honors

A popular guest on the television talk shows, Clark did some acting on "The Beverly Hillbillies" on the CBS Network.

Official recognition came to Clark for his talents in 1973, when the Academy of Country and Western Music voted him their top award — "Entertainer of the Year." In additin, he was cited as "TV Personality of the Year."

WITH ALL OF Clark's personal accomplishments, he still has an as yet unfulfilled ambition: he'd like to appear at Carnegie Hall with another fiddler of some renown, Jascha Heifetz.

Others to be accorded special recognition on the Saturday night awards show include: Carol Burnett, comedienne; Redd Foxx, comedian; Sonny and Cher, vocal act; Roberta Flack, female singer; Sammy Davis Jr., male singer; Gunther Gebel-Williams, novelty act; Bette Midler, rising star of the year, and Tanya the elephant, best animal act.

HENRY FONDA, right, is the assistant attorney general who finally wrings a confession from the murderer protrayed by Tony Curtis in "The Boston Strangler," the true story of the demented killer who terrorized Boston, on the "Sunday Night Movie" at 8:30 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.

Marie Enjoys Old Flicks

Actress Marie Windsor, whose sloe-eyed beauty has been gracing theater and television screens for more than 30 years, is not a member of that somewhat common breed of veteran thespians who can't stand to see their old films on the late, late show.

"I love to see my old flicks," says Miss Windsor, whose newest performance on film can be seen in "Walk a Double Line" on "Mannix" Sunday at 8:30 p.m. on the CBS evpelevision Network.

"It's interesting to me to see how my work has changed.

"I really get a charge out of receiving mail — any kind," she says, "and I find that sending out letters is just as much fun. I write about 20 of them a week — a lot of them in answer to fan mail from people who see my old pictures on television.

"I've been corresponding for 27 years now with a man whose first letter to me was a fan letter."

BIG ROSEY GRIER portrays an ex-college football player attending a 20-year college reunion that ends in tragady in "Reunion in Terror," a "McMillan and Wife" segment of the "Sunday Mystery Movie," at 8:30 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

Estelle Parsons Pays Attention To Details

Award-winning actress Estelle Parsons is once again at work, this time co-starring with Jack Cassidy in the American comedy classic by George S. Kaufman and Ring Lardner, "June Moon."

A presentation of WNET/13's "Theater in America," the major new drama series funded by Exxon Corp. and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, "June Moon" will be televised nationally over the Public Broadcasting Service, and seen in the Bay Area Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 9.

"IT'S THE LITTLE details you can refine, the suggestions of character that you can add that are important," said Estelle Parsons. "That's why I often prefer the smaller parts."

Small parts or large, Miss Parsons has gained a reputation as well as an Academy Award for her brilliance as an actress.

Winner of an Oscar for her role in "Bonnie and Clyde," Miss Parsons has a most unusual background for an actress.

"Before I went into the theater," she said, "I was active in politics, working for the Committee for the Nation's Health, in Washington, D.C. and the Republican Finance Committee in Boston." She subsequently was elected to public office in her hometown, Marblehead, Mass.

"I SUPPOSE THERE is a link, in that both the political and the theatrical worlds mean being in the spotlight if you're actively involved. I did not leave politics and jump right into acting. I think what happened and the way I moved was truly a natural career progression."

After her stint in politics, Miss Parsons joined NBC-TV's "Today Show," beginning as a production assistant, advancing to writer, feature producer and finally commentator.

"I thought at first the show would be a terrific extension for my interest in politics and current events," she reflected. "Then, I reached a point where I didn't want the job at al'. But I was making $2,000 a week and I felt married to the job. At the same time I was singing with dance bands on weekends. It all became too frivolous for the hours spent."

NEXT, MISS PARSONS ventured into musicals and was featured in two Julius Monk revues, Jerry Herman's "Nightcap" and "The Threepenny Opera," with Lotte Lenya.

Her first Broadway role was in the Ethel Merman musical "Happy Hunting." Through the early 1960s Miss Parsons developed a repertoire of parts from "Threepenny Opera" to "Next Time I'll Sing To You."

Miss Parsons made her dramatic stage debut in the offBroadway play, "Mrs. Dally Has a Lover," winning a Theater World Award for her performance. Then she appeared in the off-Broadway productions "Next Time I'll Sing to You" and "In the Summer House," winning an Obie for each show.

SHE HAS ALSO appeared with the Lincoln Center Repertory Theater.

She was appearing at Stockbridge, in Arthur Penn's production of Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth," when the director showed her the script of "Bonnie and Clyde." One Oscar later . . . "Rachel, Rachel," and "I Never Sang for My Father."

Now in great demand, Miss Parsons insists even more vehemently that she retain her independence both as an artist and person.

"I enjoy taking time off to be with my twin daughters, just having fun and being my own person, though I admit it is quite difficult."

Eventually there will be more films, more plays. But the stage remains her preference.

"IN SEARCH OF Ancient Mysteries" explores the theory that ancient astronauts not only visited but colonized earth. This carving of a god, featuring a helmet-like cap and a strange device attached to the chest, is one of the artifacts used to substantiate this theory. Rod Serling will narrate the special to be shown on Thursday at 8 p.m. on Channels 3 and 4.

Was Earth Colonized By Ancient Astronauts?

The possibility that ancient astronauts from outer space not only visited but colonized the earth is explored in "Timex Presents: In Search of Ancient Mysteries," to be colorcast on the NBC Television Network, Thursday at 8 p.m.

About a year ago Alan Landsburg Productions Inc. presented the highly acclaimed "In Search of Ancient Astronauts," based on the book, "Chariots of the Gods?" by Erich von Daniken, exploring the theory that astronauts from other planets visited the earth in the remote past, influencing the inhabitants.

The current special, based on the book, "In Search of Ancient Mysteries," by Landsburg, published by Bantam Books concurrently with the TV special, explores the evidence of colonization.

Some of the places to be shown and discussed include Lake Titicaca in the Peruvian Andes, the ruins of Tiahuanaco and the Gate of the Sun with its mysterious sun god, the Great Stone of Sayhuite, Sacsayhuaman, the underwater wall off the island of Bimini in the Caribbean, the Bermuda Triangle, English hillside carvings, and the primitive drawings in the rocks of Indio County, Calif., among others.

There also are interviews with such diverse individuals as Dr. Sidney Fox, Institute of Molecular Evolution at the University of Miami; Dr. Padmasri Sivaramamurti, the Director of the National Museum of India; Joseph Blumrich, aerospace engineer at Marshall's Space Flight Center, NASA, and others.

The show is an Alan Landsburg Production. It was produced, directed and written by Fred Warshofsky. Executive producers are Landsburg and Laurence D. Savadove.

Is It A Bird? Is It A Plane? It's Woodstock!

As a matter of fact, he flies to many different drummers. Woodstock, you see, was born during a rock festival. He's even named after it.

This latest addition to the "Peanuts" world of Charles M. Schulz co-stars with his pal Snoopy in "It's a Mystery, Charlie Brown," new animated cartoon special created by Schulz and scheduled for telecast Friday at 8:30 p.m. on the CBS Television Network.

Woodstock is only the second member of the non-human species to be featured with the "Peanuts" gang in the more than 20 years of its comic-strip existence. Snoopy, of course, is the other.

SCHULZ, WHOSE daily cartoon is the most widely read comic strip in the world, has avoided the use of animals in his pen-and-ink stories — with these two exceptions — because their "characters are limiting" and they have a tendency to "take over the action and overwhelm the kids.

"I've been drawing birds in the strip for quite a while," he says, "just as an adjunct to the pictures. They were really incidental.

"THEN, SUDDENLY, the drawing started to work. I began to draw this one bird a lot better, and he began to develop a very definite personality.

"I needed a name for him. The Woodstock festival happened to be very prominent in the news at the time, and the name stuck in my head."

Shulz points out that the increasing appearances of Snoopy and Woodstock in the comic-strip and in the television specials in no way alter his "no animals" rule. Because they are not animals.

"SNOOPY IS A bit of a real dog — and yet he's not a real dog," says his artist-creator. Schulz points out, logically enough, that real dogs don't fly around on their dog-houses or play hockey or collect art treasures. "We tread a very thin line with Snoopy," he says, "between his dog things and his people things."

Woodstock, Schulz admits is something of a bird-brain. But, after all, when you start life on a silver rock 'n roll platter, you're very likely to become dizzy.

ROBBIE RIST is seen as Oliver, a nephew of Carol Brady, who comes for a visit and an indefinite stay in the "Two Petes in a Pod" episode of "The Brady Bunch" on Channels 7 and 11 Friday at 8 p.m. He becomes the first addition to the regular cast in the five-year history of the series.

BRINGS SPORT TO LIFE

Peter Puck Explains Ice Hockey's Rules

"The concept of Peter Puck, our animated hockey puck," says Scotty Connal, executive producer, NBC Sports, "could be a major breakthrough in explaining the rules of all sports."

NBC-TV is using the new cartoon character during its National Hockey League colorcasts to acquaint viewers with the rules and basics of the fastest game on ice.

According to Connal, who considers hockey to be "a game which may look difficult but is really very simple," NBC decided during its 1972-73 season of NHL coverage that "a cartoon approach is a most effective means of educating the average fan, while at the same time appealing to the sophisticated hockey follower."

ART SCOTT, an associate producer for Hanna-Barbera Productions, creators of Peter Puck who have also given life to such well-known cartoon characters as the Flintstones, Huckleberry Hound and Yogi Bear, said this new creation "is our know-it-all guy, our spokesman for the game. He presents hockey in a more interesting fashion, he brings the sport to life."

Connal noted that Peter Puck has, in fact, been conceived as a means of making NBC's explanation of hockey much more interesting.

"The sophisticated hockey viewer," he said, "wouldn't sit still for many more blackboard-type presentations."

"AN ALMOST instant invention of Joe Barbera," according to Scott, Peter Puck is appearing in four different segments, each three-and-a-half to four minutes long, throughout the season. He explains the rules not only between periods of NBC's Game-of-the-Week hockey telecasts, but also on the "Today" program, on affiliated stations and to private groups and hockey clinics, to whom films are being made available.

Scott said that NBC provided the facts broken down into hockey's simplest terms, while Hanna-Barbera was responsible for developing the medium for presentation.

And what better means than utilizing the most necessary ingredient in a sport in which the hockey puck gets battered, slapped around and shot at speeds over 100 miles per hour?

Donahue Career Is Nearing End

Donohue and 11 other internationally-famous drivers will compete in ABC's new series, "World Series of Auto Racing - the International Race of Champions." The three qualifying competitions from Riverside International Raceway in Riverside, Calif., will be televised as part of ABC's new Sunday "Wide World of Sports" series, Sunday, Feb. 3 and Feb. 10.

Story Of How Sony Got Name

When Al Jolson sang "Sonny Boy" more than 40 years ago, he had no way of knowing he was creating an image for a Japanese industrial giant.

According to a report in Electronics magazine, Sony took its name from the melody popularized by the late jazz singer.

The magazine said Akio Morita, president of Sony, chose the name because he was searching for a short word that would sound alike in all languages.

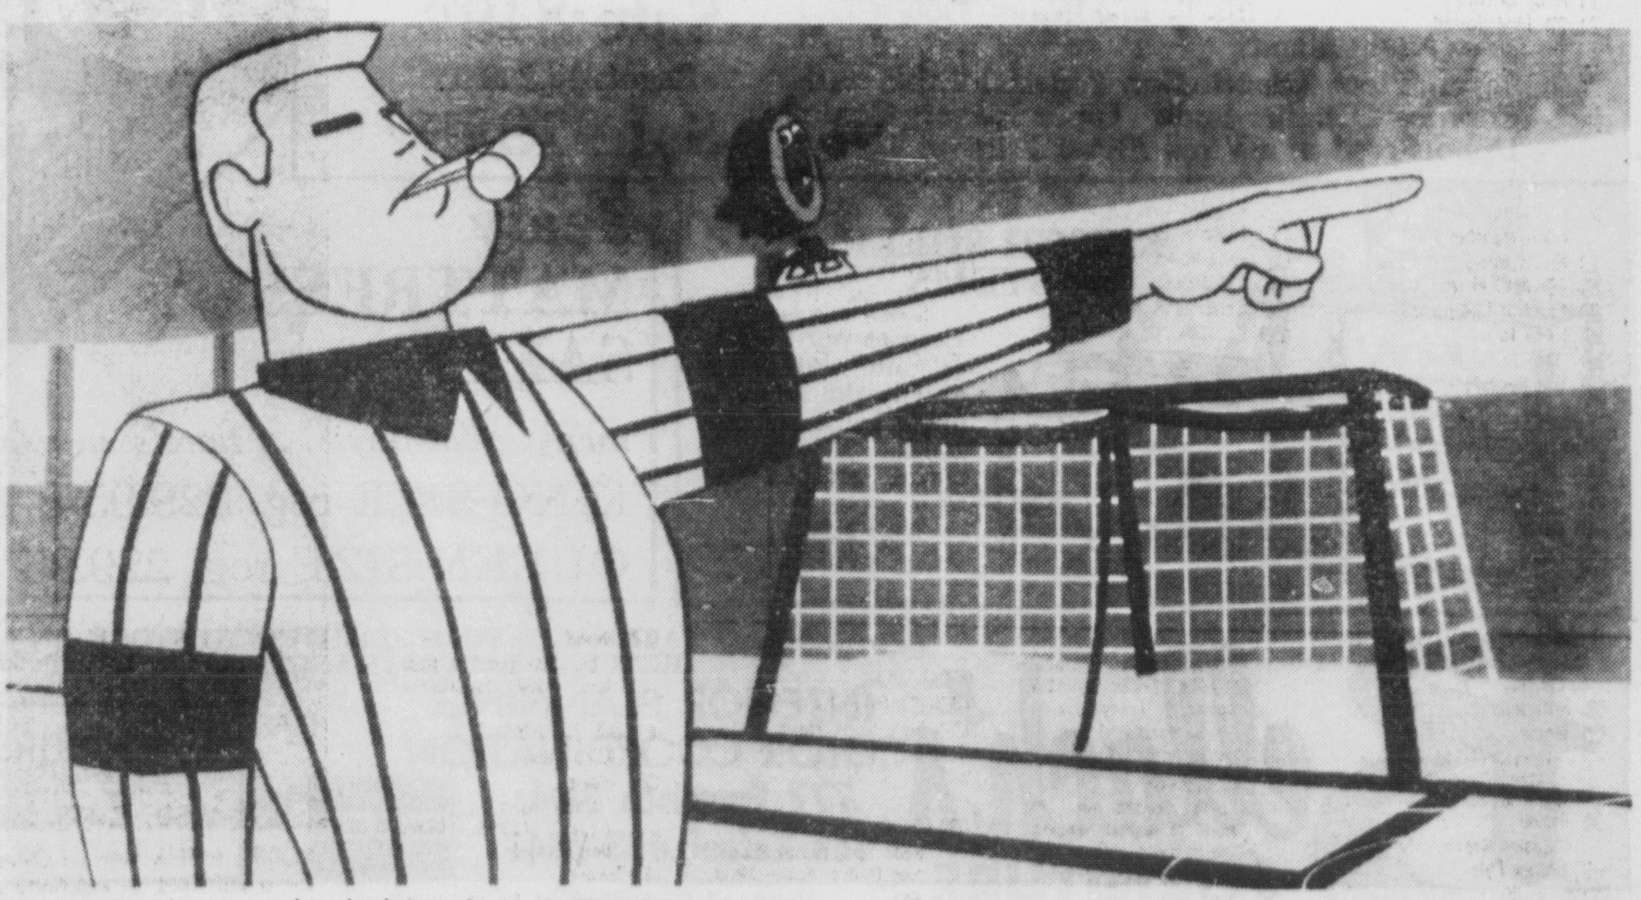

Morito said the company first thought of using three catchy initials but abandoned this strategy because too many other organizations had done so.

"Going to four letters was the next logical step," Morita said.

He said he spent considerable time studying dictionaries for a name that would resemble "sound" or "sonic."

Then he found "Sonny Boy" among some song titles.

This led Morita to pick the name "Sony," because "we were the sonny boys of our industry."

PETER PUCK, the animated ice hockey puck, gives the referee an assist by explaining the rules of the game to viewers of the National Hockey League games being covered by the NBC Television Network. He also appears on the network's "Today" show to expound upon the rink sport.

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR PAUL BROWN, coach of the Cincinnati Bengals

How do you compare O. J. Simpson of the Buffalo Bills and Jimmy Brown, your ex-star with the Cleveland Browns? — David Strong, Austin, Texas

● Jim Brown was a bigger man, a more power-style of runner. O. J. has tremendous speed like Brown, but he's more comparable to ex-Cleveland halfback Bobby Mitchell. The unusual thing about O. J. is his durability. He can run so many times without getting tired. His moves are the thing. Jim Brown had moves, too, but he also had tremendous power. A much faster Franco Harris—that's what Brown used to be.

FOR SEN. HENRY M. JACKSON (D-Wash.)

What about the Navy's petroleum reserves we keep hearing about. Shouldn't we start using them? — K. Esterbrooke, Skokie, Ill.

● I agree, we should use them. The naval petroleum reserves could, within three months, add 160,000 barrels a day to domestic crude-oil production. They have very real potential for lessening U.S. dependence on imported oil. .

FOR SALLY STRUTHERS of "All in the Family"

● No, I have one sister. I always wanted a brother. There was a foster child named Ernie in school and my sister and I just loved him. We kept asking Mom, "Can we own Ernie?" She thought about it, but we couldn't afford Ernie because my mother was really raising us by herself. (My parents separated when I was seven.)

FOR JOHN WAYNE

You were quoted as saying you would not remove your POW bracelet "until the s.o.b. is sitting at my dinner table." Have you had the pleasure of his company yet?—S. Welch, Decatur, Ill.

● I don't remember this quotation, but those words are in my active vocabulary so I may have said it. I'm sorry to say we haven't been able to get one shred of information concerning him.

FOR JOAN BLONDELL

You've starred with some of Hollywood's greatest leading men. Who was your favorite, and did anyone give you trouble?—Grace Johnson, Akron, Ohio

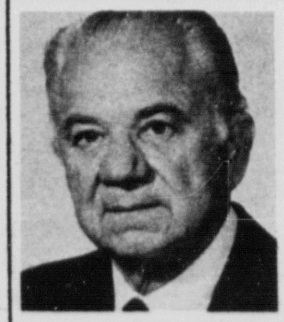

● George Brent was a wonderful comedian! And I think Pat O'Brien, James Cagney, Clark Gable, Errol Flynn and Spencer Tracy were all marvelous. I got along with everyone. If I fight, I'll use my fists on the street. No reason to let anger enter into my work.

FOR JON VOIGHT, actor

You campaigned on behalf of Senator McGovern in 1972. Did you run into the so-called "Dirty Tricks" brigade of the Republican party?—John Morrison, Pittsburgh, Pa.

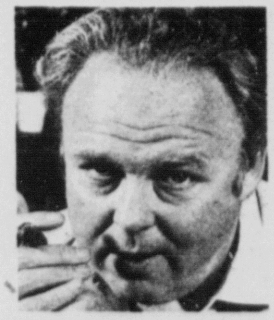

● On two occasions I know of, people who said they represented McGovern phoned local organizations to say I would speak at high schools in their areas. In both cases, a crowd showed up and I didn't because I wasn't scheduled to do so. Of course, I can't prove that these calls came from the Republicans. They could have come from practical jokers.

FOR LEON JAWORSKI, Watergate special prosecutor

Why should President Nixon turn over all of his tape recordings to the court for safekeeping? I understand there are hundreds of them.—M. K. R., Van Nuys, Calif.

● I think that if I were the White House, I would like to see them placed in custody so that there couldn't be anything happening to them. That would be my desire.

FOR CARROLL O'CONNOR

● Not many—only one or two a day.

FOR KENT McCORD, Officer Jim Reed in "Adam-12"

You and Marty Milner are now in your sixth year as policemen on "Adam-12." How have you managed to get along for so long?—B. Z., Elmira, N.Y.

● We decided during the first year that if either of us did something that annoyed the other, the annoyed person would come right out and talk about it. It's like a marriage: Let an argument grow and eventually it will break up a couple. I've practiced this in my own marriage—and maybe that's why I still have a happy one after 11 years.

FOR ANN LANDERS, newspaper columnist

What is the leading problem that your readers write you about? And what advice do you give them?—Robert Barney, San Antonio, Texas

● The problem I hear about most often—and it's the one that has led all others for the 18 years that I've been writing the column — is the man-and-wife problem. Usually the woman writes. It's alcoholism, cheating, gambling, brutality or "his mother." I tell her to ask herself this question: "Would your life be better or worse without him?" Make your decision on this basis. Often the woman writes back and says, "Thanks, Ann. I decided to keep the bum."

Can't Diet or Exercise—Or Break Habits? "Behaviorism" Offers This Key to a New You

By Earl Ubell
Especially for FAMILY WEEKLY

Elizabeth Gee

Earl Ubell lost 25 pounds when he applied the "pigeon principle."

"Then a strange thing happened. I was overweight. I thought of dying. I thought of my father on his deathbed—overweight. Every time I went for the high-calorie food, I saw the picture of my dad."

You want to lose weight and you eat. You want to exercise and you sit. You want to write that report for your boss and you watch television. You want to keep your house neat and you can't get started cleaning. You want to sleep and you lie awake all night.

You want and you can't. You're not alone—millions of men and women are trapped by their killing habits. Take eating. Americans are 15 percent overweight and it is killing us with heart attacks. Yet eating too much is a habit. If you want to live longer you have to change the habit.

Today, psychologists have discovered ways to help you become a master of rather than a slave to your habits. They've taken the ancient Biblical idea of reward and punishment and brought it up to date, made it humane and useful. They use it to change behavior of people suffering from bad habits: nail-biting, bed-wetting, stuttering, fears of flying, elevators or animals, problems of sex and sleep. They call it behavior modification.

The mind scientists have uncovered the laws of reward and punishment, and essentially they are these:

● If you reward a behavior soon after it happens, then the chances are that that particular behavior will happen again. The rewards can be food, praise, money, or even a gold star like the ones we used to get in school.

● If you punish a behavior just before it happens, then the chances are that that behavior will not be repeated. The punishments can be withholding of food, money fines, loss of privilege, or a black X on a chart. Psychologists don't like to use punishment, because although it works to break habits, it makes people angry. The psychologists prefer reward, although they do use punishment sometimes.

Here's how the psychologist stops bed-wetting in a child. First he places a wire-mesh screen under the child before bedtime. If the child wets, the liquid touches the wire and a buzzer goes off, waking the child to remind him to go to the bathroom. The buzzer is enough to stop the bed-wetting after the first few drops of liquid.

In the morning, the mother or father praises the child for going to the bathroom. If the parents are consistent in their praise (ignoring the "accidents"), the habit will be broken. The reward after success is the parents' praise. The buzzer is a mild punishment.

Almost 40 years ago, Dr. B. F. Skinner, a psychologist at Harvard, gave the behavior modification idea a great push forward with his experiments with pigeons. By rewarding them with food, Dr. Skinner got the birds to do marvelous things. During World War II, there was a serious plan to use Skinner-trained pigeons as bombardiers. But electronics proved to be a little more efficient.

You can apply the pigeon principles to your own habits. I did. I lost nearly 25 pounds some years ago by changing my eating habits. I discovered how to do it by accident, as many have, but science today shows how to use behavior modification on purpose.

In 1948, my father died of a heart attack at the age of 44. Like so many Americans, he was 40 pounds overweight and he ate rich, fatty foods that sent his cholesterol skyrocketing. He died in the epidemic that is killing almost a million men and women years before their time. At the hospital, the attendant, thinking he was doing me a favor, asked me if I wanted to look at my father on his deathbed. I did. I'll never forget that poor, shriveled face, still gaunt with the last pain.

About seven years later, I went on a diet to lose weight. On my forbidden list: corned beef, hamburger, hot dogs, ice cream, pie, cake. But I couldn't stop eating them. I was addicted. Then a strange thing happened. I was overweight. I thought of dying. I thought of my father on his deathbed—overweight. Every time I went for the high-calorie food, I saw the picture of my dad. I turned away from the hamburger. I switched to a salad. Triumphant, I thought of a pleasant scene: walking hand in hand with my wife. It happened day after day; and week after week I lost weight.

Today I know I used my father's death scene to punish myself before I could eat the forbidden food. And the pleasant scene of my wife and me after taking the salad encouraged the repetition of a good habit.

Here's what you do to diet. First make a list of foods you want to avoid and of the eating behavior you want to change: taking second portions, eating between meals, eating while watching television, etc. Next, prepare some ugly scene: your own death, for example, or being so fat you can't go through a doorway—whatever scene is strong enough to stop the eating behavior. My wife has an image of a very fat woman in a shiny green dress.

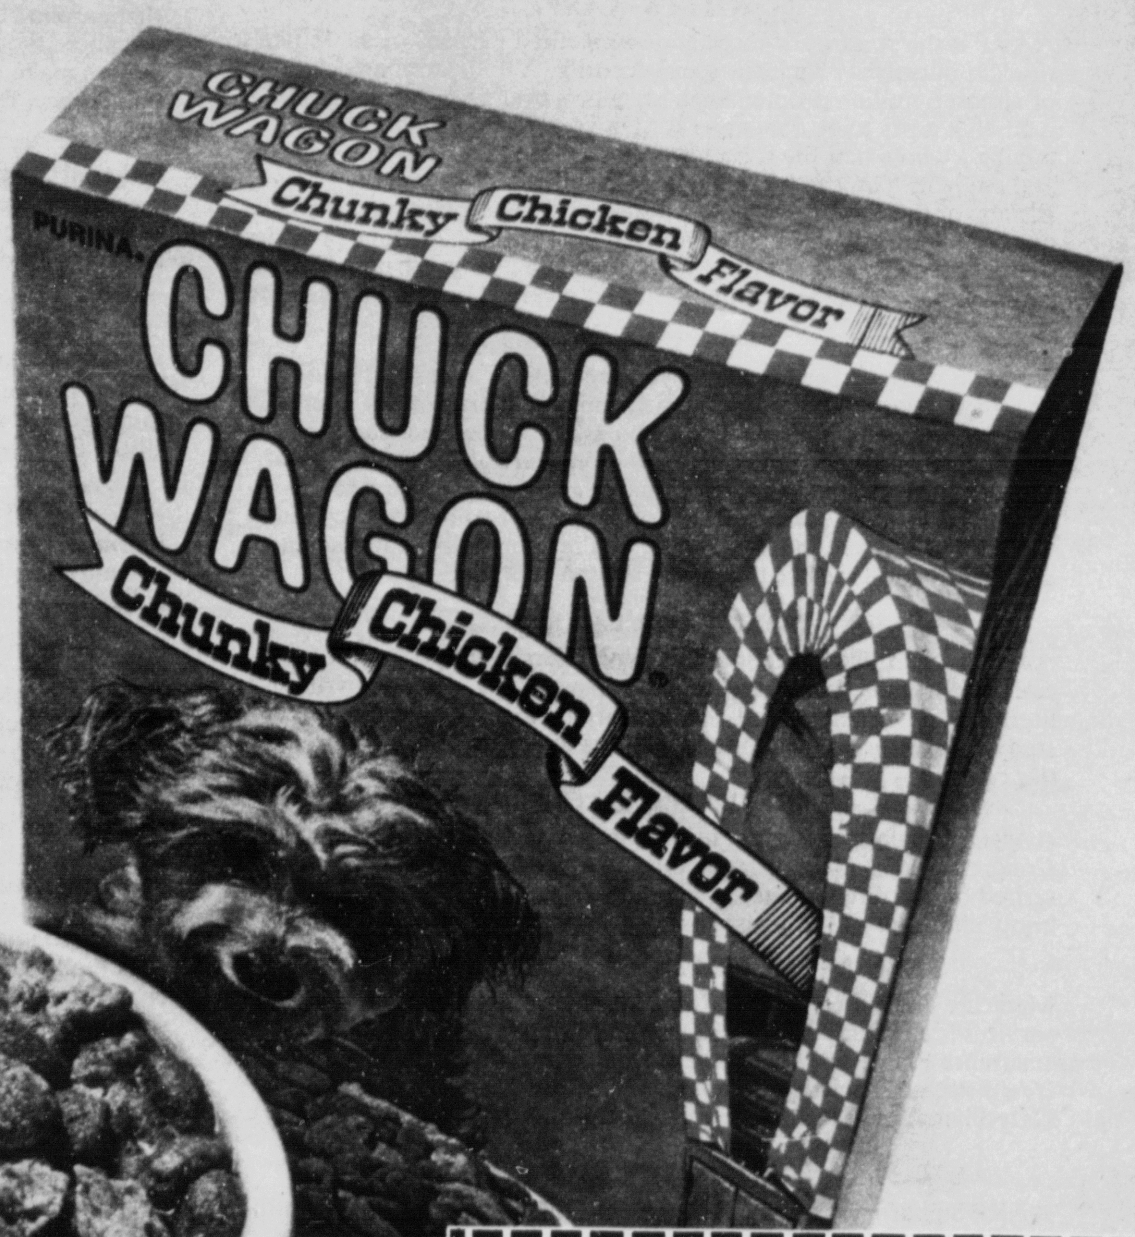

Then you need a pleasant thought for a reward.

From then on, when you are confronted with that second portion, or eating at night, or ice cream or some forbidden food, you turn on the ugly

"When we found out what AARP does for people over 55, my wife didn't mind telling her age."

"After a friend of ours told us about the American Association of Retired Persons, I said to my wife, 'Irma, Everybody's having fun but us. Lots of people out there are having a marvelous time and we're sitting home counting the years.' So I picked myself right up and filled out an AARP coupon just like the one on this page. I want to tell you it was the best thing we ever did."

Irma and Peter McNulty

WHAT'S AARP?

AARP is the American Association of Retired Persons or as we like to think of ourselves—The new social security. A non-profit association of almost 6 million people. Anybody who's over 55 can belong. And all it costs to be a member is $2 a year. Which is almost like buying a whole new life for a few cents a week. You can stay home and enjoy it. You can be rich. Poor. Healthy. Not so healthy. It's one of the few organizations in the world that offers you the opportunity to give so much of yourself, and at the same time provides so many benefits and services. Simply because its one purpose is to help you continue to feel vital, important and involved in every part of life.

WHAT YOU GET

To begin with, you can continue your education. You can fill your leisure time with hundreds of new meaningful activities. At home. Or outside. You can get help in finding part-time work. Be assured of reasonable prices on medicines, travel, on many of the necessities of life including health insurance. You can meet new people. Make your voice heard in government. You'll receive two fine publications written just for you. In other words, you're going to have fun again and find that life is more than just a way to pass time.

DON'T STOP LEARNING

AARP's Institute of Lifetime Learning offers a full program of education courses in music appreciation, psychology, creative writing, literature, government, and a variety of other subjects. There are home study courses or you can attend lectures at regional centers around the country.

BE REPRESENTED IN GOVERNMENT

AARP's legislative program represents you in your state legislature and Congress. Its 33-point program is a Bill of Rights to all older persons retired or not. We let you know what's happening. So that you can know about all of the legislation put through on your behalf.

FEEL BETTER WITH HEALTH INSURANCE

Medicare doesn't cover everything. So one of AARP's most important services is eligibility for special supplementary Group Health Insurance Plans. They help you to pay for the best medical and surgical treatment, and include a unique Nursing Home and Home-Nursing Care Plan. You'll feel better just having this kind of protection.

PHARMACY SERVICE

AARP'S pharmacy service makes it convenient for the almost 6 million AARP members to receive pharmaceutical, prescription medicines and supplies.

GO PLACES

Where would you like to travel? Around the world? Across the country? AARP's travel service can help you do it. You can choose from a wide variety of quality tours and cruises, ranging from luxury to economy, most of them escorted by experienced tour directors. The world is there. All you have to do is go into it.

FEEL LIKE WORKING?

Just because you're retired doesn't mean you can't work. Mature Temps, an AARP recommended service, may be able to help you supplement your retirement income with part-time or temporary employment. There are offices in a number of major metropolitan areas across the country. Just call. Their service is free.

PARTICIPATE IN CHAPTER ACTIVITIES

Chances are there's an AARP Chapter near you. (There are 1500 of them around the United States). If you'd like to go to a meeting and find out about the inside workings of AARP, just come on over. It's a great way to make our association grow stronger and a fine opportunity for you to meet dozens of vital people your own age.

WANT TO GET INVOLVED?

At Local Chapters you'll have the opportunity to find out about community services in which you can lend a helping hand. You can learn more about the Defensive Driving Courses, the Consumer Information Desk or participate in the Tax Aide Program. Or just meet new friends.

NEED ADVICE?

AARP provides its members with a series of booklets that guide retired people through areas of particular concern. They cover everything from how to get personal help, to health advice, moving, diet, and all the little problems that trouble you from time to time.

WORRIED ABOUT AUTO INSURANCE*?

If you're an AARP member, you will receive information about how you may be able to actually save money on your auto insurance with a policy that has guaranteed renewable and limited-cancellation features.

LIKE TO READ?

When you join AARP you automatically receive subscriptions to AARP's official publications, Modern Maturity and the AARP News Bulletin, two publications filled with news and features of special interest to you.

Your annual membership dues of $2 help cover the cost of these publications, which means for as long as you're a member of AARP your magazines will keep coming.

There's so much more to AARP than we have room to tell you here. And really, the best way to find out is to join. The coupon below will enroll you so that you can take advantage of all the AARP benefits and services. There's only one requirement. You have to be 55 or over. thought. The behavior stops before it starts. You switch to something low calorie: a glass of water is fine. You think the pleasant thought. Fairly soon you will find your addiction to sweet, fatty foods going down, and you will be losing weight.

You can also apply behavior modification to getting started on an exercise program. It's a fact that every time people enroll in a voluntary exercise program, 50 percent or more drop out within a few weeks. Only a fraction continue for life. Behavior modification tells why they drop out. Most exercise programs are painful, especially at the start. Pain is punishment. You cannot make a habit out of a behavior if you are punished for doing it.

If you want to make a habit out of exercise, you have to do it so that it doesn't hurt, at least at first. Suppose you want to start a jogging program (or it could be walking, cycling, rowing, swimming—anything that will give your heart and lungs a workout). Set aside the same time every day, and follow the rules:

First day: Jog easily until you are uncomfortable. If anything hurts, STOP. Walk back home. Suppose you jogged only 50 yards. Fine. Mark your calendar for the day: 50 yards.

Second day: Jog easily 53 yards. You can estimate that by counting the number of times your left foot hits the ground. If you begin hurting before 53 yards, STOP.

And so you go, day by day, never going past pain or discomfort, adding just a few yards each day and marking your calendar. If you increase the distance only three yards a day, at the end of a year you'll be jogging half a mile. Actually, you'll discover that things will speed up and you'll be going a couple of miles in a few months. But don't press it. Make it a habit and it will last your lifetime.

There is no end to the usefulness of making and breaking habits. Suppose you want to learn to clean up a messy room. First write down the steps: 1) Pick up papers. 2) Pick up clothing. 3) Put clothing away. 4) Make the bed. 5) Sweep the floor. 6) Empty wastebaskets. 7) Wash windows, etc.

Next, figure out a reward. It could be a cup of hot coffee or a cold drink (watch out for calories!). Immediately after completing a job on your list, take a sip of the drink; not a gulp, just a sip. You'll find the job fly by—and you'll have a habit of cleaning if you do it a few times.

Even reading can be helped. Use the Thermos trick. Every time you finish a page, take a sip. Soon reading itself will be rewarding. If you want to speed up, use a stopwatch and reward yourself each time you read one page faster than the preceding one. You'll find yourself reading faster.

Behavior modification can be used to give you a good and long life. It's not easy. It does take a long time, longer than most of the fad tricks that offer to make you slimmer, stronger and sexier. But science has shown that it does work best of any method for changing habits. If you use it you can save your life for creative and pleasurable days ahead. FW

Can You Make Money Collecting Rare Plates?

Will this plate multiply in value to 10, 15 or even 20 times its original price as other fine art plates have done?

A successful art dealer in a Chicago suburb has announced a new, easy way to start collecting rare porcelain plates with the potential to become heirlooms of the future with exceptionally high resale value.

According to Thomas Gilmore II, president of this dealership, one decorative "annual" plate priced at $25 in 1965 now brings $1,050, and one china plate selling at $10 in 1969 now sells for $245. In the past only a few fortunate people could afford to collect works of art, but now literally thousands of collectors with only average incomes enjoy this fascinating hobby for pleasure and profit.

Mr. Gilmore says, "Since many plates do not increase in value, amateurs often make serious mistakes. It's critical to know what to look for, what to pay, when to sell, and much more." Even if you have never collected plates before, there are little-known guidelines that tell you how to own plates of the finest porcelain designed by a distinguished artist for a modest outlay of money.

To help you get started in the rewarding hobby of plate collecting, the dealer now offers a new free report just off the press. It tells you how to look for good design, rarity, historic importance, and other important clues to selecting beautiful art plates that could grow in value in the years ahead.

This free report is available to Family Weekly readers who wish to own beautiful handcrafted plates produced in America and abroad. It tells how you can be one of the first to own a stunning porcelain made in France for a surprisingly low price and lists other selections that could become tomorrow's treasured heirlooms.

If you seek a new hobby that could lead to extra spare-time income, here's your opportunity to find out about the wonderful world of collecting objects d'art. The dealer invites individuals (not dealers) to send for a free copy of this valuable and interesting report.

To get yours, just send your name, address, and zip code to Thomas Gilmore, Bradford Galleries, 1004 Sunset Ridge, Northbrook, Illinois 60062. A postcard will do. There is no obligation for this service. Because of limited quantities, please mail your request by March 1, 1974, to receive your free copy.

TIPS FOR BUDGET SHOPPERS

Prices on even the so-called "lower" priced foods vary from time to time and from store to store. Some practical suggestions:

- Buy foods at special or sale price, freezing where suitable and storing for later use.
- Take advantage of coupons; note individual store manager's specials on meat, poultry and seafood.
- Near closing time, especially over a weekend, many supermarkets sell bakery goods and seafood at half price.
- Keep a file, scrapbook or bulletin board of low-cost recipes that your own family likes or you think they'd like to try.

"I've Come a Long Way Since

"I flew in on a plane and had the turkey and ham strapped in like passengers behind me. I also brought along several bottles of 1949 Lafitte Rothschild.... It was a little slippery, so when I got off the plane I told my friends, 'Listen, don't worry about me or the ham or the turkey. But save the wine!'"

I've always had a tendency to overeat. I grew up in the tradition of an old Irish family, where they had potatoes at every meal, and pork chops and gravy for breakfast! My grandmother never heard of cereals. She was a great cook! I still remember her house. Every morning I'd wake up around 5:30 or 6:00 and hear the sound of her old-fashioned washing machine as it churned and shook the whole house. And then I'd smell her bread baking in the oven. I tell you, I was shot down before I even got out of bed!

Many people question me about the source of my great energy. I really don't know what it is. I've always had a drive, even when I was a kid. I was the first kid in my neighborhood to sell the "Saturday Evening Post" and win a bike. Later I had a paper route and sold lemonade on the street corner. I was always doing some darn thing. Even when I was in the service as a fighter pilot, I ran the bingo games on Wednesday nights and was the announcer for every sporting event.

I like relaxed living. I love to get my friends together and socialize. Usually it's an evening of dinner with just the right people around, no more than four or six. We never sit formally at the table.

I think the secret of cooking is constant attention. Even if I'm only making scrambled eggs and cheese, I never leave the pan. I time it so everything is done at the same time. The bacon is cooked and kept warm and dry, and the toast is all ready.

Last New Year's I was invited to visit some friends in Aspen, Colo. I arrived with a turkey and a ham already cooked. I flew in on a plane and had the turkey and ham strapped in like passengers behind me. I also brought along several bottles of 1949 Lafitte Rothschild, strapped in beside me. It was a little slippery, so when I got off the plane I told my friends, "Listen, don't worry about me or the ham or the turkey. But save the wine!"

BAKED HAM GRAND MARNIER

Lemon or orange marmalade
1 teaspoon finely grated lemon rind
1 cup (about) Grand Marnier or Cointreau

2. Blend marmalade and lemon rind. Spread liberally over top and sides of ham.

3. Bake in preheated 275° F. oven, roasting according to instructions on ham. During last hour, brush Grand Marnier over ham. Underbake ham rather than overbake it.

4. Remove to heated platter to serve. Let it stand 10 minutes before carving, or allow to cool, refrigerate and serve cold.

COOKBOOK

Discover the Soybean

IS THERE A SOYBEAN IN YOUR FUTURE?

Soybeans are a great source of protein—almost as good as meat, eggs, milk and cheese. Soybeans have been eaten in China for at least 4,000 years, but several new soybean-based food products are now making an appearance in the U.S.

In some supermarkets—Red Owl (Minneapolis), Kroger, I.G.A., Super Value and Publix Markets, to name a few—ground meat is sold with a textured soy product already added. It sells at 16 to 20 cents a pound less than regular ground meat. Soy products that can be added to ground meat are also available.

Another way soybeans are used today is in "analogs," which are made to look and taste like meat, fish and poultry. Science has also come up with soy sausages, ham and meatballs that contain no meat, no cholesterol, no animal fat and have good flavor and fair-to-good texture or "mouth feel."

HOW TO COOK SOYBEANS

2 cups soybeans, rinsed
¼ cup vegetable oil
1 tablespoon salt
Water
½ cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped celery

1. Combine soybeans with oil, salt and enough water to cover. Soak overnight in refrigerator.
2. Next day, drain and discard liquid. Cook in either of following ways.
3. Regular Method: Turn soybeans into large 3-4-qt. saucepan. Add 2 qts. water, onion and celery. Bring to boiling. Cover; reduce heat and simmer for 2½-2¾ hours, until soybeans are tender.
4. Drain. Use soybeans as is or in recipes; use liquid in soups.
5. Pressure Cooker: Turn soybeans into pressure cooker; add water to cover beans well. Allow 1 qt. water in 4-qt. pressure cooker. Do not fill cooker over half full.
6. Close cover, heat pressure cooker. When regulator rocks steadily and air vent is up, start timing. Cook 30 minutes. Remove from heat, let pressure drop of its own accord.

Makes about 5 cups soybeans

SOY PLUS BURGERS

1 envelope (1.65 ozs.) textured soy protein
⅔ cup water
1 egg
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
1½ teaspoons salt
1 lb. ground beef

1. Pour textured soy protein granules and water into medium bowl, mix. Let soak for 5 minutes, stir.
2. Add remaining ingredients; mix well.
3. Shape into 5-6 burgers. Fry or broil as you would any burger; medium-rare produces the juiciest burger.

Makes 5-6 servings

PRESSURE-COOKER SOYBEAN CHILI CON CARNE

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 lb. ground beef
½ cup water
4 cups cooked soybeans
2 cans (1-lb. size) stewed tomatoes
1½ cups chopped onion
1 tablespoon chopped garlic
4 teaspoons chili powder
1½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon cumin seed, optional
2 cans (1-lb. size) kidney beans, undrained

1. Heat pressure cooker. Add oil; brown beef. Stir in remaining ingredients, except kidney beans. Close cover securely.
2. Heat pressure cooker. When pressure regulator begins to rock gently and plunger in automatic air vent is up, pressure is correct. Reduce heat to maintain a slow, steady motion of pressure regulator. Start timing at this point. Cook 10 minutes.
3. When time is up, let pressure drop of its own accord. Stir in kidney beans. Correct seasoning.

There are a lot of people in the world who don't smoke.

But since a lot of people who don't smoke know a lot of people who do, you might tell some of them about Vantage.

You could tell them that if they really enjoy the taste of their present cigarette but are concerned about the 'tar' and nicotine, they should understand that where there is taste there is smoke and where there is smoke there has to be some 'tar' and some nicotine.

You could also tell them that the thing that makes Vantage so special is that its filter is based on an innovative design concept that gives smokers flavor like a full-flavor cigarette without anywhere near the 'tar' or the nicotine.

Then you could let them know that while Vantage isn't the lowest 'tar' and nicotine cigarette they can buy, it is the lowest one they'll really enjoy.

Because when people have to work so hard sucking smoke through a cigarette, they probably won't like it, and won't smoke it.

Thanks.

People Quiz

By John E. Gibson

The Age-Old Question... Which Sex Is Superior?

True or False: Differences in men and women—in the way they think, feel and react—are principally due to environment and upbringing. (See number 5)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. Women are biologically superior to men.
2. Women cry for different reasons than men do.
3. Men are rated higher than women for given levels of accomplishment.
4. Women are more willing than men to admit unacceptable impulses.
5. Differences in men and women—in the way they think, feel and react—are principally due to environment and upbringing.

ANSWERS

1. True—according to a study conducted by Dr. William F. Frye, Jr., of Stanford University Medical School, which evaluates the findings of leading researches thusly: "Men are biologically inferior to women in several rather crucial areas." First, of course, is the fact that man doesn't live as long as woman. But there's also the fact that girls mature earlier than boys, mentally as well as physically; that more boys than girls fail to survive the first three years of life; that men are more subject than women to a long list of ailments and afflictions. It's further observed that the off-color jokes men tell about sex often reveal "anxiety about the general presence of these biological disadvantages or frailities."

2. True. In a psychological study of equal numbers of men and women of various ages, in which each person was given a confidential questionnaire interview, the way people cry was broken down into four classifications in order of increasing intensity: "Lump in the throat, watery eyes (without flow of tears), flowing tears, and sobbing." No appreciable difference was found between the sexes in the lump-in-the-throat category, but men experienced watery eyes to a significantly greater extent than women. The women, however, were more than twice as subject to flowing tears and sobbing. Furthermore, investigation shows that men are far more likely to weep when overjoyed by a circumstance involving strong emotional feelings than women are. But far more women than men wept "when the prevailing state was anguish."

3. True—with certain qualifications—as evidenced by a Purdue University study of the ratings given men's and women's accomplishments in terms of competence and intelligence. Results: "Highly competent males were rated more positively than highly competent females." However, women got a break in the opposite direction, with males of low competence being rated lower than similar females.

4. False. Psychological studies have shown that women tend to deny unacceptable impulses, while men are more inclined to admit desires and inclinations that are generally looked at askance by society. Women, it would seem, feel a greater necessity to avoid admissions that might be frowned upon by others.

5. False—according to University of California studies of developmental differences between men and women. It's concluded that hormones instill different characteristics into male and female brains; thus certain behavioral differences between the sexes have a genetic rather than an environmental origin. And findings cited in a National Institute of Mental Health study bear out the fact that men's and women's brains very definitely differ. It's further pointed out that from birth, females are more sensitive to stimulation, and are more sensitively attuned to influences of body states upon existence.

How to keep your money from being MURDERED!

by Gary Halbert

© 1974 Good News Publishing Co.

If you are lucky enough to have any money set aside for a rainy day and you're keeping it in a savings account, you are really loosing money hand over fist.

Your money is probably earning about 5¼ per cent interest. Since inflation is averaging 8 per cent to 10 per cent a year, you are not even breaking even. And the way things are going this year it can only get worse.

Do you realize that you have to spend $1.49 to buy as much steak as you could buy for a dollar only a few months ago?

If you have any money invested in the stock market, you are really asking for it. Eighteen months ago Winnebago was considered one of the safest of the blue chip stocks on the New York Stock Exchange. A thousand dollars invested in this "safe" stock only a year and a half ago, as of this writing, would have shrunk to $145.00. And hundreds of stocks have done even worse.

What about U.S. Savings Bonds? As an investment they are really a joke. Ten years ago if you had invested $1,000.00 of your hard earned money in series "E" government bonds you would have by now earned only $7.44 a year in purchasing power.

Well, how about keeping your money hidden in an old sock under the mattress? Had you tucked away a thousand dollars in this manner in 1957, by now your purchasing power would have dropped a full 40 per cent. Are things about to get better?

No way.

The year 1974 promises to produce the highest inflation rate in the last 22 years. Prices, as you may have noticed, are going no where but up. Some, like meat and gasoline are going right out of sight. The plain fact is that your money is in more danger right now that at anytime since 1929.

Is there a way out? Is there any place at all to put your money where it is safe? Where will it earn enough interest to keep ahead of inflation? Where you can get at it instantly in case of an emergency? Is there?

You bet there is!

The answer is going to surprise you. The best place to keep your money is probably the same place you are keeping it now. In your bank in a savings account. You've got to start doing things a little differently, however.

Here is just one of the things you can do if you know how. You can go to your bank, take out your savings, fill out a new deposit ticket, put the money right back into another savings account and increase the interest on your savings from 6 to 15 per cent. All in one day! Hard to believe isn't it? But this is just the beginning.

- When you open a new account you can get ten bank gifts instead of one.
- You can withdraw your money and still earn interest on it.
- You can have two savings accounts paying you interest at the same time on the same money.
- You can earn interest on money you have spent months ago.
- You can earn more money on your checking account than most people earn on their savings accounts.
- You can earn interest on the money other people have on deposit.

All of this is perfectly legal. Everything you will be doing is not only permitted but actually encouraged by banks and other financial institutions because the more money you make the more money they make. In fact, they use these techniques themselves. And during all this, your money will be insured 100 per cent by the U.S. Government. All of this is carefully explained in a new book titled, "How to Rob a Bank Without a Gun."

The book was written by an Ohio school teacher named George Jenney as part of a research project for a publishing company. The book is easy-to-read, easy-to-understand, and can lead you step-by-step to a new financial independence. The book is not now available at book stores or newsstands.

You can get a copy if you hurry by sending your name and address and $6.95 in cash, check, or money order payable to The Good News Publishing Co., Dept. No. 1017, 7576 Freedom Ave., N.W., North Canton, Ohio 44720.

The book will be sent to you promptly by return mail. The publisher guarantees that this book will show you how to at least double the earning power of your money.

If not, or for any reason you are dissatisfied, you can return the book for a full and immediate refund of your entire purchase price. You can't lose.

Send for the book today. Remember, now more than ever you have a real money fight on your hands and it is only going to get worse.

Here is a chance to put the odds on your side.

PRACTICAL PRINCESS
A nursing career

Fairy tales can come true: While Princess Anne is taking high hurdles in horse shows all around the world, Princess Marie Astrid of Luxembourg is attending nursing school at the Clinique de Sacre Coeur. Does this mean princesses are becoming more liberated? Perhaps—but if not, they are certainly becoming less sheltered. Princess Marie Astrid, 19, the eldest of five children of Grand Duke Jean and his wife Princess Josephine-Charlotte of Belgium, will graduate from her three-year nursing course this year.

Ever heard of a "grass roots" hospital? The concept, a relatively new one, brings medical care to suburbanites or small-town dwellers through investor-owned hospitals that don't require public funds. Humana Inc., one of the major companies in this field, currently operates 49 hospitals around the country. Because they're businesses rather than nonprofit organizations, they have to try harder. At least, that's the hope. Their equipment is reportedly more up to date, their facilities are more modern and they don't cost the taxpayers anything. Essentially what this means is that you will no longer have to travel long distances or undergo lengthy bureaucratic briefings in large, urban hospitals before getting treatment.

"ODD JOB" SPEAKS
Evil is only skin deep

Remember this distinguished face? It's "Odd Job," lethal henchman in the James Bond thriller, "Goldfinger"; it's also the home-wrecking cougher in the celebrated cough-syrup commercials. Owner of this face is Harold Sakata, part-time actor/wrestler/real estate developer, and a former weight-lifting silver medalist in the 1948 Olympics. "Ahhh!" says Sakata in his soft, accented voice, "the people see me and say, 'Odd Job. How cruel and evil he looks.' That is because they don't know the real me. The real me is a quiet, somewhat shy guy. A humble guy. This is a throwback to my boyhood, when I was small and puny and unsure of myself." Harold smiles self-effacingly. "It is hard for a man to turn away from a fight. That is why you go to the mountaintop, to meditate and discipline yourself. With this kind of philosophy you will not do things you are sorry for." So speaks the gentle Sakata. Anybody want to argue?

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

GOLDEN TRASHERY

"He who steals my purse steals trash. . . ."
I'd call that statement rather rash,
At least applied to purse or wallet,
Whatever you prefer to call it,
Containing driver's license, which When lost makes moods as black as pitch,
And credit cards affording surety,
And memberships, Social Security,
As well as snapshots irreplaceable
Of child or grandchild, hardly faceable.
Who steals my purse affects my life.
I'd just as soon they'd steal my wife.
(Assuming, once I felt the lack,
They'd very kindly bring her back.)

It's getting harder and harder to support the Government in the style to which it has become accustomed.

It wasn't too long ago that the highway people of a certain state found that all the lights on a stretch of interstate were too low, so the state let a million-dollar contract to raise them. When a taxpayer complained, he got this answer: "You better be glad they're just raising the lights. If the Federal Government had its way, they'd lower the highway."
—Dan Bennett

My wife and I had been expecting our fifth child and were treating her pregnancy pretty casually. That is until our oldest daughter asked, "Mom, won't the baby get a headache?" "Why?" we asked, and she answered, "Cause when you eat, the food hits him on the head."

Over the fireplace in the Beverly Hills home of Fred Astaire is a yellowed MGM interoffice memorandum that is a souvenir of the famed dancer's first screen test.
